This is exactly what happened to some giant S&amp;P 500 stocks in 2020.DEEP DIVE During the March stock market slump, it may be difficult for you to expect 2020 to end up being a good year for stocks, but incredibly low interest rates from the Federal Reserve, unprecedented federal spending to support the economy and investors enthusiasm for technology stocks did just that. Wall Street has mixed feelings about penny stocks. These tickers changing hands for less than $5 a share either draw investors with their high return potential or send runs up the hill, but why? When we say high return potential, we don't exaggerate. Bargain price points allow investors to acquire more shares than is possible when investing in other better-known names. What's more, even what feels like trivial stock price appreciation can translate into massive percentage gains. That said, there is a legitimate reason why some investors are cautious when it comes to penny stocks. The risk associated with these games terrifies the faint of heart as very real problems such as weak fundamentals or overwhelming backwinds could be masked by low stock prices. So how should investors approach a potential investment in penny stocks? By taking a cue from the community of analysts. experts bring a deep knowledge of the sectors that cover considerable experience on the table. With this in mind, we used the TipRanks database to find two compelling penny stocks, according to Wall Street analysts. Both tickers boast Strong Buy consensus ratings and plenty of upside potential. Matinas BioPharma (MTNB) Using its Lipid Nanoc crystal platform (LNC), Matinas BioPharma hopes to solve complex problems related to the oral delivery of small molecules, gene therapy, vaccines, proteins and peptides. Currently going for $0.87 apiece, several street members believe its share price represents an attractive entry point. Writing for BTIG, 5-star analyst Robert Hazlett points to THE MAT2203 as a key part of his bullish work. The therapy was designed as a liposomal nanocirc (LNC) version of the broad-spectrum anti-fungal amfotericin B, which allows oral administration of the drug. Ahead of the Phase 2 EnACT study, which evaluates a candidate for cryptococcal meningitis, with cohort 2 enrollment due to begin in the near future and additional DSMB data expected in mid-2021, Hazlett points out that this is the first of potentially several indications with a new antimycotic . Explaining his optimism about the therapy, Hazlett said: 'The independent DSMB recommended switching to a second cohort of patients at EnACT, which is a validation event for MAT2203, because progression through cohorts is evaluated according to the rate of clearance of fungal forms of CSF and the absence of rebound of fungal count and progression through enact cohorts therefore signals the activity of MAT2203 and its successful crossing of the blood barrier (BBB) to maintain a reduced number of fungi in the CSF. In addition, the minutes for ENHANCE-IT, head-to-head study MAT9001 compared to Amarin's Vascepa, were completed. MAT9001's MTNB is a free fatty acid formulation of EPA and DPA, and according to Hazlett, generates significantly higher levels of EPA in the blood than Vascepa.If that wasn't enough, the company recently announced a collaboration with NIAID to study liposomal nanocrystal (LNC) formulations of Gilead's remdesivir, for oral formulations of COVID-19 therapy. We believe this collaboration further confirms Matinas' LNC technology, Hazlett noted. In keeping with its bullish stance, Hazlett rates MTNB Buy, and its $5 price target means room for a staggering 474% upside potential over the next 12 months. (To watch Hazlett's record, click here) As for now to the rest of the street, other analysts echo Hazlett's sentiment. As only Buy recommendations have been published in the last three months, MTNB is gaining a strong Buy analyst consensus. With the average price target climbing to $4, stocks could rise 359% from current levels. (See MTNB stock analysis on TipRanks) Equillium (EQ)Using a thorough understanding of the And its role in the disease, Equillium develops innovative therapies for severe autoimmune and inflammatory disorders. With the stock trading at $4.25, some analysts think now is the time to pull the trigger. After a day of analysts at the company highlighting its clinical programs for anti-CD6 monoclonal antibodies to itolizumab, Leerink analyst Thomas Smith remains optimistic about its long-term growth prospects. During this event, EQ published individual patient responses along with biomarker analyses that came to the heels of recent positive provisional data from the first three Phase 1b EQUATE cohorts that examined itolizumab in acute graft against host disease (aGVHD). Going forward, the company wants to expand the dose in cohorts 2 and 3 by enrolling three additional patients in each cohort, with the top line results from the study expected in 1H21. Looking at initial data from the Phase 1b EQUATE study, it showed rapid, deep and sustained responses to itolizumab in aGVHD, in Smith's opinion. For updated data, at all doses 57, the overall response rate was 80% (ORR), with 8 out of 10 patients reaching full response (CR). What's more, therapy has also been tied to the ability to narrow and dose to reduce systemic steroid use in patients. These results were consistent with data on biomarkers showing that itolizumab rapidly reduced cd6 expression