If you're a recent grad or career change, your best bet may be learning your way out of this recession but be careful that a particular level is not equal to the useless level, said Tory Hoen, co-author of the upcoming edition of the Gradspot.com Post-College Life Guide. A cool and useful degree course – it's just a matter of finding them. Do you live in textbooks and pajamas in college? A library science degree has a low rate and can lead to a cool career, Hoen masters with other surprising benefits: NYU-Tisch, two degrees in business and film production and journalism of Columbia, and filling in blank degrees, which paired communication with science, law, business, public affairs, religion and environmental sciences. You may not think that pairing the media with professional staples is necessary, but think again: the ability to summon quick and concise creativity is valuable in most industries. It's really true that business intelligence will take you in the long run, said Andy Speer, VP of technology solutions for Technisource. France has the most prestigious business schools in the world in HEC and INSEAD, and there are only a few companies to frown on international relations or public policy degrees from Sciences Po in Paris or the London School of Economics. However, ongoing education is not necessarily extravagant. Many companies, especially in technology, are known for employing self-taught talent. Sometimes it's as simple as identifying new specialties that you want to track and buy a few books on Amazon for computer engineers, Speer said. Need more motivation? Try an online certification or a local trade school. If you can excel in sample work during an interview, few employers will be interested in where you choose your skills. Knowing brands and devices can also help. Phones and mobile are the fastest evolving technologies, both from a hardware and software perspective. One of the biggest costs for many middle-class families is the school costs for their children. Many parents pay thousands of dollars each year to send their children to private schools, especially those who live in areas where public schools are of poor quality. A 2014 comparison by real estate website Trulia found that on ZIP Public schools received the highest score, with only 4% of children going to private schools, compared with 19% of children in postcodes with low-rated public schools. However, that doesn't mean that parents living in good school districts spend less overall. Homes in high-performing school districts often cost more than other homes in the same area - about 32% more, according to Trulia's study, so for many families, the additional cost of housing increases more than what they would pay for private schools. Sign up for Chase Freedom Unlimited® or Chase Freedom Flex cashback for grocery purchases up to $12k spent in your first year, in addition to rebate rates for the general category (if you sign up by January 13, 2021). The $200 registration bonus (after spending $500 in the first 3 months) 0% apr preliminary for 15 months, which means that parents who want the best education possible for their children have a difficult choice: paying directly for a private school or paying indirectly for a home near a good public school. To find out what's best, they need to know how these two costs compare, and what options are the cost of private schools according to figures from the National Center for Educational Statistics (NCES), about 4.5 million American children enrolled in private schools in 2011-2012. More than 80% of these students are in schools with some religious affiliations, about 43% are in Catholic schools, and another 37% go to schools that identify as Christian, Jewish or specific Christian, about 68% of all private schools have religious orientation, while 32% do not mitigate. In 2014, the national median household income in the United States was $53,657, according to the U.S. Census Bureau, meaning that median-income families would spend about 20% of their income sending just one child to a private school and 40% for two children. However, the cost of tuition varies depending on the type of school. The average tuition is $6,890 per year for Catholic schools, and $21,510 for non-religious schools, so families with average incomes will pay less than 13% of the income to send their children to Catholic schools, but more than 40% for non-relief schools. The cost of a public school is easy to identify – only a fixed amount of dollars per year. Calculating the cost of public schools is more complicated, you need to know which neighborhood parents choose for their school, the cost of living in them. And the cost is compared to the cost of living in other neighborhoods. A good starting point is with Niche, a website that scores and compares U.S. school districts based on factors such as student test scores, graduation rates, health and safety scores, and reviews from parents and students. Each year, Niche lists the 10 schools that provide the best grades in America for 2016. Pennsylvania – Suburban Philadelphia – This district earns an A-plus rating for academic performances, teachers, extracurricular activities, and so on, according to Trulia, the median sales price for homes in this area is $532,500. Trulia said the median house price is just $287,000, or $1,407 per month. Therefore, families with one child will spend less by living in Paoli and sending their children to private schools. However, families with two or more children will spend less by living in the town of Tredyffrin, where extra money paid for housing will cover school costs for their children. Everybody. It compared the cost of the private sector to public schools for two fictional families living in eastern Massachusetts: One family spends $2,120 a month on a median house in Auburndale village, which has the best public school in the country. Others spend $998 a month for homes in the neighborhood, the average school, plus an average of $782 a month for private school tuition. Adding these two costs together, private school families come forward by $340 a month. However, the math changed completely if both families had two children. In this case, the public school family saved a total of $70,000 during the school year of