2020 united states presidential election in pennsylvania

[Washington Reuters] - Georgia on Thursday recognized President-elect Joe Biden as the winner of the state's presidential election, according to a statement on the Georgia Secretary of State's website. (Editing by Eric Beech and Daphne Psaledakis: Chizu Nomiya)ma) The New York Stock Exchange announced late Thursday that it will begin delisting three Chinese telecommunications companies to comply with President Donald Trump's executive order targeting companies affiliated with the Chinese military. According to statements from women, lawyers and channels, the five female anchors will no longer work for the New York news channel as part of a settlement in an age and gender discrimination lawsuit that alleges they were taken over in favor of young talent. The women who filed the lawsuit in Manhattan federal court in June 2019 include Roman Torre of Montclair, New Jersey, in his early 60s, who was NY1's first on-air hire when he began the program in 1992. The settlement of the lawsuit was announced by the woman, her lawyer, NY1. After an astonishing 2020 stock market rally for investor business daily, here are some key lessons for 2021. Sales of Tesla and Nio are looming. Check out 25 stocks in the buy zone. Rumors of Bill Ackman's demise were greatly exaggerated. After a brutal three-year stretch from 2015 to 2017, Ackman's Pershing Square Holdings (OTC: PS+ZF) has now compiled consecutive years of stellar returns, and Ackman has almsied concerns that he has lost his stock-picking touch. As of December 22, Pershing Square's net asset value increased by 67.5% year-on-year in 2020. Pershing Square's stock is also up 82% in 2020, crushing a 15.4% rise in the S&P 500. From 2015 to 2017, Ackman's fund lost about 30% of its NAV, lagging the S&P 500 by about 60%. However, Ackman followed up with a 58% NAV gain in 2019 for another big year in 2020. Einhorn, Ackman and others adjusted their portfolio Ackman's huge year: Ackman boosted his 2020 returns with a short-term bet of $27 million on corporate bonds in March, ultimately resulting in a profit of $2.6 billion in what he called one of the biggest deals in history. Ackman also raised $4 billion this year to launch Pershing Square Tontine Holdings Limited (NYSE: PSTH) SPAC, now the largest SPAC on the market. At the time of the July IPO, Ackman said SPAC plans to take about six months to identify targets and announce deals in the first quarter of 2021. Pershing had just seven shares at the time of the company's most recent quarterly filing. His three largest holdings are Lowe's Companies Inc. (NYSE: LOW) and Restaurant Brands International, Inc. (NYSE: QSR). Benzinga's take: Ackman has a long track record of home run trading and dud investing. In years like 2020, he looks like an investment genius, but losing past bets on Valeant Pharmaceuticals and Borders bookstores has investors smarting. Investors should look for Ackman and his fund to continue to be risky, high-reward investments beyond 2021. Data mining software company Palantir Technologies (NYSE: PLTR) shares began trading on the big board on September 30, following a direct public going public (DPO). No new shares in Palantia shares were offered in this direct listing. Instead, existing shareholders were able to sell shares to new investors. Source: Sundries Photo/Shutterstock.com The New York Stock Exchange initially set a base price of $7.25 per share, but on the first trading day Palantia shares opened at $10 and closed at $9.50. On November 27, Palantia shares hit a record $33.50 and are now flirting with $25.InvestorPlace - Stock Market News, Stock Advice & Trading Tips Denver-based Palantia was founded in 2003 by a group of executives led by PayPal founder Peter Thiel (NASDAQ: PYPL). He was also one of the early supporters of Facebook (NASDAQ: FB). Palantia's first work has been considered controversial and even secretive, especially with government agencies such as the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA). Scoring 10 of the hottest CPCs of 2020 in the new year's preparations Today's article looks at what investors can expect from the company. Pltr is relatively overvalued, but investors with long-term horizons can see a dip towards $22.5 or less as an opportunity to go for longer PLTR shares. Here's why. Government contracts and Palantia shares Since 2003, Palantia has expanded its customer base to other governments as a private company. In November 2019, for example, Palantia and Japan-based insurance company Sampo (OTCMKTS: SMPNY) established a joint venture. Then, in June 2020, we launched a Real Data Platform for Security, Health and Welfare. A recent academic study by Roxana Akhmetova of Oxford University argues that partnerships are in question because Thiel is a Trump adviser. In September, Palantia was awarded a three-year contract worth $44.4 million by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration(FDA). It provides data management and analysis services to the FDA's Drug Evaluation and Research Center (CDER), which focuses on potential