Chi curling iron spin and curl

Okay, so using the centeroncell command to teleport to whiterun makes me end up far from the actual whiterun interception. Is there a way to coc into a whiterun without a teleport to a particular house? I remember that I had the command to teleport to the city whiterun directly (and not as warmaidens), but I can not remember it. Coc whiterunhold or something but it does not work. Thanks! aergaww Edited by parcheezy, 31 December 2015 - 12:05PM. I started to encounter a bit of random hostility to the NPC in Whiterun a few days ago and I can't figure out what's going on. The only mods I installed recently were model/texture mods, so I don't think it's mod-related, although I also just get dragonborn dlc. Here's what's going on: The first NPC to go hostile was Ardwen's dog outside Whiterun's stables. Normally the dog is just a fixture, but I quickly traveled to the Whiterun stables and the dog was immediately hostile and attacking. I checked the wiki and did not see anything about the dog going hostile (or what I could do to cause it), so I re-loaded from the saved game (I can kill orcs but not puppies ). If I travel quickly to Whiterun properly and then go out to the stables, the dog is fine. If I travel quickly to the stables, the dog is hostile immediately and will remain so forever. The second NPC to go hostile was Uthgerd Intact. That's what happened when I was heading to Whiterun in Dragonsreach. I met her in one of the plaza areas and she immediately bee-lined for me the guns were and spewed I knew I would find you and the next to prepare for the death of the tongue. Again, there's nothing in the wiki about it (there was an error about it being hostile in the Bannered Mare Inn and how to fix it, but it didn't work). This was odder, because according to the wiki never leaves bannered Mare Inn, but I met her outside in the square. I ended up killing her and using the console command recycleactor to bring her back. She was immediately hostile again when I went to Bannered Mare to check it out. I also tried using the console command resetAI on both NPC without luck. They are non-hostile for a split second then and then they go immediately hostile again. I thought maybe I had some items or contracted some disease/condition that was causing their hostility, but the dog became hostile only when I traveled to the stables directly, so I don't think that's the case. Any ideas what might be going on? Any way to restore hostility flags other than resetAI command? I'm not really familiar with the console, so I'm hoping I missed the command somewhere. Thanks for any help! Maybe it is related to the reward somewhere, and so there is a console command resetai. Just click on the enemy NPCS and press Enter. Another thing to try is once you teleport there, immediately press the T button and wait 24 hours, then try coming. Focus on the NPC on the console and use stopcombat, and then set player 1 on them to eliminate aggressive behavior. No reward in Whiterun, just a little one in Winterhold. I tried to resetAI previously without luck. He tried targeting Uthgerd in the console and using stopcombat and setrelationrank player 1 stopped the fight. She shabby her sword and returned to her place with her back to me. However, as soon as she sat down and saw me again, he immediately became hostile again and attacked. I tried it twice, just to be sure. I'm really not sure what's going on. Then you have a mod or script causing the NPC to become hostile. Start one by one by shutting down the mods until the one that causes them to become hostile is removed. For prosperity: Irieth's aggression error is well documented. If the guards suddenly attack you when you enter dragonsreach, simply let them be killed or reload your latest save, attack the guard and save the weapon. You will be approached for assaulting a security guard and charged with 40gp. Pay it, and the error will be fixed. I remember my first completely unmodded Oldrim playthrough I had random companion members go hostile. I think it's a mistake in the game.
