At the center of the film is Erik Prince, the ex-Navy SEAL who founded the controversial private military company Blackwater. The next project is directed by Michael R. Roskam (Bullhead, Berlin station). He is also working with Collateral's Stuart Beattie on a new version of Beattie's first screenplay, adapted from Prince's 2013 book Civilian Warriors: The Inside Story of Blackwater and the Unsung Heroes of the War on Terror, and Adam Ciralsky's 2009 Vanity Fair article Tycoon, Contractor, Soldier, Spy. Prince Jacquelyn Martin/AP/Shutterstock The image will focus on Prince, the billionaire capitalist being prosecuted by a grand jury investigation, secret CIA assassination missions and the voluntary manslaughter trial of five ex-employees. Producers say it will be a deep dive into the industry of modern warfare and reflect on the dark convergence of capitalism and patriotism. The tone for the complicated theme, which will make for a juicy lead role, is described as American Sniper meets The Insider. Imperative's Dan Friedkin, Bradley Thomas and Ryan Friedkin will co-produce with Nicolas Chartier of Voltage Pictures and Craig Flores of Bread and Circuses Entertainment. Ciralsky and its P3 Media will produce. 30West will arrange the financing and distribution. One of the studio's current projects is Lyrebird, the true story of an art forger who slammed the Nazis with smacked-up copies of masterpieces. Guy Pearce plays and Friedkin makes his directorial debut. Roskam is repped by UTA, Anonymous Content and Jackoway Austen. Beattie is made by Paradigm and Joan Vento-Hall and Chartier with Law Corp. Prince is repatized by Gray Krauss LLP, Ciralsky is repatized with Endeavor Content and Gray Krauss. Subscribe to Deadline Breaking News Alerts and keep your inbox in your mood.