new drugs. In early December, Palantia announced its cooperation with PalantiaThe Greek government. The country is working to improve its COVID-19 response efforts by integrating more data and analytics in the decision-making process. Recently, Palantir developed a tool for the U.S. government to monitor the production and distribution of coronavirus vaccines. The UK National Health Service is also working with Palantia. In the summer, CNBC reported that the NHS in England had given Palantia access to the personal data of millions of UK residents. Palantia recently signed a two-year contract with the NHS. You now provide your organization with a software platform for data processing. In fact, in a recent press release, Palantir stresses that it assists a diverse range of institutions that respond to the COVID-19 pandemic and adapt to the future. How Palantia's recent earnings came in mid-November, Palantia released third-quarter results. Revenue was $289.4 million, up 52% to 52%. Net loss of $853.3 million was converted to a diluted net loss of 94 cents per share. As of September 30, total cash and equivalents were $1.8 billion. Management raised its full-year 2020 revenue guidance by 44% year-over-year to $1.072 billion from $1.07 billion. The company highlighted its international expansion in its quarterly statement. Alexander C. Karp, co-founder and CEO, said, Sampo's work is vital to Japan's welfare and safety, and kengo Sakurada, the company's group chief executive, has been an important and reliable partner in working with Sampo to expand its reach in Asia. The forward P/E, P/S, and P/B ratios of Palantia shares are 208.33, 42.58, and 37.0, respectively. PLTR shares are bubbling, even for growth stocks that can get a significant number of government contracts. Given the indicators, it is now one of the most expensive software stocks on the street. For example, the subsequent P/E and P/B ratios for spdr S&P software and service ETFs (NYSEARCA:XSW) are 30.62 and 6.63. Bottom-line Palantia is a growth stock and is likely to create shareholder value for years to come. But it is richly valued and expensive. Thus, long-term investors can consider buying a dip, especially if the price falls towards $22.50. Are you currently a shareholder? You might think you would trigger a covered call position for PLTR shares. Then you can probably protect some of your paper's profits. For example, a call targeted by an ATM that expires on January 15 reduces portfolio volatility and provides some down protection. Investors can also be considered by foreign exchange trading funds (ETFs) that hold Palantia shares in their portfolios. Examples include Renaissance IPO ETF (NYSEARCA: IPO), First Trust U.S. Equity Opportunity ETF (NYSEARCA: FFX), Vanguard Midcap ETF (NYSEARCA: VO), Arc Next Generation Internet ETF (NYSEARCA: ARKW), and BNY Mellon US Small Cap Core Equity ETF. DEEP DIVE (Updates the story with year-end closing prices and consensus price targets. It may have been hard to expect 2020 to be a good year for stocks during the Stock Market's March plunge, but that was all the incredibly low interest rates from the Federal Reserve, unprecedented federal spending to support the economy, and investor enthusiasm for technology stocks. The bond market has been a barren area for income, with fixed income yields remaining stuck at historic lows. With interest rates just above record lows, yield opportunities are gathering in the stock market, says David King, co-manager of the Columbia Flexible Capital Income Fund. King says income-hungry investors don't have to look at the so-called Dogs of the Dow, the 10 highest-yielding stocks in the 30-stock Dow Jones industrial average. These should be go-go days for Nova Bucks (NASDAQ: NVAX). The vaccine maker said it will conduct Phase 3 clinical trials of a new coronavirus vaccine for Prevent-19 (NVX-CoV2V2373) in the United States and Mexico. However, NVAX shares fell nearly 10% on the news. Click to enlarge Source: Ascario/Shutterstock.com Sure, some of the news delivered on December 28 was likely baked into NVAX stock. After all, the company submitted a Prevent-19 for the UK Phase 3 trial three months ago, so investors were likely expecting similar headlines about its domestic efforts. Some of Novavax's problems are behind rivals such as Pfizer (NYSE: PFE) and Moderna (NASDAQ: MRNA). Vaccines produced by these companies have already been administered across InvestorPlace in the US - stock market news, stock advice & trading tips The seven safest stocks starting in 2021 on the right foot are good for Novavax to be part of the US government's Operation Warp Speed as some investors may be betting the companyIt needs the benefits of a rapid approval timeline to position Prevent-19 to intimidate established competitors. NVAX shares should not be dismissed in the critical race to bring vital vaccines to market to fight life-threatening pandemics like the new coronavirus pandemic, it's easy for investors to get caught up in the first move advantage. Moderna and Pfizer have it. Novavax doesn't. That doesn't mean investors