The album was produced, recorded and mixed by Felton Pilate and James Earley. The album was ranked number one for 21 weeks on the U.S. Billboard 200, mainly due to the success of the single U Can't Touch This. [2] Similarly, the album saw longevity on the Top R& B/Hip-Hop Albums chart, peaking at number one and remaining on top for 28 weeks. [3] It was the best-selling 1990 album in the United States and one of the best-selling hip hop albums of all time. [4] The singles released by the album all proved successful on radio and television, with U Can't Touch This, Pray, Have You Seen Her, Here Comes the Hammer and Yo!! Sweetness (UK only) all charts. The album raised rap music to a new level of popularity. It is the first hip-hop album ever certified by riaa for sales of more than ten million in the United States. [5] It remains the all-time best-selling album of its kind. [6] To date, the album has sold up to 17 million copies worldwide since July 15, 2012. [7] [8] Details album Please Hammer Don't Hurt 'Em was released on February 12, 1990, and features the successful single U Can't Touch This (which sampled Rick James' 1981 single Super Freak). It was produced, recorded, and mixed by Felton Pilate and James Earley on a modified tour bus in 1989. [9] Despite heavy airplay and a No. 27 chart debut, U Can't Touch It peaked at No 8 on the U.S. Billboard Hot 100 chart because it was only released as a twelve-inch single, [10] [clarification required] However, the album a No 1 hit for 21 weeks, mainly because of this single, the first time ever for a rap record on the pop charts. The song has and continues to be used in many movies and TV shows to date, and appears on soundtrack and album collection as well. [reference required] referral] singles included Have You Seen Her (a cover of Chi-Lites) and Pray (a beat sample from Prince's When Doves Cry and Faith No More's We Care Much[11] which was his biggest success in the US, peaking at No 2. Pray was also a major UK success, peaking at No 8. The album was notable for sampling other high-profile artists and gave some of these artists and wet also sample Prince's Soft and Wet. Hammer toured extensively in Europe, which included a sold-out concert at the National Exhibition Centre in Birmingham. Sponsored by PepsiCo International, Pepsi-Cola CEO Christopher A. Sinclair went on tour with him during 1991. By June 1991, the album sold 14.5 million copies worldwide. [13] It would go on to become the first hip-hop album to win diamond status, selling more than 18 million units to date. [6] [14] [15] [16] After album success, Hammer embarked on a 1990-1991 world tour with 144 dates yielding over $32 million dollars. [17] According to Guinness World Records of hit singles, the album cost just $10,000 to produce. [18] The video for Here Comes the Hammer turned out to be the most expensive video on this album, Hammer's second most expensive behind 2 Legit 2 Quit. (May 2018) (Learn how and when to remove this template message) his clean-cut image, and his perceived over-dependence on using hooks from other artists to base his singles. He was mocked in music videos by. C and Ice Cube. Oakland hip-hop group Digital Underground mocked him on the cd insert of his sex packets album when placing his image with the other members and referred to him as an unknown abandoned, and also referred to the song The Humpty Dance with Shock G dissing him, telling People they say 'Ya look like MC Hammer for crack, Humpty!' [reference required] LL Cool J mocked him in To tha of Dawn, a track about Mama said knock you out his album, calling Hammer an amateur, swinging a hammer from a bodybag [his pants], and saying, my old gym teacher wasn't supposed to rap. LL should also refer to the spoof later with i Shot Ya (remix), a piece about Mr. Smith's album. (LL Cool J will later praise and praise hammer/talent skills for his 100 VH-1 Hip Hop songs, which aired in 2008.) [referral required] However, Ice-T came to Hammer's defense for the 1991 album O.G. Original Gangster: A Special Shout-Out for My Man M.C. Hammer: a lot of people dis you, man, but just jealous. Ice-T later explained that it had nothing against people who were pop-rap from the beginning, as Hammer had, but only against emcees that change from being hardcore or dirty to being pop-rap so they can sell more records. [reference required] Please Hammer Don't Hurt 'Em was also criticized for sampling other musicians' songs. [11] The album tested high-profile artists and gave some of these artists a new fanbase as a result. [reference required] U can't touch this Super Freak sample from Rick James; Dancin' Machine sample of Jackson 5; Have You Seen Her is a semi-cover of the Chi-Lytes song. Help the Children Insert Marvin Gaye's Mercy My Mercy (The Ecology); Pray and She's Soft and Wet try out Prince When Doves Cry and Soft and Wet songs respectively. This Is What We Do was a 1990 piece released by Hammer (with B Angie B) for the film and soundtrack of Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles. Legal issues Rick James sued Hammer for copyright infringement for the song U Can't Touch This, but the lawsuit was settled out of court when Hammer agreed to credit James as a co-composer, effectively cutting James in on the millions of dollars the record was earning. Hammer was also indicted by a former producer, Felton Pilate (who is also a member of the successful R&B band, Con Funk Shun) and several of his former supporters, and faced accusations that members of the performance troupe endured an abusive, militaristic atmosphere. [23] In 1992, Hammer also acknowledged in depositions and court documents to get the idea for the song Come the Hammer by a Texas-based Christian recording artist named Kevin Abdullah. Abdullah had filed a US$16 million lav against Hammer for copyright infringement for his song oh-oh, You Got the Shing. [24] The hammer was installed with Abdullah for $250,000 in 1995.
