The school is part of the Los Angeles Unified School District and is operated by a nonprofit organization that works in conjunction with LAUSD. The organization, mla partner schools (formerly known as Mentor Los Angeles), also runs a manual arts high school. History The school, which opened in the fall semester of 2007, is divided into three smaller schools: Business, Art (SOTA) and Invention, Design, Engineering and Architecture (IDEA). Core programs include counseling (a course required for each student, each year, learning about college and career opportunities) and 7 to 7 (an extended school day that offers enrichment opportunities for students and families before and after normal school hours). Although West Adams is LAUSD High School, it was designed in part by MLA Affiliate Schools, a non-profit organization that now operates the school on a five-year performance contract with the LAUSD School Board. The school originally opened to facilitate Belmont High School in Los Angeles, Dorsey High School, Los Angeles High School and Manual Arts High School. Going to West Adams Prep School would be like going to a small college. You will have several hundred students in your class, enough to provide an interesting set of activities, sports, and classes to try. But compared to California's largest high schools, students' body size won't be overwhelming. Student body size growth is West Adams preparing a growing or shrinking high school? It will help you see trends where the school is going. According to our calculations, enrollment at West Adams High School has been steadily increasing in recent years. We calculate this by comparing registration in grades 9 through 12. Female students all students in ninth grade 303 198 501 10th grade 278 206 484 11th grade 201 183 384 12th grade 157 169 326 as shown in the table above, the first year class is 175 students larger than the 126th grade. This suggests that the school is growing in size and taking on more students. There are several reasons this could happen. The city of Los Angeles can grow in population, sending more students to West Adams Preparatory High School. Alternatively, West Adams Preparatory High School could be relaxing its student policy and taking in more students. Gender split Are there more boys or girls at West Adams High School? According to our statistics, West Adams High School has a 56:44 division between male and female students. As a result, it will feel like there are a lot more girls than boys in your classes. Sometimes this imbalance can result from a random chance and can't offer anything on West Adams High Prep. In other cases, the school may choose a preferred manner for men. For example, in our data we find that continuing secondary schools unfortunately seem to be dominated by men. In other cases, other nearby schools may attract schoolgirls, drawing them from West Adams Preparatory High School. If the male majority concerns you, we suggest contacting west Adams' preparatory director and asking if they have any thoughts on why there is a gender imbalance. Their phone number is 3233732500. Ethnic breakdown What's the racial diversity at West Adams High? Does one ethnicity find most students, or is it fairly balanced? According to our statistics, West Adams High School has a very homogeneous student body, with more than 90% of students identifying as one This is particularly extreme - less than 10% of California schools show little racial diversity like West Adams High School. When you attend class, you will surround students of the same ethnicity. Most of the students at West Adams High School are Hispanic. In California, Hispanic students are the most students at 51.5%, so they are the most common ethnicity. Mostly Hispanic schools are the most common type of homogeneous school, and West Adams Preparatory High School fits that category. Percentage Number American Indian/Alaska Native 0.2% 4 Asia 0.7% 13 Hispanic 92.5% 1569 Black 6.1% 105 White 0.2% 4 Hawaii native / Pacific Islander 0.0% 0 Two or more races 0.0% 0 High schools typically reflect the population in the surrounding area. So the ethnicity of students probably resembles those of Los Angeles. If you want to see what other nearby schools look like in diversity, just Google [school name] prep scholar to find our guide to this particular school. The income level of West Adams Preparatory High School families, what are the family incomes of students at West Adams High School? To determine this, we look at the number of students eligible for free or reduced lunches, classification by the U.S. federal government. To qualify for a reduced-price meal, family income would have to be below 185% of federal poverty guidelines. For a family of 4, this means an income of about $45,000 or less. To qualify for a free meal, family income would have to be below 130% of federal poverty guidelines. For a family of 4, this means an income of about $32,000 or less. The lower the percentage of students eligible for free or reduced price meals, the higher income levels are expected. At West Adams Preparatory High School, 4.9% of students qualify for