should dismiss Novavax in the near future. Over the course of the pandemic, experts in the investment and medical community have made it clear that there is room for multiple vaccines. On top of that, some things about Novavax are worth considering despite its lagging state. First, the company is not a micro or small-market strain that is financially burdened by rapid Covid-19 vaccine development. Novavax has received $1.6 billion in funding from Biomedical Advanced Research and Development (BARDA) for its efforts. Second, the company said it could produce 2 billion doses next year. This is a large amount and should open a lot of doors for NVX-CoV2373 inside and outside the US NVX-CoV2373. Purified proteins are coded by genetic sequences of SARS-CoV-2 spike (S) proteins and produced in insect cells. It cannot cause or replicate COVID-19, the company said. Another advantage of the Novavax vaccine is that it is stable at 2 to 8 degrees Celsius, or 35.6 to 46.4 Fahrenheit. This is better than the ultrafreeze temperature required for some competing products. Catalyst for Novava's 4.3% decline in the past month, Novavacs has been shoddy treated by investors who appear to be in name a rejection of short-term catalysts. The opposite is true, especially in Phase 3 exams pending in multiple countries. The company is currently conducting large-scale critical Phase 3 clinical trials in the UK (UK), phase 2b safety and efficacy studies in the US and Australia. Data from these tests is expected as early as the first quarter of 2021, but the timing will depend on regional transmission speeds, the statement said. Given the current state of Covid-19 in the UK, if NVX-CoV2373 passes there, it could be a huge spark for NVAX shares. Obviously, the South America/Mexico trial offers great potential for Novavax investors, because, well, it includes the United States and features 30,000 participants. In short, the market appears to be overreacting to the fact that Novavax does not have a vaccine on the marketThere is no chance that the company's products will outperform those offered by rivals. (Bloomberg) -- Alpha Omega Advisors founder and CEO Peter Czechini will join the latest What Goes Up podcast to discuss the crazy year that was 2020 in the market and show what's to be. Topics include retail investor trading and the effectiveness of the Federal Reserve, a boom in zombie companies. Some highlights of the conversation: Some of the revenue estimates I'm looking at, as you said, the consensus is just below $170, but it requires multiples that don't make sense to me in the context of the fact that the rate can't go down any further. So if you're looking for multiple expansions to keep the rally going, I don't think we're going to get it because the Fed's effectiveness is limited, right? It can print money and it can go buy US Treasuries for as long as it wants. But at the end of the day, when you are at zero, the effects of stimulation are muted. I think it's one huge piece that people lack. We're not just going back to this on the moon scenario for revenue. They love companies with low stock prices. However, these stocks come with a variety of risks, including an increased chance that these names will join the ranks of delisted stocks if the $5 and $1 marks are broken. To be clear, companies that are vulnerable to delisting are currently traded on major exchanges such as the Nasdaq and The New York Stock Exchange, and if delisted, that does not mean an act of annihilation. After being expelled from the traditional Borth, delisted shares can be traded over-the-counter or in pink sheets. Companies staring at the prospect of losing listing privileges on major exchanges are free to have their way to avoid that ominous outcome. The best way to stay on the Nasdaq or NYSE is simply to provide reliable good basic news that leads to higher stock prices, but many companies at risk of delisting are fundamentally flawed. SNDL shares have not traded above $1 since June. It's hard to get at a time when many cannabis stocks are rebounding and the sundry clock is sluggishFor this name, it indicates that it is too late. This is a clear warning sign, as it is the 48 cent price tag. It's hard to say that there's a lot of good news related to Sundial at this point, but if there's some, it's that it's not on the verge of delisting. The Nasdaq recently extended its stock price to more than $1 until June 26, 2021. This is a considerable amount of time to reach a relatively low benchmark. At the same time, there is no guarantee that Sundial will not join the delisting ranks by the end of next year. XpresSpa Group (XSPA) Source: Africa Stocks/Shutterstock XpresSpa Group is off 33.32% year-on-year for a company who had a major pre-pandemic business model operating massage and wellness centers within airport terminals. But what really tells us is that despite the company's great efforts to turn the airport location into a Covid-19 test center, XSPA shares are off almost 85% from their June highs. Before the pandemic, XpresSpa was bleeding money, so even if the aviation industry