Founded in 1986, Western Psychological Service Advisory PC is a behavioral health facility that provides external patient advice for addiction and co-performing disorders. The organization has a number of locations throughout Oregon, including Beaverton, Gladstone, Gresham, Hillsboro, Portland, Tigard and Tualatin as well as offices in Vancouver, Washington. Treatment plans are flexible and individualized, and programs available for court and auto-referred customers are similiar. Treatment with Customer Employees starts with an initial consumption evaluation and psychiatric so that specific needs can be determined. Though each program can vary, the facility offers several levels of treatment—beginning with an Intensive Patient Program (IOP) that meets a minimum of three times a week for nine total hours. One option slightly less intensive is standard patient extensions, which meet for eight hours a week or less, though both are considering Phase I programs. Phase II relapses track prevention meets for an hour and a half weekly and is offered only as a step-down from Phase I. In both programs, treatment consists of individuals, groups and family therapies that use evidence-based practice, such as DBT and Security Researchers. Groups cover a variety of topics, including physical and neurosurological effects of addiction, cooking skills, mindfulness training and spirituality. Finally, Phase III meets for an hour and a half monthly and consists only in group sessions, though customers can add individual therapy as needed. Though 12-step participation is recommended, customers are encouraged to go to other self-help groups as they want. All programs require customers to submit regular urine tests. Employers include psychiatrists, psychologists, LCSWs, LMHCs, CADCs, LPCs, LMFTs, mental health nursing practices and Master's additional level clinicians. Special extra groups are available for teens and LGBTQ customers. As an appreciated lifestyle, the program has a group of alumni IV phases that meets once a week for an hour. These are less formal, customer-led sessions that focus mostly on relapse prevention. Other services include autistic counseling, school-based prevention programs, nicotine session groups and health psychology seminars through associations with local health organizations. In summary of Western Psychological Services, PC is a comprehensive organization that balances structured treatment with individualized therapy. The staff is wide-out of certification and its programs are available for all phases of early recovery.