lunches at a reduced price, and 87.1% are eligible for free lunches. This means West Adams Preparatory High School has a high percentage of students in or near poverty. Nearly a third of all California schools show this level of poverty, and by the standards of the National Center for Education Statistics, West Adams High School can be classified as high poverty digesters. The income level of families in Los Angeles is expected to be low. The number of percentage of reduced-price lunches 84 4.9% free lunches 1478 87.1% are not eligible for reduced or free lunches 133 7.8% as with ethnicity, this probably reflects the surrounding community in Los Angeles and doesn't talk much about the school itself. Unfortunately, schools in areas with lower income levels are likely to be funded worse. As a result, they may include less advanced courses like AP/IB classes, you may not have a wide range of sports and extra-school activities. Because West Adams High School is an especially high school at the poverty level, it may not have the resources you need to meet your full potential. I certainly have no control over the city, school, or other families, but you can build your learning to be more productive. If you want to open yourself up to more opportunities, you can see if you can move to a nearby school with higher income levels. If not, don't be alarmed - it's possible West Adams High has everything you need for your ambition. And you can definitely be conceived on learning outside your school, looking to your community or the internet to find more resources. How safe is West Adams Prep High School to participate? Can you expect a lot of conflict as a student here? To learn this, we look at disciplinary data for two types of incidents at West Adams High School: referrals to law enforcement (when incidents are reported to police) and arrests. These are the most serious disciplinary actions available to the school and are more serious than suspensions or expulsions. Suspensions are often discretionary and can only be given for being disruptive in the classroom. In contrast, law enforcement referrals and arrests often point to incidents that are ingesting the safety of other preparatory students in West Adams. In the 2011-2012 school year, there were 48 referrals to law enforcement (42 men, 6 women) and 10 school-related arrests (8 males, 2 women). That's out of a total enrollment of 2350 students. To put this in perspective, most California schools (59% of them) reported 0 referrals and law enforcement arrests. This means that 2.4 West Adams Prepares High has minor safety issues. For every 100 students, there were only 2.4 law enforcement-related operations, but that's still higher than 75% of California schools. With this record, is West Adams High School significantly different from other schools in the area? West Adams Prep High may have a particularly bad track record, or it could be that the environment is showing a pattern. Compare this school with other high schools in the same school district, using the following table: Los Angeles Unified School Safety School Name Overall Referral Total Enrollment Arrests Frank Lanterman 0 0 222 Opportunities Unlimited Youth 6 0 323 Jane Adams Continued 0 0 216 William Tell Aggeller High Opportunity 0 0 65 John R. Tall Tree 0 0 144 Angel Gate (Continued) 0 0 84 Academic Performance Now we get to a key aspect of High School Evaluation: Academic Performance. How much good education will you get at West Adams Prep? Will you have access to advanced classes? We've gathered everything we could find here on the academics of West Adams High School. Graduation rate To get started, an important benchmark of academic achievement is the graduation rate. For all students who start high school at West Adams High School, the state of California wants as many students as possible to graduate as much as possible, since a high school diploma can be a big difference in job protection. At West Adams Preparatory High School, 80% (out of 782) West Adams High School students graduated within four years of the start of high school. That's how it works out with other schools. The California government defined 90% as a target rate. The national average is around 80%-85%. West Adams High School is in the 44th percentile of all California Public High Schools for graduation. It's below average. Typically, a graduation rate of over 90% is considered well above average, and below 75% is well below average. Note: These figures come in a few years ago, but the trends are likely to remain the same, as schools are not improving or significantly worse in a short period of time. Next revised test, we take another big piece of high school academics: standardized test performance for West Adams High School students. These are tests given to large populations of students for comparison purposes. Let's start by looking at the data for nationally administered standardized testing. As you probably know, the S.A.T. is a critical test used for college absorption. The higher the grade you get, the better academic performance compared to students across the country, and the