This is one of the important things to keep in mind when choosing a pair of village cross-country ski ties. Cross Country Ski Binding - NNN or SNS? By tying nnn (Nordic Norm Baru) but only attached to the bond on the front, which allows the skier to have free heels. NNN ties are easy to use and provide great flexibility for skiers. Another system is the supply of the SNS (Salomon Nordic System), which was built by the Salomon brand. In this inventory, the flat tie holds tight but tight in binding, but at the same time, the system allows skiers to enter and exit easily. As in NNN supplies, skiers have free heels, providing plenty of flexibility. Tying up SNS is a good solution for everyone who wants to optimize their downhill achievements. Winter is coming - with a new set of XC ski ties In the past, NNN and SNS standards have dominated the market. But now the patent for the NNN system owned by Rottefella has expired. This led to Salomon introducing the Prolink system but there were also new players on the market. The two main brands Fischer and Rossignol have teamed up and introduced in 2017 turnamic binding systems. What makes the Turnamic system special is the easy steps in and out of binding, easy alignment, and single-eye assignment. Even if you have a clickable but, you can feel the bond with the easy button (no tools needed) to move forward for better cengkaman or backwards, for more glides.
