Reading Free Books Online Home - Fiction - Magic Binds (Kate Daniels #9)(56) Careful. That way, there were dragons. Literally. What benefit would you gain from it? Power. agree. Could you be more specific? Aspid's coils tightened, hitting my back. I pushed to the massive scale with my hand. Stop. I'm trying to talk to your dad. I will not accept anything until I understand the nature of the case. People worship the lighter gods because of the gifts they hope to receive, Sirin says from his perch. They worship the darker gods because of fear. For this fear to remain alive, there must be punishment when respect is lacking. But one cannot punish when his disciples are few and many. There's an imbalance. Now it made sense. Roman had complained before that he was not invited to names, births or marriages, but the volhvs of Belobog and other lighter gods were. Gods like Chernobog felt the pressure to correct. In ancient times Chernobog was not so much adored as appeased, because if the ancient Slavs forgot appeasement, he would remind them. Atlanta was a hub and it attracted people from all over the South, but despite this, the population of Slavic pagans was too small for any effective punishment. If he decimated them, it would the battle were dedicated to him, each death would strengthen his power. That was a hell of a thing to promise. Do you understand, human? Sirin asked. Yes, it's true. I'm thinking. Do the souls of the dead killed in The Name of Chernobog belong to him? I do not claim souls, said Roman-Chernobog. How would this dedication take place? My volhv will dedicate the field to me. I looked at Sirin. What is Veles' role in this? Veles does not claim the field or lives lost on it. For now. I faced Roman-Chernobog. If we dedicated the field to you, every death on it becomes a human sacrifice. Sirin slammed his wings. Aspid opened his beak, his golden eyes staring at me. Apparently, the fact that I wasn't completely stupid was really surprising. There was no other way out. If I refused the case, neither Teddy Jo nor I would get out of this swamp. If I died, my father would take the city and crush it. If I were to make the deal, I would make a business arrangement with the God of Evil. Nothing good has ever come to do business like this. Nothing good ever came from doing business with gods, period. Especially what he was asking for was not for me to grant. What am I supposed to do? How can I make the most of this mess? I would have liked to ask Roman for advice, but I strongly doubted that Chernobog would let me do this and even if he had, there was a pretty obvious conflict of What if there is no battle? There will be a battle, Sirin said. First of all, you will fight for your lover. If you win, you will fight for your heir. You're not going to survive. One of these battles will end you. Maybe I'll fix things with my father. — You won't be, Sirin said. Beware, daughter of Nimrod. I saw your death and it is a horror you cannot imagine. Awesome. Decide, said Roman-Chernobog. I'd need ammunition against my father. The sorcerer Oracle had planned the battle, Sirin had planned the battle, so that the battle would take place. Curran would die. Atlanta would burn. Dedicate the soil to Chernobog and give him the power of all these dead ... There was no darker darkness than that dragon that was meandering around me. That would open a door that so many good people had fought to stay closed. I'd give a foot in Atlanta. But I'd be foolish to turn down his offer. I wouldn't even get out of the swamp. It was my responsibility to defend people in my country. That was my burden. I had to do everything I could to it. Decide, roman-Chernobog repeated. I looked the god in the eye. No. Aspid tightened up. You ask me something that is not in my power to give. I'm keeping the land. I don't own it and I don't own volhvs are afraid of him and oppose him. He knows that. Right now, your worshippers live in the land I keep. I'm not asking them for anything. They love who ever they want. Once my dad's done, it'll be over. Most of those who honor you will die in this battle. Those who honor you will die in this battle. Those who ever they want. 9) EBOOK DOWNLOAD FREE] EBook -PDF Magic Binds (Kate Book 9) | EBOOK ONLINE DOWNLOADby Ilona Andrews. Ebook Book 9) | EBOOK ONLINE DOWNLOADby Ilona Andrews. Between the political turmoil and the new coronavirus pandemic (COVID-19), it is difficult to look back on the year and find something, anything, that was a potential bright spot in an otherwise turbulent journey around the sun. Fortunately, there were some positives: namely, some of the excellent works of