returns to normal tomorrow, that doesn't necessarily mean that XSPA stocks are prepared for a significant upsurge. To make it clear and fair to xpresSpa, the seven safest stocks starting in 2021 on the right foot, Nasdaq has yet to warn the company of a possible delisting event. The stock spent time below $1 earlier this year, but has been trading below that level since April. Xpsa shares closed at $1.35 on the day following an 18.18 per cent drop in the year to December 24, and they closed at $1.35 a short time later before nasdaq services notified them of a possible delisting. Uxin Limited (UXIN) Source: Shutterstock If you're not familiar with Uxin Limited, you're not alone. It's a Chinese e-commerce company, but no one is going to confuse it with Alibaba (NYSE: BABA). Uxin is a platform to buy cars, but holds comparisons of those Carbanas (NYSE: CVNA) at the door. It would be reasonable to think that the combination of China's huge auto market and Internet stocks means big things to Uxin. Alas, the stock shed two-thirds of its value from a 52-week high, and it's been six months since UXIN shares traded at about $2, so that's not the case. It closed at 96 cents on December 24, and Uxin has not spent a significant amount of time below $1 this year and has not been warned of delisting, but a combination of weak stock prices and controversies over some U.S.-listed Chinese stocks could weigh on Uxin at some point next year. With a Global Star (GSAT) market capitalization of $641 million, telecom gear maker Globaistar is one of the biggest names on this list and has several properties that can lure investors you don't know. For example, global stars have some 5G exposure and stocks rise and it is high21% in the past month. Still, GSAT stocks are speculative at best. For all the 5G enthusiasm, it's been nearly three years since the name traded for more than $1. GlobalStar has ties to Fiat Chrysler and its Jeep brand, but still lost money in the third quarter. The exchange scoring 10 of the hottest CPAC of 2020 in preparation for the new year has not recently said that GSAT shares are on the verge of delisting, but this is something the company has had problems with in the past when it traded on the Nasdaq. Luo Kong Technology (LKCO) Source: apichon_tee/Shutterstock.com Luoon Technology is another Chinese stock that should probably be more attractive than the 75 cent share price shows. Its Luo-Ok-An mobile application offers information, entertainment, travel, e-commerce and other Internet content services. There's also an angle of big data and cloud computing here, so it's not surprising that penny stocks with these traits can pack the punch like Luoon did last week when it gained nearly 45%. On delisting, Nasdaq already notified the company earlier this year. Luoon was given until October to pop above $1 and was in a position to get that extension because shareholders' equity was north of $5 million. None of that is an invitation to buy this speculative name. Not when there are high quality Chinese tech stocks to consider. Your Energy (URG) Source: Shutterstock of stocks listed here, uranium miners Your energy has one of the longest sub-$1 stretches - it hasn't exceeded that level in nearly six years - it also has some of the best short-term prospects, many of which are evident by a 61.67% profit over the past month. In addition to this delisted flirting stock case, the rally is supported by some credible fundamentals. The recently passed Energy and Water Development Agency Outlying Act set the stage for the Department of Energy (DOE) to strengthen domestic production of uranium, including national uranium reserves, in 2021. The seven safest stocks starting in 2021 on the right foot believe that given the administration's priority to maintain existing assets in U.S. nuclear infrastructure, government funds for uranium purchases will go toward established production companies with permitted physical infrastructure and proven production operations, according to Your Energy. Uranium plays a role in the clean energy conversation and favors a short-term upturn in URG stocks. This is not the most conservative of ideas and your energy may be delisted in the future, but its prospects are noticeably rosy compared to some other stocks on this list. Hexo (HEXO) Source: Shutterstock Another cannabis name, Hexo, is the highest priced name for this name, living at just over $4 at the end of December 24. It says delisting is not imminentn any stretch, like a sundy, Hexo is a scuffle name in an industry that is now resurrected. The reason hexo shares are not in short-term danger of delisting is because they have previously announced reverse splits, but since then the stock has jumped, providing a way for the company to trim what was 1:8 into a 1:4 split ratio. Hexo's positioning in the cannabis-infused beverage market gives it something to stand up for and there is growth in speaking revenue, but any error can bolster short selling if HEXO shares are reverse-split. For now, Hexo is out of the delisted forest, but we still can't see how long that will be true.