easier it is to get into top colleges. We did an in-depth study and found the average SAT scores of West Adams Prem preparatory program. The average combined SAT score is 1200 out of 2400, compared with a national average of 1500. Every year, about 267 at West Adams Preparatory High School take the S.A.T. That's a very low SATs score, putting West Adams preparing high in the bottom 25% of all California schools, well below the national average. Only 9% of S.A.T. recipients get a higher score than the national average. Unfortunately, this suggests that most students attending West Adams Preparatory High School are not high achievers, and will find it difficult to get into a good college. Note, however, that average is only average - you still have the potential to rise above expectations. If you work hard and earn a PSYCHOMETRIC score well above the West Adams High School average, there's going to be a great chance of getting into a good college. In California, the ACT is less popular than the SATs. Therefore, it's harder to compare West Adams High School grades with the rest of the country. At West Adams Preparatory High School, the ACT average score was 16, compared to the national average of 20. Each year, roughly 79 out of 1695 students in total take the ACT. Unfortunately, that's well below average performance, putting West Adams preparing high in the bottom 25% of California high schools. Most of the students staying here are well below the national average. As the ACT looks into what you learn in school, it may be a warning sign that the quality of education you receive at West Adams Preparatory High School may be lacking compared to other schools. Advanced location classes (AP) are college-level courses that are another academic challenge and may give West Adams High School students college credit. Here's what we're looking for: Average high scores from the AP test, as well as AP's high delivery rates. AP scores each year, roughly 225 students in the 9th-12th grade at West Adams Preparatory High School take 343 AP exams. It's important to understand how students get a score in ap - earning 3, 4 or 5 in. The AP test means passing the test and often earning college credit. The average score for all AP exams conducted in West Adams prepares high is 2.2 out of 5. Unfortunately, this score puts West Adams preparing high below average performance. On AP tests, the fetal score is considered 3, and most students who take AP tests in West Adams high pre-presiding do not pass. This performance places West Adams Preparatory High School at 50% of AP test schools in California. It's not all bad news. It's already good that West Adams Preparatory High School offers an AP program so you can start dipping your toes into college-level courses. Some schools are new to offering AP courses, and teachers often get better at preparing students for AP tests. Moreover, a good number of students still earn a passing grade of 3 or higher. With hard work throughout the year, you'll still be able to beat your school average. We have specific data on how many students have 1, 2, 3, 4, or 5 (out of 5) on AP exams in the chart below: AP Test takes statistics another way to gauge the quality of the school's AP program is to see how many AP students actually took AP exams at West Adams High School. If a lot of students enroll in AP courses but don't really take ap exams, it may be a sign that students don't feel adequately willing to take the test, or the school doesn't encourage students to take the exams enough. At West Adams Preparatory High School, there is a total enrollment of 298 AP courses (a student who takes more than one AP course is considered more than once). Of the students taking AP, 232 participated in tests for all AP courses. 12 students took tests for some AP courses, and 55 participated in AP courses but did not take the tests. That's a good test participation. Most AP students at West Adams High School take the AP test for each of their AP courses, surpassing the students who take some or not AP exams. This is a good sign that students feel confident enough to reach the tests for all AP courses available to them, reflecting well on teachers and course material. West Adams High Preparatory can continue to improve by reducing the number of students who take AP tests for some or none of their courses, but this is in good condition. Note: Our most recent data is from 2012, so statistics may vary since then. However, the trends are likely to continue - above-average schools are expected to remain above average, and below average schools are expected to remain below average. AP Transition lessons for AP students at West Adams High School preparing those who take the exam, it's important to know how they do. Here we have specific data on how many students received passing grade (3 or higher) on all, how many, or none of the AP exams they took. Out of all the AP tests, 47 students passed every AP exam they took, which is Work. Forty-seven students passed several but not all AP exams, and 150 students did not pass any AP exam they took. Unfortunately, this is a poor