military history and analysis, fiction and non-fiction, novels and graphic novels that we have absorbed over the past year. Here's a brief list of some of the best books we've read here at Task and Purpose in the past year. Here's a brief list of some of the best books we've read here at Task and Purpose. Com and we're going to include it in a future story. Missionaries by Phil Klayl loved the first Phil Klay's Redeployment (which won the National Book Award), so Missionaries was high on my list of must-reads when it came out in October. It took Klay is prophetic novel shows, the machines of technology, drones and targeted killings that were built on the battlefield of the Middle East will continue to grow in distant lands that rarely make headlines. [Buy]- Paul Szoldra, Editor-in-ChiefBattle Born: Lapis Lazuli by Max UriarteWritten by 'Terminal Lance' creator Maximilian Uriarte, this full graphic novel follows a marine infantry squad on a bloody odyssey through the mountains of northern Afghanistan. The color comic is essentially Conan the Barbarian in MARPAT. [Buy]- James Clark, Senior reporter Alex Kershaw's LiberatorNow an animated netflix miniseries during World War II, The Liberator follows the 157th Infantry Battalion of the 45th Division, from the beaches of Sicily to the mountains of Italy and the Battle of Anzio, then again in Bavaria for some of the bloodiest urban battles of the conflict before culminating in the liberation of the Dachau concentration camp. It's a poignant tale, but worth reading before you enjoy the famous Netflix series. [Buy]- Jared Keller, Deputy EditorThe Only Plane in the Sky: An Oral History of 9/11 by Garrett GraffIf you haven't gotten this unmissable account of the 9/11 attacks, you need to put The Only Plane In the Sky at the top of your Christmas list. Graff skilfully explains the chronology of the day through the re-narrative of those who were on the ground in New York, and the service members working at the Pentagon. My only suggestion is not to read it in public - if you are something like me, you will always be left in tears. [Buy]- Haley Britzky, Army ReporterThe Body in Pain: The Making and Unmaking of the World by Elaine ScarryWhy are we even fighting wars? Wouldn't a massive tennis tournament be a better way for nations to settle their differences? This is one of the many questions that Harvard professor elaine Scarry is trying to answer, as well as why nuclear war is akin to torture, why the language surrounding war is sterilized in public discourse, and why war and torture detract from human worlds by destroying access to language. It's a great lift from a reading, but even if you just read chapter two (as I did), you'll come back to think about the war in a new and refreshing way. [Buy]- David Roza, Air Force ReporterStalingrad: The Fateful Siege: 1942-1943 by Antony takes readers all the way from the Nazi invasion of the Soviet Union to the collapse of the 6th Army in Stalingrad in February 1943. It gives you the perspective of the Greater Middle Middle Middle Correspondent by Andrew J. Bacevichl picked up America's war for the Great Middle East earlier this year and couldn't lay it down. Published in 2016 by Andrew Bacevich, a retired historian and army officer who served in Vietnam, the book unravels the long and sinuent story of how America has become so entangled in the Middle East and shows that we have fought a long war since the 1980s — with errors of judgment on the part of political leaders on both sides of the aisle to blame. From the end of World War II until 1980, virtually no American soldiers were killed in action while serving in the Greater Middle East. Since 1990, virtually no American soldiers have been killed in combat elsewhere. What caused this change? asks for the book jacket. As bacevich details in this definitive story, the mission creep of our Vietnam experience has been played over and over again over the past 30 years, with disastrous results. [Buy]- Paul Szoldra, EditorBurn In: A Novel of the Real Robotic Revolution by P.W. Singer and August ColeIn Burn In, Singer and Cole take readers on a journey to an unknown date in the future, in which an FBI agent searches for a high-tech terrorist in Washington, D.C., Agent Lara Keegan is teamed up with a robot that is less Terminator and much more of a useful, and very intelligent, law enforcement tool. Perhaps the most interesting part: Just about everything that happens in history can be traced back to technologies that are being researched today. You can read the Task and Purpose interview with the authors here. [Buy]- James Clark, SeniorSAS Reporter: Rogue