(wat) The force of gravity applied to an object, usually by earth. The weight unit is newton (1 newton equals 0.225 lb). The difference between weight and mass is that the weight of an object changes according to the force of gravity, but the mass remains the same. For example, an object is lighter on the moon than on Earth because its gravitational force is less on the moon; but the mass of the object is the same in both places. See: mass (3) Many diseases cause changes in body weight (BW). BW decreases in Addison's disease, AIDS, cancer, chronic diarrhea, chronic infections, untreated type I diabetes mellitus, anorexia, long-term breastfeeding, marasmus, pylorus or thoracic canal obstruction, hunger, tuberculosis and peptic ulcer. Normal weight depends on the frame of the individual. See: table See: Weights and measurements of pharmacists Shorten: at. Wt. The weight of an element's atom is the weight of carbon-12 compared to 112. The term is widely used, but the correct term is atomic mass. See: avordupois measures the weight of the newborn. The normal weight of the newborn is between 5.5 lb (2.5 kg) and 4.5 kg and is directly related to the gestational age at which the baby was born. Birth weight is an important index of maturation and chances of survival. Less than 2.5kg is known as low birth weight (LBW) and is associated with an increased chance of death in the perinatal period. Medical advances have increased the chances of survival of newborns of 2.0 kg or more. See: large for gestational age. See small for gestational age, low birth weight Body weight used to calculate the appropriate dosage of a drug for those whose weight exceeds the normal average range. Weight-based dosing is used to correct different drug distributions and pharmacodynamics in overweight or obese patients. Obese patients metabolize fat-soluble drugs different from lean patients, and differences can cause clinically significant undermedication or excess medication. A formula used to calculate a safe The dose for obese patients depends on total body weight (TBW) and ideal body weight (IBW) as follows: dosage weight = (0.3)(TBW-IBW) + IBW. After the liquids they prepare, the weight of the remaining food solids is removed. The ideal is the body weight of a person after hemodialysis, that is, a patient with renal failure with neither edema nor high blood pressure. It is an ancient term equivalent to a chemical reaction and used for the weight of the chemical element that will replace the hydrogen atom (1.008 g). Abbreviation: ELBWA birth weight less than 1000 g (2.2 lb). Gram molecular mass. Acronym: IBW To achieve and maintain a person's best health, you need to weigh by height and frame weight or weight of kilograms. Various tables, such as the Metropolitan Lifetime and Weight Table, show ideal body weights for men and women of varying heights. These references can be used to help set goals for other socioeconomic problems. Early, prenatal care and control of chronic and acute health problems help reduce risk. Ultrasound can monitor the development of a number of fetals. Premature birth is necessary if the fetus does not show signs of healing. Incomplete maturation of the newborn's lungs is the most common cause of morbidity and mortality in LBW infants. The overatings and various neonatal technological supports reduce the burden of this disease. Nursing/prenatal considerations include normal body temperature care; diagnosis and treatment of hypoglycemia; maintenance of liquid, electrolyte and nutritional status; and careful monitoring of neonatal intake and output. Respiratory distress may be present, requiring oxygen and ventilation. Many preterm babies also have hyperbilirubinemia and are treated with phototherapy. Abbreviation: mole. wt. The weight of a molecule reached by the sum of the atomic weight (mass) of MWATOM atoms. See: atomic weight, the concept of controlling the weight of the body by the central nervous system and adjusting at a certain value. When hypothalamic dysfunction affects the center of fullness and nutrition, the value is more or less stable until something occurs that will change it. 5760 gr 1 lb (1gr equals 0.0648 g) gold, silver, precious metals and jewelry weighing system. Abbreviation: UBW. UBW body weight value is used to compare a person's current weight with their base weight. UBW can be a more realistic target ideal weight for some individuals. See: Ideal body weight Acronym: VLBWA delivers less than 1500 g (but 500 g more) in body weight. These little newborns account for about 1% makeup of all births in the U.S. but about 60% of deaths in the first month of life. Abbreviation: w/v Quantity according to the weight (mass) of a solid substance dissolved in liquid in the quantity measured. The W/v percentage expresses the number of grams of a component in a 100 mL solution.
