Pigeons understand how difficult it is for families to stay away from their inmate, and it's important to familiarize yourself with the basics of inmate visits before planning a visit, as each institution has certain rules that you must follow. All visitors must be approved in advance; Your inmate must put you on the pre-approved visit list so that you can visit it, which will be reviewed by the prison later. When examining the permit, prisons take many factors into account, as all formalities have to be completed. Many facilities limit the number of visitors, so the occupants have to narrow down the list of potential visitors. All prisons have their own rules that you have to follow. You are expected to follow the prison rules, however arbitrary they may appear when you visit them. The inmate you want to visit should be able to tell you the visit schedule for this prison, but it is always a good idea to call the prison in advance to ensure that a visitation is allowed and whether potential visitors are allowed or not. After the visitor has been approved by the prison, they must inquire with their inmate on the days on which they are allowed to visit. All prisoners are searched before and after each visit for security reasons. The families who visit their inmates must respect the dress code of the respective prison, otherwise they may be refused a visit. All visitors are expected to present a valid government-issued photo ID. Pigeons have also introduced video visits to connect families and inmates, if it becomes difficult for them to visit, you must first plan a visit and have it approved by your inmate and Enat by signing up with Pigeonly Videovisitation, your inmate will be just one click away.
