Unfortunately, no three-day cruise from Boston exists. The shortest length you can choose is four days, and this itinary usually sails to Canada or Bermuda.If you only get three days to change and and to hit the waves, you might consider a three-night cruise departing from cape liberty cruise port in New Jersey – although the booster takes approximately four hours. If you're wandering, you might also want to cruise a three-night cruise from NYC. When choosing a cruise for this list, we looked at the quality of the routes available from each cruise line, prioritizing a good itinary with port breaks in key destinations around the region. We are also considering hosting legislation on board, weighing the number, diversity and overall quality of the restaurant against passenger reviews. Finally, we weigh the ease of the cabin against each price point, looking for cruise lines that are known to deliver the highest value. In addition, we search for customer reviews on travel websites and personal travel blogs, looking at the first-person experience and overall reputation of each company. When is the best time for a cruise from Boston? The best time for a cruise from Boston depends on where you are going. Here, we solve it with a itinerary.If you sail to New England and Canada: The fall season offers the most amazing views, with the points having bursts of red and oren. However, the mine may be the most expensive at the moment. To save money, consider the sails in spring or early summer - but bring a lot of sweat, as temperatures will fall low at night. If you sail to Bermuda: Norway Cruise Line sails to Bermuda from mid-April to November. You'll find the cheapest rates in April and early May. Then, prices increase for summer vacations. If you sail to the Caribbean: You need a cruise in October, which is the only time Royal Caribbean sails to the Caribbean. However, mine is so cheap that it may be worth adjusting your schedule to make this work. Oceanview rooms for an 11-day cruise are less than a grand. Get to the harbor for your cruise from the cruise port of BostonBoston called Raymond L. Flynn Harbor Black Falcon Cruise. It is located in the Seaport area of South Boston, and is easily accessible from Logan International Airport. It costs between $20 to $30 to take an Uber or Lyft from The Airport.Or, you can take a Silver Line bus to 27 Drydock Ave. From there, it is a short five-minute walk to the cruise terminal. For those driving, there are plenty of train places next to the harbor - though it costs roughly $21 a day at the South Boston Waterfront Transportation Center premises. The 7 best cruise lines for kids With babysitting and tot-friendly activities, this is the best cruise line for children who will have your toddler smiling at sea from ear to ear. For whatever reason, many of you decided to drive to your cruise port or airport and from the need to leave your car there for that period. Unfortunately, parking charges can sometimes add a lot of your travel costs. One reader puts it exactly: The biggest rip-off of all is the fee that the port starts charges for parking. Miami, for example, charges $20.00 a day—that's $140.00 for your cruise week. Even if you can't avoid all parking costs, you may be able to cut it significantly under what some rip-off lot charges. Over the years, I've been reporting parking conditions—especially for airports—but cruise ports are becoming increasingly important. And in any case, you have two basic alternatives. {{{SmarterBuddy|aligned=left}}} Off-site Parking Airport. Some online websites allow you to book (and prepay) parking on the off-site site near the large US airport and many smaller ones. Participating lots almost always provide a shuttle service at no additional charge to/from the airport terminal for both departure and arrival. Some offer optional options either a self-garden or a valet garden; some let you choose between outdoor and indoor parking. Some also demand additional discount promotions, and some can arrange options while you are away from small services and maintenance for your car. Most claim they offer lower rates than you can find in official long-term lots at airports—claims I find that are usually true, but not always. In some cases, airport outer lots charge more than remote lots at the airport, but claim to provide better services. Here's a list of my current sites where you can book and pay for airport parking off-site: all serve the country's main airports, but the coverage of small towns varies. These sites request listings from parking lots—some free, some belong to the parking chain—and they online booking fees. Like vacation rentals, many individual lots list themselves on several websites. Beyond price, most off-site lots offer another advantage: the ability to book parking for busy holiday seasons. If you've ever driven to the airport just to see a bunch of signs a lot full, you'll appreciate the initial booking. Port Cruises. For some reason, the discount parking business seems to ignore the huge and growing cruise market. I found only one site sticking out in the parking lot of low-cost port outdoors, in Seattle. I found out for very busy ports in South Florida. At the very least, however, you can verify the port's parking price in advance: CruiseCheap broadcasts parking rates in the port for most major ports. Parking Hotel Package Airport. If you are using an airport that is far from your home and you plan to drive and leave your car at the airport as you go, hundreds of airport area hotels offer packages that combine accommodation for the night or two with up to 14 days of parking at no extra charge at the hotel. In most cases, the night you buy can either at the beginning or end of your journey. I know three online sites that organize this parking package at airport hotels: ParkSleepFly has been leading the field for years, with options at large and medium-sized airports in the United States, six in Canada, seven at Europe's main entrance, and one in Cancun and Hanoi. Stay 123 lists about similar numbers in the United States and Canada plus 17 in the U.K., along with links to other local sites abroad. BuyReservations lists accommodation/parking packages near 71 U.S. airports. In addition, many hotels and motels at airports and ports independently offer the same package. Unfortunately, if they don't list one of the big sites across the country, they aren't easy to find. Typical hotel garden packages include one night (double or single, up to quad), parking for seven to 14 nights, depending on location, as well as shuttle transfers to/from the airport for both departure and arrival flights. One-night package rates are almost always higher than the lowest available rates in hotels, but the difference is usually lower than the cost of a week's parking lot or two in the airport area car park. Most of the time, I find that the price difference works for less than $5 per day—and almost always less than the airport charges. Most participating hotels allow you to take the hotel at night of your start or end of your trip, or one at each end—an option that might be useful depending on your specific itinerary and how tired you expect to be on your return flight. Port Cruises. Unlike those parking lots, the hotel's parking packaging site has moved to a cruise parking lot in a big way. ParkSleepFly and Stay 123 provides separate search functions for cruise port hotels, and each includes major U.S. and Canadian cruise ports. BuyReservations lists hotels offering cruise transfers on the airport selection list, but in fewer ports than the other two. Considering the typical port location, most participating hotels are the city centre or in other central areas. Unlike airport conditions, however, many cruise promotions exclude bilateral transfers without charge to/from the port. In a spot check, I found some offers with one-way chargeless transfers, but none covered both directional shuttles. There may be, however. To describe the system, I checked Miami cruise a week in early July. In this case, all participating hotels are in the airport area, but all offer one-way transfers without charge to the port. At ParkSleepFly, one-night stays with parking packages at Howard Johnson Plaza are $99, including one-way port transfers and up to 60-day parking lots; the unenforceable rate is $71. This means you can get a week of parking for an extra $48-$28 on added hotel bills, say, $20 to pay the hotel for a round trip. For someone who needs a hotel night, however, it is a no-brainer. Even if you don't need a hotel night, the $119 amount is still slightly less than the port parking charge. Trust but Verify No single example can cover your exact journey. As with just about anything to do with travel, always check the price and never receive discount claims or less expensive without comparing alternatives. You can check the parking rates at the airport directly—all the airport websites I checked showed the parking rates. Rate.
