Date: Unknown Datevip_offers_title © Copyright 2013-2020 Monster-Wiki.com Privacy Policy In the world after the cataclysm, most living things are there to kill you. It starts with wildlife, where many hungry predators -- like wolves coyotes - will try to eat you. Even seemingly tamed animals, and those that seem impassive at first, can become a serious threat. Some of the wildlife has also been affected by any disaster caused by the cataclysm: From simple massively enlarged ants and bees to terrifying marsh creatures and even zombified zombified there are many dangers in nature. Then there is the obvious problem of the zombified inhabitants of the many cities. They come in several different varieties, from the pesky zombie child to the huge hulk. Some still carry materials recounting their occupation before the apocalypse: soldiers, riot police or scientists, to name a few. Then there are those who have undergone more significant changes, giving them very inhuman traits: spitting, howlers, baby boomers, shocks and smokers are the most prevalent, but there are still many more sinister and powerful zombies lurking in cities and elsewhere. Be vigilant! Perhaps most disturbing, however, are the creatures that no longer resemble anything known - or perhaps never have. From animated goo blobs, to living plants and mushrooms, to things that are capable of completely destroying minds by simply being watched. There are many terrors in the world of cataclysm, and if you dare to deal with it, you better be prepared ... WARNING: This page can contain spoilers and ruin the joy of adventure. Remember, it's not dying, it's learning to do better next time! You can be detected in three ways: sight, perfume and sound. The way the view works is simple: most of the time, if you can see them, they can see you. Although, there is an exception for a night vision bonus - it improves a character's view radius without giving it away. The view has the highest priority for monsters; they will only use other meanings if they cannot see you or if they do not have the SEE flag. The secondary meaning is smell. The player's character is almost always surrounded by a cloud of perfume; As you move, your perfume follows slowly. Monsters to come won't feel you until you approach, or stay close to the same place for a while (and your scent cloud will spread). Therefore, for example, the ants will ignore a player entering at first, but then the player may have problems with overtaking them. Your fragrance can be intensified with strong scent trait and smelly and very smelly mutations or completely denied with bionic olfactory mask. The last sense is to hear. Monsters use it when they can't see you or feel you. When you make noise, the monsters follow it to its source. The louder the sound, the more the enemy will move towards this point, until it can see you or feel you. More info is on the noise page. Some monsters can't feel you at all; they just wander around randomly. Zombies have all three senses. Plants can generally and hear. Robots can usually see or hear. The album A Good Part of the Album was composed in synergy with Les Claypool, who played bass on several tracks and lent his voice to the song The Ballad of Buckethead . Buckethead presented this album for the first time at the opening of primus' concert in October and November 1999. Monsters and Robots is also listed in the catalogue of the German National Library[2] and some updated statistics consider it to be the best-selling record in Buckethead's solo career to date. Buckehead's Ballad The song The Ballad of Buckethead was chosen by Buckethead to promote the album. The video of the song, made by artist Dave McKean[4] using 3D modeling techniques, was nominated for Best Modern Rock Artist at Billboard's Music Video Awards. [without source] In addition, the song was also chosen by Buckethead to present the album at primus concerts in 1999. The Ballad of Buckethead is one of the few non-instrumental tracks in Buckethead's discography. The lyrics tell the (fictional) life of Buckethead, as well as taken up in the autobiographical section of his official website and other references in the guitarist's discography, according to which Buckethead grew up in cages on a chicken farm run by cruel masters, then found freedom by setting fire to the farm and first becoming a puppeteer , then guitarist.
