Baking day at grandma's

Difficulty: Medium, includes stove and mixer. Time: 5 minutes. 3 oz. semisweet chocolate (55% to 60% cocoa), roughly chopped or broken into pieces1/4 cup heavy cream3 cups whole milk; More than necessaryPinch kosher salt Grind the chocolate in a food processor until it reaches the consistency of a rough meal, about 30 seconds. Bring to the boil the cream in a small saucepan over a medium heat. Add the cream to the food processor and process until smooth, about 10 seconds. In a small saucepan, heat the milk over a medium heat until it turns. Add half ganache and salt and stir until smooth (ganache can be warm or cold). If you prefer a thinner consistency, add more milk. Serve hot cups. Half of the recipe of ganache will be left for the cold of the chocolate cake. Difficulty: A simple cake, easy to help children. Time: 20 minutes prep plus 30 minutes of baking. 1 cup sugar1/2 cup cocoa1 cup flour1/8 teaspoon salt4 tablespoons butter (half sticks)1 cup boiling hot water1 teaspoon baking soda1 egg1 teaspoon vanilla Preheat the oven to 350 degrees. Mix sugar, cocoa, flour and salt in a large bowl. Using a small spoon, make a hollow in the center of the mixture. Add the butter sliced to the hollow center. Stir the baking soda into a cup of boiling water. While it's foaming, pour it on the butter. Allow the mixture to sit until the butter has melted and the dough cools. Add egg and vanilla to the bowl and mix all the ingredients well. Pour the dough into a lightly lubricated 9x9 baking tray and bake at a temperature of 350 degrees for 30-35 minutes. Test with toothpick. The toothpick must come out dry when brownies are done. Allow the cake to cool after baking. Frost with the remaining ganache and enjoy! It's baking day! It's a baking day for grandma! In this charming new picture book by Anika and Christopher Denise, three spirited young bears tromp through the snow to spend a fun, cozy day with grandmothers. After a round of hugs and kisses, they enter the delicious cake baking business: Throw out the aprons, One-two-three. Grandmother reads the recipe: flour, sugar, butter, eggs. Stand on chairs with nozzle legs. Eager cubs add large spoons of joy and anticipation to the dough, as they help to measure, mix and mix in grandmother's warm and hospitable cabin kitchen. And why not lick a spoon? ☺ While the cake is in the oven, they sip a hot forehead and dance to the sounds emanating from grandmother's Old-time music, soft and sweet. Skippy notes and tapping your feet. Learning the songs that grandma sings - when the kitchen timer sounds! Then it's time to cut and freeze the cake and add a few Before the gift wraps each piece and heading home the moonlight. Anikos pitch perfect, rolls of rhymes pairing and Christopher's lush warm, wooded illustrations capture all the love, busy, and comfy delights of this special day. This fascinating generational story sings a sweet reward not only for time with loved ones, but also for satisfaction with something together, and ultimately a joy to share with others. Love memories of childhood summers and holidays spent at her grandparents' home in the Adirondacks inspired Anika to write a baking day for grandmothers. Her grandmother Rose was a great cook and restaurant co-owner who always welcomed her children and grandkids into her kitchen to bake and eat. Wrapping up treats to share was usually part of the fun, and Rose's recipe for Chocolate Cake is included in the book. These days, Anika continues this wonderful tradition by baking with her three lovely daughters. No need to say anything, alphabet soup resident bears gave this book rousing five feet up. They're big fans of Denises's Pigs Love Potatoes, and Christopher The Bears in Kristy Dempsey's Me With You. I bought a Redwall cookbook a few years ago because I reeeeeeally loved Christopher's art (and needed to try some recipes soon). ☺ But in the meantime, let's have a chocolate cake. * * * 🐷 ALLOW THEM BEARS TO EAT CAKE! 🐷 No one could live at home with more than 300 hungry bears and not try this recipe, which is included in the recipe collection Rose, made for her family. Anika said it's Rose's signature recipe and I can see why. So, so good! I like that the cake is easy to make, does not require much beating, not too sweet, and beautiful moist crumbs, but is strong enough to eat out of hand. Children will love to watch baking soda foam when added to boiling water, and enjoy the cold and decorate the baked cake. Scharffen Berger unsweetened cocoa powder I gave cake an eye-roll-back-in-your-head rich dark chocolate flavor. I made a simple vanilla butter matte (1 stick butter, 2+ cups of confectionery sugar, 1 tablespoon of vanilla, 3-4 T milk), which perfectly complemented the cake. Perhaps the greatest testament to the deliciousness of this cake is the reaction of Mr. Jama after the first two bites were used. Big smile, eyes closed and words: My mom wants a piece. Let me just say that during 35 years of marriage and hundreds of cookies, cakes, cakes, and puddings I made for him, never was he moved to mention his late mother - who apparently loved and made a good chocolate cake. Thank you, Grandma Rosie! There they bake, dance, drink hot chocolate, pack their fried winch, and then go home, but the story is really more than that. Grandmother's love is almost a tangible thing, reflected in the artist's illustrations, with warm colors and a cozy atmosphere, and the images convey the sheer pleasure she feels in the company of her grandchildren. Cubes are clearly thrown away with their grandmother, who towers over them with a good heart and with a tradition of baking day. This is not a treacle of cloning nostalgia.