performance compared to other high schools. At West Adams High School, most AP students fail every AP exam they take. This usually means they are not adequately prepared for the national AP test at the end of the year. It's not necessarily the school's fault. AP courses may be too advanced for the typical student at West Adams Preparatory High School, and it's still a good thing that AP courses are offered at all. Furthermore, it is possible that most AP exams taken by students at West Adams High Preparatory are on the harder side. However, if you're a student at West Adams High School, it's a warning you'll need to go above and beyond the typical student to pass your AP exams. This may include self-study, figuring out who ap teachers are better at and trying to get into their classes, and work hard. To find out the passing rates for specific AP courses at West Adams High School, you'll need to talk to your counselor (who can help you find that information). For example, one AP math teacher may have a pass rate above 90% , while another may have only a 50% pass rate. If you can, you want to take the class with the teacher who has more students and get 3 or higher on the AP test. Starting in 2014, 11th graders attending West Adams Preparatory High School must take standardized tests in English/language and math as part of the California Student Performance and Progress Review (CAASPP). These align with the new Common Core standards and are called Smart Balanced tests. If preparatory students in West Adams meet or exceed state standards, they are academically ready to graduate from high school and go to college. Specifically, we care about the percentage of students who are against or exceed state standards. The greater that number, the greater the preparation of students at West Adams High School. At West Adams High School, 15% of students stand or exceed state facilities in English/language. This is considered well below average and puts West Adams preparing high in the bottom 25% of all California High Schools of English/Language Arts. The vast majority of West Adams High School students don't meet state standards, and only a small percentage pass. This low percentage itself is not a cause for much concern - as teachers and students become more familiar with the new Common Core, the pass rate in West Adams prepares high and is unlikely to increase. But it still reflects West Adams High School's low standing among California high schools. English Arts/Language Test Results (2015) Read more about what's measured in The ELA region is zion here. The second major test tested for state estimates is Math. Across the country, math performance is generally lower than English/language art performance, so it's natural for this number to be lower. At West Adams High School, 14% of students meet or exceed state math standards. That counts well below average and puts West Adams High School at the bottom 25% of all California high schools. The vast majority of West Adams Preparatory High School students do not meet state standards, and only a small percentage pass. Academic proposals In addition to the standard high school curriculum, many high schools like West Adams High School offer advanced courses as part of the Advanced Placement Programs (AP) or International Baccalaureate (IB). Short introductory courses for AP/IB AP and IB are designed with the difficulty of college introductory classes. There are a number of important advantages to taking advanced courses at West Adams High School. First, taking more advanced classes shows colleges that you're committed to challenging yourself academically, and that you're one of the more advanced students at West Adams Preparatory High School. Taking AP/IB classes also raises your weighty way average and makes you a stronger college candidate. Furthermore, many colleges will receive high-preparation AP/IB courses from your West Adams as college courses. In some cases, you can skip departments at the introductory level and switch to more advanced classes. In other cases, you can avoid having to take required courses and you may even be able to graduate sooner than 4 standard years. Often it will require you to pass the AP test, getting a score of 3 or higher. So what advanced courses does West Adams High School offer? AP Courses West Adams Preparatory High School offers AP courses in 14 subjects. This is a reasonable number of AP subjects, putting West Adams preparing a high school in the top 50% of California schools that offer AP courses. You will likely have access to some of the most popular topics in AP math and wind computing as well as several others. The total number of AP subjects is 38, so West Adams prepares a high and lacks a large number of topics, including some of these popular ones. If there are AP courses you want to take that are not offered at West Adams Preparatory High School, ask your counselor for ideas on how to cover the gap. Of course, keep in mind that quality is even more important than quantity - even if West Adams High Prech doesn't offer any AP course under the sun, the lessons can still learn very well.
