The story is told from the perspective of Shreve, the grandson of Absalom Sutpen, and a fictionalized account of the life of Thomas Sutpen, a wealthy Mississippi planter who is a central character in the novel. Shreve is a businessman and scholar, and the novel is told through his perspective, focusing on the events of the story and the characters involved. The novel is divided into ten chapters, each of which is named after a number or letter, and follows the lives of the Sutpen family and their relationships with other Mississippians.

The novel is a complex and detailed portrayal of the Southern plantation system and the lives of those who lived and worked on the plantations. It is a rich tapestry of characters, themes, and events, and is considered one of the greatest works of American literature. The novel is a masterpiece of realism, with its vivid descriptions of the Southern landscape, its characters, and its events. It is a powerful work that has had a lasting impact on American literature and culture.
