The Cardinals are competing in the National Football League (NFL) as a member club of the Western Division National Football Conference (NFC). The team was founded as the Morgan Athletic Club in 1898, and is the oldest continuous-running professional football team in the United States. [1] The Cardinals play their home game at State Farm Stadium, which opened in 2006 and is located in the northwestern suburb of Glendale. The team was founded in Chicago in 1898 as an amateur football team and joined the NFL as a charter member on September 17, 1920. [4] Together with the Chicago Bears, the club is one of two franchises that has been operating since the founding of the league (the Green Bay Packers were an independent team until they joined the NFL a year after they were founded in 1921). The club then moved to St. Louis as the Football Cardinals, Gridbirds or Big Red to avoid confusion with the Major League Baseball team of the same name). Before the 1988 season, the team moved west to Tempe. Arizona, a college suburb east of Phoenix, and played the next 18 seasons at Sun Devil Stadium on the campus of Arizona State University. In 2006, the club moved to its current home ground in Glendale, although the team's executive offices and training facility remained in Tempe. The franchise won two NFL championships, both of which were based in Chicago. The first occurred in 1925, but is the subject of controversy, as supporters of the Pottsville Maroons believed that Pottsville should have won the title. Their second title, and the first to be in the championship game, came in 1947, nearly two decades before the first Super Bowl. They returned to the title in 1948 to defend themselves, but lost 7-0 in a snowstorm in Philadelphia. Since winning the Championship in 1947, the team has suffered many lost seasons, and currently has the longest active north American sports championship in 72 consecutive seasons. In 2012, the Cardinals became the first NFL franchise to lose 700 games since the start. The franchise's all-time record (including regular seasons and playoffs) at the end of the 2020 season is 573-780/41 (566-771/41 regular time, 7-9 in the playoffs. This season, they won their only NFC championship game since the 1970 AFL-NFL combine and reached Super Bowl XLIII (they lost 27-23 to the Pittsburgh Steelers). The team has also won five division titles (1974, 1975, 2008, 2009 and 2015) since appearances at the 1947-48 NFL Championship game, two postseason victories during the 2008-09 NFL playoffs, one during the 2009-10 playoffs and one during the 2015-16 playoffs. Between 1988 and 2012 (except in 2005, when they coached in Prescott), the Cardinals conducted an annual summer training camp at Northern Arizona University of Phoenix Stadium). The stadium was the site of the 2015 Pro Bowl, unlike in previous years, where it was held at Aloha Stadium in Honolulu, Hawaii. The stadium also played host to Super Bowls XLII and XLIX, and will host Super Bowl LVII in 2023. Chicago painting and construction contractor Chris O'Brien has acquired a team that moved it to Normal Field on Racine Avenue. The team was known as Racine Normals until 1901, when O'Brien bought second-hand jerseys from the University of Chicago. He described the suit as cardinal red and the team became a charter member of the American Professional Football Association (APFA), which was redirected to the National Football League (NFL) two years later. The team entered the league as the Ducks' Cardinals, but the name was changed to the Chicago Cardinals in 1922 to avoid confusion with the Horlick-Racine Legion, who entered the league the same year. Except in 1925, when the Pottsville Maroons were rewarded with a championship, the Cardinals had only minimal success on the field in their first 26 seasons in the league. In the post-World War II era, the team reached two straight NFL finals against the Philadelphia Eagles, won in 1947 - eight months after the death of Charles Bidwill - and lost the following year. After years of bad seasons and the loss of fans from the inter-city rival Chicago Bears until the late 1950s, the Cardinals were almost bankrupt, and owner Violet Bidwill Wolfner was interested in moving. St. Louis Main article: History of the St. Louis Cardinals (NFL) Due to the formation of a rival American Football League, the NFL allowed Bidwill to relocate the team to St. Louis Cardinals (notally, they were called Big Red, Gridbirds or Cardinals footballs to avoid confusion with the baseball team of the same name). [7] During the Cardinals (notally, they were called Big Red, Gridbirds or Cardinals footballs to avoid confusion with the baseball team of the same name). 