Heroes, which tells again some really crazy heists performed by one of the first units of modern special forces. Best of all, Ben MacIntyre motifs his story in a compassionate and balanced tone that displays both the best and worst of SAS men, who are, like anyone else, only human after all. [Purchase]- David Roza, Air Force Reporter Kate QuinnThe Alice Network Is a captivating novel that follows two brave women through different times - one living in the aftermath of World War II, determined to find out what happened to someone she loves, and the other working in a secret network of spies behind enemy lines during World War I. This captivating historical fiction is based on true of a network that infiltrated the German lines in France during the Great War and weaves a tale so full of drama, suspense and tragedy that you will not be able to ask it. [Buy] Katherine Rondina, Anchor BooksSeeEat that I published a new book this year, I answered questions about my inspirations. This means that I thought and so grateful for Girl in the Flammable Skirt by Aimee Bender. I can't credit him for making me want to be a writer - that desire was already there - but he inspired me to write stories where the fantastic complicates the ordinary, and the impossible becomes possible. A girl in a beautiful dress without anyone to enjoy it. An ordinary boy with a remarkable talent for finding things. The stories in this book taught me that the daily life of my world could become magical and strange, and in this strangeness I could find a new kind of truth. Diane Cook is the author of the long-time Booker Prize 2020 novel The New Wilderness and the Man V. Nature Collection, a finalist for the Guardian First Book Award, the Believer Book Award, the PEN/Hemingway Award and the Los Angeles Times Award for First Fiction. Read an excerpt from The New Wilderness. Bill Johnston, University of California Press revisited many old favorites in this dark year of fear and isolation, and were very grateful to all for Frank O'Hara's Collected Poems. Spiritual, reflexive, intimate, bizarre, casual and monumentally serious at the same time, they were a constant balm and inspiration. The only thing to do is simple because it's the only thing to do.'Helen Macdonald is a nature essayist with a semi-regular column in the New York Times Magazine. His latest novel, Vesper Flights, is a collection of his most beloved essays, and his first book, H Is for Hawk, won the Samuel Johnson Award for Nonfiction. Andrea Scher, Scholastic PressThis year, I am so grateful for You Should See Me in a Crown by Leah Johnson. Reading — like everything else — was a struggle for me in 2020. It has been difficult to let go of all my worries about the state of the world and our country and get carried away by a story. But You should see me in a crown shot me right away; for the happy time I was reading, athick of a world outside 2020 and it made me think of a world outside 2020 and it made me smile from ear to ear. Joy has been hard to find this year, and I am so grateful for this book for the joy it has brought me. Jasmine Guillory is the New York Times best-selling author of five romance novels, including this year's Party of Two. His work appeared in O, The Oprah Magazine, Cosmopolitan, Real Simple, and Time.Nelson Fitch, Random House Last year, stuck in an extended reading rut that left me if I even liked the books more, I came across the tenth of December by George Saunders, a collection of stories Saunders wrote written 1995 and 2012 which are by turns funny, moving, surprising, weird, deep, and often all these things at the same time. As a writer, what I most want in books is to find such an excellent one that makes me feel better about quitting — and so wonderful that it reminds me of what it's like to be purely a reader again, to meet new worlds and new revelations every time I turn a page. December 10th is that, and I am so grateful that it fell off a high shelf and into my life. Veronica Roth is the New York Times bestseller #1 of the Divergent series and Carve the Mark duology. His latest novel, Chosen Ones, is his first adult novel. Read an excerpt from Chosen Ones. Ian Byers-Gamber, Blazevox BooksSe wake up today at the prospect of a few hours spent reading part of another day of this disastrous, delirious pandemic year, I am very grateful for the book in my hands, one of himself full of gratitude for a life spent reading: Gloria Frym How Proust ruined my life. Frym's essays — on Marcel Proust, yes, walt Whitman and Lucia Berlin, but also peppermint sweets and Allen Ginsburg's knees, among other Proustian memories — give me back