both children. Keeping school costs under control generally appears to be public schools. - Even those in expensive neighborhoods. - It's a better deal for families with multiple children, while private schools tend to be worth more than for children only. However, this rule is not true for everyone. Parents who choose the right private school can bring tuition to the right level, even with many children in school at once, and on the other hand, smart choices about housing can make living in a good school district the right choice, even with one child. Private school options one way to make A more affordable school is choosing a school with lower tuition as stated above religious schools – especially Catholic ones – tend to be more affordable than non-local private schools. According to NCES figures, families can send two children to a Catholic school at an average cost of $13,780 a year. These schools use educational methods that focus on getting children to learn on their own using all five feelings. Montessori programs are mainly for young children, but some programs extend to early teens, according to a 2009 survey by the North American Montessori Teachers Association, the cost of a year in Montessori school varies widely. But the median price for elementary school students is about $8,600, which makes Montessori schools, but about other religious schools. Parents can also save money by starting their children in a public elementary school and then transferring them to a private high school. Private school scholarship families who have difficulty paying private school tuition can sometimes bring it within their financial access through scholarships and other forms of financial assistance. Some schools have their own financial assistance programs, and others do not have financial assistance programs. Participate in national, regional or state scholarship funds for children. Initially, the Washington Scholarship Fund for Children (CSF) now provides some scholarships for low-income families across the country. Scholarships cover up to 75% of tuition, with an average amount of $1,700 per child. They can be used for any type of school. - Religion, secular or even home learning In 2015-16, families had to meet children in primary schools and follow the national school lunch program guidelines in 2015-16, providing scholarships to more than 24,000 students. Young Scholars Program Run by the Jack Kent Cooke Foundation, the young academic program provides scholarships for middle and high school students with the highest scores. About 60 students receive scholarships each year, which can be used for boarding school, day school or school parochial (religion) besides Supporting young students receives academic advice, access to special programs and other resources. Families earning up to $95,000 can apply, but most young academics come from families with incomes below $60,000, the application period runs from January to April, and students know by September whether they qualify for help. A better chance This program is aimed at students of color in grades 4-9 who have received a good overall score and are active in extracurricular activities. The program doesn't really provide scholarships, but it means students who gualify for more than 300 high and high schools across the country, both religiously and secularly, and help them apply for financial assistance from those schools. A better chance, said most students who apply through the program, receive financial assistance but do not provide a specific percentage. The application process begins in February for the academic year that begins 18 months later. There are scholarship programs and other school vouchers operating in specific states or regions of the country. Parents can find out about programs in their area through private school websites. Paying for a home near the best public schools is generally more expensive than other neighborhoods in the same common area. However, there are some exceptions to this rule. Neighboring Scouts compiled a list of the 20 largest urban neighborhoods in the country that combine good schools with affordable house prices. For the 10 largest metro areas in the U.S., the most popular neighborhoods are: Metro Area Median House Value Public School, New York, NY Queens, NY $234,924 922 Los Angeles, CA Los Alamitos, CA $411,225 87 Chicago, IL Elmhurst, IL $260,105 86 Dallas, TX Richardson, TX $259,597 90. Philadelphia, PA Narberth, PA $274,086 96 Houston, TX Friendswood, TX, DC Laurel, MD $279,307 88 Miami, FL Hallandale Beach, FL $184,819 52 Atlanta, GA Fayetteville, GA $202,980 65 Boston, MA Brookline, MA $390,447 98 If the area you live in – or want to live in – is not part of a major metropolis, neighboring scouts can still help you find the right area. You can enter your state and region into the advanced search engine of the site, then select your criteria for quality, school, price and other features that are important to you, such as crime rate or walking ability. However, to use this feature, you need to subscribe to the site, which costs $40 per month, $90 per quarter, or $192 per year. Another way to pay for a home in a top school district is to choose to live deliberately. For example, in Tredyffrin Township, PA has a listing of a three-bedroom house for just $390,000. The last word when choosing a place to live a school district is not the only factor to consider. For beginners, you want to find a home near your workplace, so you don't have to face a long journey every day – it can be a house close enough to allow you to walk or ride a bike to work. It's good that you want to be close to friends and family, and ultimately you want to live in a neighborhood that's comfortable for you with access to all the amenities you're interested in, from local businesses to a good public library. So if your favorite neighborhood isn't the best school, don't give up, but crunch some numbers and see how much you can save by combining affordable homes with private schools, or vice versa, if your beloved place has excellent schools and sky-high housing prices, looking for ways to find affordable homes in the neighborhood. Do you attend a public or private school? What kind of choice would you choose for your children? Child
