Blimey ... 11 a.m.: Sitting in front of my computer and drinking coffee, I saw an email from my account stating, Dear Madam, My sister is very dangerous. I want to galvanization. Give me the tranquilizers, please! Happy day, Srinivasan Hmm . . . Either her sister is a serial killer and she has decided to cut it in half or as I quickly figure (with her help of a strong swig of coffee), he is saying that his sister is sick and he wants to see her. Isend him an email back informing him that since this is his nineteenth relative in grave danger, heneedsto either consult a naturopath or a doctor to remove a curse on his family or to simply stop lying to take extra days off. I shut my computer and hurriedly get ready to reach the office. 4p.m.: I am at the store and wear a laurel wreath to launch our new collection when I notice that instead of dealing with a customer who will hopefully spend all her husband's hard-earned money on my beautiful, gold-embossed candles, my salesgirl is fast asleep at her desk. Itentatively wiped roof from the cash register and give her a sharp nudge. She helps awake and then gives me her sorry for lack of sleep because of her husband's daily snore and torture. Blimey... you're not going to be 7.45p.m.:Motherhascomeover for a cup of tea, and as we are chatting, the prodigal son runs into the room and yells that he needs to buy a book urgently for his English assignment. Crossword is the nearest bookstore, so we quickly decide to go there. I grab my bag with one hand, lug the baby with the others and hastily ask mom to drop us off at the store while instructing the guard to reach your informant to reach the Crossword in twenty minutes.m :We are at the bookstore and I tell the prodigal son, Hey, lets go to that aisle, I need some pens and I can see some marker pens there. And the baby immediately chirps. Where pens? Show! She is at such a precious age; curious about everything. Webuytvo books on poetry for the prodigal son and a Dorasticker book for the baby and head out. Standing on the dark pavement, I am scanning the street for my cart on a vaail. I try calling the driver but the number is out of reach, and after fifteen minutes staring at bypassers-by with the baby's squirming in my arms, the prodigal son says that these are rickshaws. The baby squeaks, Where is it? Show me! 8.30p.m.:Theprodigalsonhailstherickshawandweallclamberin.Thisisthebaby'sfirstrideinarickshawand she is rather thrilled. Wethen turn into the long privateroad that leadsto our building when rickshaw driver suddenly says, Madam, fell open and before I could protest, he continued, Arrey, hes married to Rajesh to Rajesh daughters, na, and Dimple Kapadia were there but her daughter didn't have it with her; especially now that she is the only heir. So this is Akshay and his family have all moved to that big house in Bandra. Bemused with the news, I sense this morose man is spouting. Isay, Really? And how are you going to know that? Pat comes the answer. Madam, rickshaw chalatahun, sab pata hai. (Werrickshaw drivers know everything.) The prodigal son starts laughing hysterically as I struggle to pull out my fare of seven rupees. and werrun up the stairs to our house. Themanofthehouseis sprawled on the couch and breathes start narrating the whole sequence. Sofunny! Listen, na, apparently Akshay Kumar used to live here but now he lives in Bandra and his wife hates her mother and ... Theman from the house narrow eyes and exclaimed, You were headed in that direction but now you have gone certifiably insane. What are you doing in the area? Thatsus, we are! Whereferstotheirentirefamilyinthethirdperson? You are really an idiot. I immediately correct him. The word is not idiot but illust. Ileistis a person who talks in the third person, whereas an idiot just talks; though they sound similar, they cannot be used in place of each other. Shrugging his shoulders and giving me a silly smile, he retorted, I don't know what an illust is but I know not when I see one. The baby immediately stopped playing with his tea set, looked up and said, Where are the idiots? Show! Blimey... you're not going to be B:Beware of Mommy Dearest My mother has never been the Band-Aid dispensing, cupcake-baking, check-on-homework sort of mother that one sees in commercials. She is funny, sometimes swacky, a little eccentric and fallen man, and has consistently over the years found new and unique ways of to embarrass me, starting at birth when I decided that the naming me Twinkle is foolproof way of making sure that I would get teased throughout my life, have immigration officers at various airports eat my passport and shake with hysterical laughter and strangers stalk me with WhatsApp messages like, Twinkle, Twinkle, little star, I hope you get hit by a car! Here is a short list of the things that she has done to traumatize me at various stages. I AM THIRTEEN: I studied in Panchgani and have been selected to play in inter-school basketball match matches. Mother has come to see the match, as it is a big moment in my life. In the middle of the match, she starts yelling of the stands, Tina! Tina!