my sense of strange luck to a life spent rushing to the next book, the next page, the next word. Jonathan Lethem is the author of several critically acclaimed novels, including The Fortress of Solitude and Motherless Brooklyn, winner of the National Book Critics Circle Award. His latest novel, The Arrest, is a post-apocalyptic story about two siblings, the man who came between them, and a super nuclear-powered car. David Heska Wanbli Weiden, RiverheadI'm incredibly grateful for David Treuer's magnificent The Heartbeat of Wounded Knee. This book — a mixture of history, memoirs and stories — is the urgently needed reconceptualization of Aboriginal life since Dee Brown's book, and it rejects the standard history of Aboriginal victimization, conquest and defeat. Although I teach Native American studies to students, I have found new ideas and revelations in almost every chapter. Not only a great read, the book is a huge contribution to native America - and American - intellectual and cultural history. David Heska Wanbli Weiden, registered member of the Sicangu Lakota Nation, is the author of the novel Winter Counts, which is the choice of November BuzzFeed Book Club. He is also the author of the children's book Spotted Tail, which won the Spur Award 2020 Western Writers of America. Read an excerpt from Winter Counts. Valerie Mosley, TordotcomIn 2020, I was lucky enough to finish a single book in 30 days, but I burned through this 507-page brick in the space of a weekend. Harrow the Ninth me that even when absolutely everything is terrible, it is still possible to feel deep, rewarding, buzzing brain admiration for brilliant art. Thank you, Harrow, for being one of the brightest places in a black year and for keeping the house lights on. Casey McQuiston is the best-selling author of Red's New York Times, White and Royal Blue, and his next book, One Last Stop, is out in 2021. I am grateful for V.S. Naipaul's disturbing masterpiece, A Bend in the River — which not only made me see the world, but made me see what literature could do. It is a book lucid enough to reveal the brutality of the forces that shape our world and its politics; still full of soul to penetrate the most reconmeal secrets of human interiority. A book of great beauty without a moment of mercy. A marriage of opposites that continues to shape my own deep sense of what a writer can actually accomplish. Ayad Akhtar is a novelist and playwright, and his immigrant father looking for membership in a post-9/11 country. He is the winner of the Pulitzer Prize for Theatre and a Literature Award from the American Academy of Arts and Letters. Vanessa German, Feminist Press am very grateful for Daddy Was a Number Runner by Louise Meriwether. It's a ya book set in the 1930s in Harlem, and it was the first black-girl-coming-of-age book I've ever read, the first black where you are and take you on a journey at the same time. Deesha Philyaw's first short stories collection, The Secret Lives of Church Ladies, was a finalist for the National Book Award for Fiction 2020. She is also co-author of Co-Parenting 101: Helping Your Kids Thrive in Two Households After Divorce, written in collaboration with her ex-husband. Philyaw writes about race, parenting, sex and culture has appeared in The New York Times, The Washington Post, McSweeney's, Rumpus, and elsewhere. Reading a story from The Secret Lives of Church Ladies. Philippa Gedge, W. W. Norton and CompanyIn as a writer and reader, I am grateful for Highsmith's generosity with her wisdom and experience: She speaks to us through how to tease narrative strands and develop character, how to know when things go wrong, even how to decide to give things up as a bad job. She is not afraid to share her own failures, and in my experience, there is nothing more for a writer only to learn that our literary gods are mortal! As a reader, she gives a fascinating insight into the genesis of one of my favorite novels of all time — The Talented Mr. Ripley, as well as the rest of her Work. And because it's Highsmith, it's more than just a practical guide: it's extremely engaging and, while accessible, it also gives an insight into the spirit of a genius. I've read it twice — while working on each of my thrillers, The Hunting Party and The Guest List — and I know I'll be getting back to copying my shelf soon! Lucy Foley is the New York Times best-selling author of the thrillers The Guest List and The Hunting Party. She has also written two historical fiction novels and has previously worked in the publisher. The books I am most grateful for this year are a three-book series entitled Talestation of the thrillers