We chose a distinctive typet that looked retro authentic along with a simple color palette to help define Ed's identity. We also re-worked the Star Foods position to encourage shopping, enhanced visibility of the loyalty program and made Ed's Shakes a hero product across the menu and selling point. Read more | 4. February 2019 Retro American restaurant, Ed's restaurant has added three new vegetarian items to its menu, including two dairy-free milkshakes. American diner restaurant Ed is known for its impressive burgers and gourmet milkshakes, and now the eatery welcomes a vegan by launching new vegetarian menu items - including two delicious dairy-free milkshakes. The new shakes are plant-based versions of the restaurant's famous strawberries and Reese's peanut butter shakes and made with vegan ice cream, as well as a oat-based dairy alternative, giving them thick cream and flavours that are synonymous with Ed shaking. As well as new shakes, the restaurant chain has also added its very own moving mountain burger made from mushrooms, wheat and soa proteins - topped with guacamole, plant-based cheese, salsa and sliced jalapenos for those who love it hot! We know that consumer attitudes to dining are changing rapidly and we want to accommodate this, said Catherine Salox, marketing manager at Ed Restaurant in a statement she sent to Vegan Food & Living. Going vegetarian or vegetarian doesn't mean food should be bland or boring, and we're here to make that point. We want vegans to feel that when they come to eat with us they're quite welcoming and the burger can be enjoyed by anyone - it's good food that just happens to be vegetarian. New vegetarian foods can now be enjoyed in more than 22 locations across the UK. Uk.
