They blame this on their ancestors, Elya, for not keeping madame Zeroni's promise to fortune teller in Latvia years ago. One day, Stanley Yelnats IV was wrongfully convicted of stealing a pair of shoes that donated to charity baseball player Clyde Sweet Feet in Livingston, and sentenced to 18 months in Camp Green Lake, a juvenile detention center instead of a prison. He arrives to learn that the camp is a parched lake run by the director, Louise Walker, assistant to Mr. Sir, and camp counselor Dr. Kiowa Pendanski. Prisoners known by their nicknames, including Zero, Zig-Zag, Armpit, Squid, X-Ray and Magnet, dig holes in the desert every day; You can look for a day off if the prisoners find something that excites Walker. Overnight, Mr. Sir rescues Stanley from a yellow-spotted lizard that warns Stanley that he is aggressive, angry and deadly. After finding a gold lipstick tube monogrammed K.B. and fossil, Stanley adopted the group and gets the nickname Caveman. Taking the faulty Magnet for stealing Mr. Sir's sunflower seeds, Stanley is placed in the principal's house, where old wanted posters and newspapers lead him to realize that KB consists of Katherine Kissin' Kate Barlow, a school teacher turned out out to be outlawed from the past. Walker asks Stanley to grab his nail polish and mentions that rattlesnake contains poison. After he and Mr. Sir explained what had happened to the sunflower seeds, Walker wounded Mr. Sir and allowed Stanley to return to his hole. Camp Green Lake has a history of a series of flashbacks: The 19th Century. Katherine Barlow is involved in a love triangle with the wealthy Charles Trout Walker, whom Barlow rejects, and an African-American onion seller named Sam, whom Barlow loves. One night, jealous Walker and the citizens of the city set fire to the schoolhouse and killed Sam. In retaliation, Barlow kills a local sheriff who ignored his plea for help and becomes an outlaw hunting down Walker's men. At one point, he steals the crate of gold from Elya's son Stanley Yelnats Sr. Twenty years later, the now bankrupt walkers track down Barlow and demand he hand over the treasure. Barlow refuses and tells them to dig up the treasure, after which Barlow dies from a lizard bite, and the Walkers dig for the treasure. In the present, when Pendanski mocks Zero, whose name is actually Hector Zeroni, the latter hits Pendanski with a shovel and runs away. After some deliberation, stanley's looking for hector. The couple struggle to survive in the desert without water. Finally, Stanley takes the now-ill Hector up the mountain, where they find a wild onion field and a water source, helping them to re-raise power; At the same time, Stanley ingnowingly keeps his ane's promise to the fortune teller and breaks the curse. While camping on the mountain, Hector tells Stanley that he stole Livingston's sneakers and threw them across the bridge to avoid the police, only to accidentally slam Stanley's head in. Returning to camp, Stanley and Hector examine the hole where Stanley found the lipstick and discover a crate before Walker, Mr Sir and Pendanski discover them. They'll soon find out that Walker, who is a descendant of his family, is using the prisoners to find his treasure. Adults can't steal the crate from the boys because the hole is full of lizards, passive with Stanley and Hector because of the onions they ate earlier. Adults choose to wait until the morning when the lizards retreat into the shadows. The next morning, the Attorney General and Stanley's lawyer arrive, accompanied by police; The crate Stanley found belonged to his namesake's great-grandfather. I'm Walker. Mr. Sir, who turned out to be a paroled felon named Marion Seville; And Who's a criminal ly ly ing himself as a doctor, will be arrested. Stanley and Zero are released, and for the first time in more than 100 years, Green Lake is raining. The Yelnats family claims ownership of the chest, which includes jewelry, deeds, and promissory notes that share with Hector, who uses it to hire private investigators to locate his missing mother, and both families live a life as financially easy as neighbors. [1] When he was looking for a child actor to play Stanley Yelnats, director Andrew Davis asked for a son who was like young Tom Hanks. Shia LaBeouf, who eventually got the role of Stanley, got the sense of character by reading the film's script and then reading the original novel after getting the part. LaBeouf worked on the Disney Channel at the same time, even in Stevens, and worked on his role in the film after filming it in the film Even Stevens. In the original book, Stanley is portrayed as obese, shed significant weights as the book progresses; However, the filmmakers decided to drop this aspect of the film, as it would have been difficult to convincingly portray the weight loss of a live-cast film. The film was shot at several locations, including Ridgecrest, California. Due to the heat inside the holes that have 150°F and ridgecrest's strong climate, the actors performed physical training with a stunt guide to stay in shape for a long time until filming. Filming has been a new experience for many child actors, especially LaBeouf, who has never done filming in such an unpredictable environment. In order to show the holes of the seven children, which were gradually dug during the day, various in each of which the seven holes received different levels of depth. For yellow-spotted lizards, fourteen bearded dragons were used, four of which were used for the main parts, and the rest as background atmospheric lizards. On April 18, 2003, Buena Vista Pictures Distribution released the film. Music The soundtrack to the film, which included grammy-winning single Just Like You Keb Mo', and Dig It a The D Tent Boys (with actors depicting D Tent group inmates), which is a music video that is regularly played on the Disney Channel. The soundtrack also has contributions from Eels, Devin Thompson, Dr. John, Eagle Eye Cherry, Fiction Plane, Little Axe, Moby, North Mississippi Alistars, Pepe Deluxé, Shad, Stephanie Bentley, and Teresa James and rhythm tramps. The composition was composed and conducted by Joel McNeely. [3] The film grossed a total of $67.4 million and an additional $4 million in international revenue, totaling $71.4 million at the box office, compared with a budget of $20 million, which brought moderate financial success to the film. It was released in the UK on 24 October 2003 and #9 on 24 October 2003. [4] Rotten Tomatoes' critical response gives the film a 78% rating, based on 139 reviews, and the site's consensus is: True to its true literary source, it's imaginative, intelligent family entertainment. [5] Metacriticen, which uses the average of critics' reviews, received 71 out of 100 reviews, based on criticism from 28 critics, which is usually favorable reviews. [6] Roger Ebert of the Chicago Sun-Times rated 3.5 out of four stars, writing that Davis had always been a director with a strong visual a sense and looked noble, dusty solitary. We feel like we're actually in a desert without boundaries. The cameraman, Stephen St. John, thinks big and frames the shots with an epic feel that adds weight to the story. I walked in and waited for a 13-year-old movie. and walked out feeling challenged and satisfied. He wonders how much more adult and sophisticated holes than Anger Management.