The Guest List and The Hunting Party. from the Gas Station by Jack Townsend. Walking a fine line between comedy and horror (which is much harder than people think), the books follow Jack, a gas station employee in an unnamed city where all sorts of horribly fantastic things happen. And while monsters are scary and more than a little ridiculous, it's Jack's bony narrative, with his best friend/human emotional support, Jerry, who elevates the books into something that are as beautiful as they are absurd. T.J. Klune is a Lambda Literary Award-winning author and a former claims examiner for an insurance company. His novels include The House in the Cerulean Sea and The Extraordinaries. Sylvernus Darku (Team Black Image Studio), Ayebia Clarke PublishingNervous Conditions is a book I have read several times over the years, including this year. The novel covers the themes of gender and race and has at heart Tambu, a girl in the 1960s Rhodesia determined to get an education and create a better life for herself. Dangarembga's prose is evocative and witty, and history is thought-provoking. I was inspired again by Tambu every time I read this book. Peace Adzo Medie is a Senior Lecturer in Gender and International Policy at the University of Bristol. She is the author of Global Norms and Local Action: The Campaigns to End Violence against Women in Africa (Oxford University Press, 2020). His only wife is his first novel. Jenna Maurice, HarperCollinsThe book I'm most grateful for? Where the Sidewalk Ends by Shel Silverstein. My mother and father read me poems before bed — I am convinced that he infused me not only with a sense of poetic cadence, but also with an ironic sense of humour. Victoria V.E. Schwab is the best-selling author of more than a dozen books, including Vicious, shades of Magic and This Savage Song. His latest novel, The Invisible Life of Addie LaRue, is BuzzFeed Book Club's choice in December. Read an excerpt from The Invisible Life of Addie LaRue.Meg Vazquez, FishMy childhood best friend gave me Troubling a Star of Madeleine L'Engle for Hanukkah when I was 11 years old, and it's still my favorite book of all time. Je Je the way it defies the genre (it's a political thriller/YA romance that includes a lot of scientific research and also poetry??), and how it values intelligence, gutsiness, vulnerability, kindness, and a sense of adventure. The book follows 16-year-old Vicky Austin's life-changing journey to Antarctica; His journey to Antar plus-size blogger who has been invited to star in a Bachelorette reality show. Stayman-London was the lead digital author of Hillary Rodham Clinton's presidential campaign in 2016 and wrote for notable personalities, from former President Obama and Malala Yousafzai to Anna Wintour and Cher.Katharine McGee is grateful for Brian Jacques' Redwall series. Chris Bailey Photography, FirebirdI am grateful for the Redwall books by Brian Jacques. I discovered the series in elementary school, and it sparked a love for the great epic stories that never left me. (If you read my books, you know I can't resist a large cast of characters!) I used to read books aloud to my younger sister, using funny voices for all the narrators. Now that I have a little boy of my own, I look forward to sharing Redwall with him one day. Katharine McGee is the best-selling author of the New York Times of the American Royals and its sequel, Majesty. She is also the author of the Thousandth Floor trilogy. Beth Gwinn, Time-Life BooksI'm the most grateful for the books that carry me out of the world and back, and although I find it painful to choose among them, here is an early and a late one: Zen Cho Black Water Sister, which comes out in 2021, but I devoured it two days ago, and the long volume exhausted Wizards and Witches of the Time-Life Enchanted World series, which is where I first read about the legend of Scholomance. Naomi Novik is the New York Times best-selling author of uprooted, Spinning Silver and the ninevolume Temeraire series. His latest novel, A Deadly Education, is the first in the Scholomance trilogy. Christina Lauren is grateful for the Twilight series for about a million reasons, not the least of which brought us together. Writing fanfic in a space where we could be stupid and messy together taught us that we don't have to be perfect, but there's no harm in trying to improve with every attempt. It also cemented for us that you never thought you would be brave enough to try. Twilight brought millions of readers back into the fold and inspired authors of romance. We really thank Stephenie Meyer every day for the gift of Twilight and the fandom he created.