28-year stay in St. Louis, they made only three playoff appearances (1974, 1975 & 1982), never hosted or won in any appearance. The Cardinals' general mediocobility, combined with the then 21-year-old's stadium, caused the game to move to Phoenix with a handshake agreement with state and local officials, and the team became the Phoenix Cardinals. The team won its first postseason victory since 1947, when it beat the Dallas Cowboys 20-7 in the Wild Card playoffs. In 2008, the Cardinals, led by quarterback Kurt Warner, won the NFC championship game against the Philadelphia Eagles and advanced to the Super Bowl for the first time in franchise history. They lost Super Bowl XLIII 27:23 to the Pittsburgh Steelers in the final seconds. [9] After their historic 2008 season, the Cardinals qualified for their second consecutive NFC West title, and in the division playoffs they were beaten by the final Super Bowl champion New Orleans Saints with 45:14. The next time they made the playoffs, they'd be in 2014, when they finished as a wild card. Arizona set the best regular-season record with 11-5, losing 7-8-1 to the NFC South Carolina Panthers. The following year, the Cardinals set a franchise-best record of 13-3, and the first playoff first round was ranked second to the NFC seed. They beat the Green Bay Packers 26-20, giving quarterback Carson Palmer the first playoff win. The Cardinals then advanced to the second game of the NFC Championship in their history, but were launched 15-1 with 49:15 to make seven. [11] Logos and uniforms Phoenix Cardinals uniform: 1989-1995 Arizona Cardinals uniform: 1996-2004 Chicago Cardinals logo. Since 1947, the team has had a cardinal logo that has been on the chips of football. The Cardinals moved to Arizona in 1988, and the following year they added the Arizona flag to their sleeves. In 1990, the team began wearing red pants with its white jerseys, as new coach Joe Bugel wanted to emulate his former employer, the Washington Redskins, who at the time wore burgundy pants with his white jerseys (the Redskins later returned to their gold pants from the 1970s with all the jerseys). In 1994, the Cardinals jerseys, and they had a entwined CC logo and three stripes on each sleeve. The uniform numbers were moved to the right chest. The trousers were khaki to simulate the color and material used during this period. The Cardinals also pulled the helmet logos for two games; at Cleveland and at home against Pittsburgh, Between 1982 and 1995, a cardinal head appeared on his helmet on the sleeve of a white iersey. In 1996, the Arizona state flag was moved higher up the sleeve after the cardinal's head was removed as the sleeves on football jerseys became shorter and black was removed as a accent instead of being replaced blue to match the dominant colour of the national flag. In 2002, the Cardinals began wearing all red and all-white combinations, and they continued to do so until 2004, before the team's transformation. In 2005, the team unveiled the first major changes in a century. The cardinal head logo has been updated to look slimmer and meaner than its predecessor. Many fans have called the previous version derisively parakeet. [12] After an eight-year absence, the brunette again turned into a accent, and trim lines were added to the outer shoulder, sleeve and side of the jerseys and trousers. Both red and white jerseys have the option of red or white trousers. Hoping to break a streak of defeats in six games, the Cardinals wore red pants for the first time on October 29, 2006, in a game at Lambeau Field against the Green Bay Packers. The Packers won with 31:14, and the cards went 1-7 in their bye. After this week, the Cardinals came home in a all-red combination against the Dallas Cowboys and lost 27-10. Arizona hasn't worn red pants for the rest of the season and won four of its last seven games. However, the following season, in 2007, the Cardinals again wore red pants with white jerseys. The Reds are paralyzed by red jerseys for home games against the Detroit Lions, San Francisco 49ers, Cleveland Browns and St. Louis Rams. Red pants weren't wearing suits in 2008, but they were used in home games against Seattle, Minnesota and St. Louis in 2009. The red pants wasn't reused until 2018, when they knocked out a combination against the Kansas City Chiefs. The Cardinals' first home game in Arizona, in 1988, saw them play in red jerseys at home in the first half of the season - erminating opponents suffered in their darker jerseys in the fall in Arizona, which often see temperatures above 100°F (38°C). However, that tradition did not continue when the Cardinals moved from Sun Devil Stadium to State Farm Stadium to 1006, as early-season games (and some home games late in the season) were played with the roof closed. With an inside temperature of 70°F (21°C), the team decided to wear red jerseys at home full-time. The Cardinals wore white jerseys at home for the first time at State Farm Stadium on August 29, 2008, in a preseason game against the Denver Broncos. The Cardinals wore white for the first time at State Farm Stadium. October 11, 2009. In October 2009, the NFL recognized Breast Cancer Awareness Month, and players wore pink accented items, including gloves, bracelets and shoes. The team thought pink accents looked better with white uniforms than with red ones. Between 1970 and 1983, during a number of seasons between 1989 and 2002, the Cardinals would have worn white when they hosted the Dallas Cowboys to force the Cowboys to make their own jinxed blue jerseys. They haven't done that since moving to the country's farmers' stadium. [required indication] In the 2010 season, the Cardinals made their debut with a new, alternate black deputies are written in white letters and are paired with white trousers, the Cardinals' Color Rush deputies used red letters and black pants for the occasion.