on CD4 and CD8 T cells. We believe these results are compelling and support EQ's plans to expand dosage to other GVHD patients at 0.8mg/kg and 1.6mg/kg dose levels, Smith explained. If that wasn't enough, EQ presented preclinical and translational research supporting the Phase 1b EQUALISE study for itolizumab in systemic lupus erythematosus (SLE) and lupus nephritis (LN), and Smith expects the top line results in SLE to come in 1Q21 and interim results in LN in 2H21. To this end, Smith rates EQ and Buy along with a price target of $18. If this target is met in the coming year, investors could make a profit of ~328%. (To watch Smith's record, click here) What does the rest of the Street say? 3 Purchases and none holds or sells add up to a strong Buy Consensus rating. Given the average price target of $15, the stock could rise 328% next year. (Bloomberg) - Sheila Patel, chairman of Goldman Sachs Group Inc.'s asset management unit, is leaving the $1.8 trillion division after nearly two decades at the company. Patel, 51, is among the company's most senior women and shepherded some of Goldman's highest-profile relationships with investors around the world. She will step down from the partnership and become an advisory director in the new year, Chief Executive David Solomon said in a report to employees Monday. Sheila has contributed to our culture, including by serving as a mentor to many Goldman Sachs professionals around the world, Solomon said in a memo. I look forward to benefiting from her continued legal counsel. Patel to the top of Goldman in 2006, when she was appointed a partner within three years of joining the company. It is part of the Bank's Steering Committee in Europe and oversees fast-growing areas of environment, social and governance and impact investing. Prior to joining the asset management department, she worked in various roles in the stock division, including co-head of distribution in Asia and head of derivatives sales in the US. Goldman's partnership ranks are shrinking, with a number of long-time executives leaving in recent years. This year, the company added the smallest number of partners since 1998, a move that can cut costs because the elite ranking tends to come with significant benefits. The Asset Management Department is also facing huge changes. Tim O'Neill, a key division leader since 2008 and a partner since 1990 who helped transform the business into a juggernaut, has been moved to a leadership advisory role in recent months, while Eric Lane and Julian Salisbury have been assigned to co-head of asset management as it adds more weight to business banking capabilities. The bank is trying to strengthen its presence in private fundraising. Meanwhile, business leaders including quantitative investing co-head Gary and Kane Brennan, who oversaw the company that worked with pension funds, announced his departures from mid-2019. Patel was promoted to the company's board of directors in 2018 as part of Solomon's first major personnel moves after she was appointed CEO, increasing the number of women on the company's top management bodies. Julian Emanuel, BTIG's chief equity and derivatives strategist, explained to CNBC in an interview why the stock market is inflating to bubble levels doomed by the dot-com era in the 2000s, and also why it might not be such a bad thing. The old axiom of what goes up must come down is especially suitable right now for fuboTV (FUBO). The sports streaming platform surged out of the gates after its public debut in October, with shares up more than fivefold in just over two months. However, over the past 7 days, the stock has handed 37% of profits back to the market. The sale was to be expected after such an unlikely start, but the dump was particularly eye-catching. But one analyst thinks this lower share price could offer new investors the opportunity to get into FUBO cheaply. Roth Capital analyst Darren Aftahi rates Stock Buy along with a $55 price target. Consequences for investors? Up – 42%. (To watch Aftahi's records, click here) We believe FUBO continues to be one of the best ways investors can access cable cutting dynamics and continues to be evidenced by recent price increases between SVOD (both Netflix (NFLX-NC) and Disney+ (DISNC) price increases in recent months), said the 5-star analyst. We believe that the overall market trend of cable cutting, along with FUBO growth initiatives, should lead to a higher subscriber outlook for 1H21. According to a recent market research from Antenna, FUBO has been having market share from larger vMVPD (virtual multi-channel video programming distributors such as Hulu and YouTube TV. Its market share increased by 100 and 200 basis points respectively in October and November. While Aftahi's FY21 total subscriber estimate of 685,000 remains the same, promising data results in an analyst raising its FY22 sub count estimates by ~2% to ~910,000. There could be other upside drivers, too. Catalysts include the near-term threat of additional Covid caused by lockdowns that could grow subs/limit come, while FUBO's plans for free play gaming features in FY21 brings optionality to its longer-term model. Overall, FUBO has a Moderate Buy rating from consensus analysts, based on 6 purchases and 1 hold and sale. The stock is selling for $38.74, and the average price target of $36.13 means a ~7% slowdown. But, as Aftahi's comments suggest, there may be much better potential than it seems at first glance.
