The man from taured pdf free download

This is a list of some possible monsters that can cultivate certain stages, Faimon, Hydeni, Chiruka, etc. Some steps offer more Mana/Exp recovery for energy than others, but so far we only list the best monsters for each step. Keep in place to remember that those who can cultivate hell space can also easily cultivate Hard with lower Rune requirements. Stay tuned for updates! This guide will help you know which Summoners War Monsters you should keep and build. Here are the criteria I used to determine the rankings: How many places can you use a monster How good a monster is in those places How hard #1 is to replace this monster *Note*: Because of this criterion, Lushen is placed on the 4-star charts, Lushen is used in so many places and is also the best monster for its role as an AoE damage dealer and has almost no replacement. This guide is useful in determining which monsters you should work in agriculture and construction next. You can also use this list to help you determine which monsters you should use your inviting stones to try to get. That's why I don't include any non-cultivated Nat 5s because the list would be far too long and most players won't have access to them anyway. Here are the criteria I used to determine which every monster is Good: The monster must be better than other F2P or easily accessible options, for example, Lapis is not good for DB10 because Sigmarus is a better replacement and is available for everyone to digest. Although Lapis is usable in DB10, he is not good for DB10 as you should never use him for DB10 over Sigmarus. Table of Contents (links): The best monsters for PvE Farming Remember that each monster's rankings are based on how good the monster is at Player Vs. Environment (PvE) content. However, I also list where that monster is good at PvP. Best 2 Star Monsters (PvE) 1.
