The Games were released in Japan on September 28, 2007, North America on April 22, June 21, 2007 in Australia, and July 27, 2007 in Europe. They take place in the Sinnoh region. It was followed by Pokémon Platinum, an improved version of these games. Spoiler alert: This article may contain important plot or end details. When the game starts, the player watches a news broadcast about the sighting of a red Gyarado in Johtos Lake of Rage. The player then goes to his best friend Barry's house and drives with him to Lake Verity to search for legendary Pokémon. When they arrive, they notice Professor Rowan and his search for something in the lake. The pair notice the player and hurry away, leaving a briefcase. As Barry approaches the briefcase, two wild stars attack. The player and Barry open the briefcase containing three Pokémon from which they must choose to fend off the attacking Pokémon. Barry, who later becomes a rival, takes the Pokémon, which has a type advantage over the player's choice. After the battle, the professor's assistant will appear briefly and comment that the Pokémon were used before leaving with the briefcase. Blurb Welcome to the next generation of Pokémon! As a Rookie Pokémon Trainer, you'll need to catch, train, and fight Pokémon on your journey to become a Pokémon League Champion. You'll face many challenges along the way as you search for the Pokémon that controls time or space in the Pokémon Diamond version. Discover more than 100 new Pokémon from your GBA versions! Fight and deal with Friends all over the world with Nintendo Wi-Fi Connection! Watch as the day turns into night with the return of the real-time clock function! Features The day-night system, which first appears in Generation II, returns with the same three periods, but better between them. A new multifunction device called Pokétch, short for Pokémon Watch, is also being introduced. The name of the regional professor is Professor Rowan, after a tree like the others, and he allows the player and their rival to hold the starters Pokémon they used against the attack on wild Pokémon at the beginning of the game. A new combat system is used for Pokémon Diamond and Pearl. In this new combat system, attack are explained either physically or specifically by the attack itself, i.e. whether the attack touches the enemy or not, instead of the type of attack as it was previously. For example, ThunderPunch is now physical and Hyper Beam is now something special. This was initially highly controversial among fans of the series, as it was seen as a waste of some of the Pokémon that were more powerful in Generation III, such as Blaziken and Sceptile, although it now allows a more versatile set of moves to be viable for these Pokémon. Although it was initially reported that the games would include Dark/Psychic/Fighting starters, this is not the case. The games keep the starters in the type trio of previous generations Grass/Fire/Water, this time Turtwig, Chimchar and Piplup. Wi-Fi The native support of the DS for Wi-Fi is used so that players can trade, fight and communicate online via voice chat. This feature will no longer be officially supported as of May 20, 2014. However, there are now fanmade custom servers that serve as a replacement for the discontinued online features of these games. Kaeru WFC and Wimmfi run the servers and DNS proxies required to access them, so you can access online games again by simply changing the Internet settings on your Nintendo DS. GTS The Global Trade System, or GTS, is introduced so that trainers can search for any Pokémon they want or set up one of their own Pokémon for trading for each Pokémon for trading for each Pokémon that others have placed on the GTS. This feature will no longer be officially supported as of May 20, 2014. However, there are now Fanmade Custom Servers that serve as a replacement for the discontinued online features of these games, including the Poké Classic Network GTS. Kaeru WFC and Wimmfi run the servers and DNS proxies required to access them, so you can access online games again by simply changing the Internet settings on your Nintendo DS. Main Articles: Pokémon Super Contest In Pokémon Diamond and Pearl, a significant amount of changes have been made to the Pokémon contests. Before the player enters his first Super contest, Jordan gives the player a mild poffin that improves all five state statistics, Pokémon must be disguised with accessories with the pen within a time limit. Each contest requires different accessories, and higher ranks may require more to bet on the Pokémon. The second round is the dance that the others find difficult to imitate (if the player's Pokémon is the main dancer) or to copy the dance moves of the main actors. Each Pokémon gets a twist to be the leader, and the leader must try to dance with the music in time and do the background dancers. The A, B, X, and Y keys also work. The third round is very similar to the Generation III appeal round, and the main difference is that there are three competition judges and only four twists to appeal, rather than a judge and five turns to appeal. Pokémon gets more points if it is the only Pokémon that acts for a particular judge, less if another responds to that judge and so on. The crowd system is still in place, but this time each judge to whom everyone else appeals to Pokémon. In addition, Pokémon receive bonus points for appeals, regardless of the judge's impression, and points are not simply added to increase a judge's tension. Gyms As always, there are eight new gyms in Sinnoh, each with its own type affiliation. The new gym leaders are Roark (Rock), Gardenia (Grass), Maylene (Fighting), Crasher Wake (Water), Fantina (Ghost), Byron (Steel), Candice (Ice) and Volkner (Electric). Elite Four The new Elite Four is in the Pokémon League. The elite trainers are Aaron (bug), Bertha (Ground), Flint (Fire) and Lucian (Psychic); the champion is Cynthia, who has Pokémon by National Pokédex number and list of Pokémon by Sinnoh Poké sightings of 107 new Pokémon, bringing the total to 493. The new Pokémon was unveiled in 2004 with the release of Destiny Deoxys in Japanese release of and the mystery of Mew. The film featured Lucario, Bonsly, Mime Jr. and Weavile. 2006 was cracking for the fourth generation. The ninth film, Pokémon Ranger and the Temple of the Sea, featured Manaphy, Mantyke, Buizel and Chatot, and Dialga and Palkia were soon confirmed on Filb.de. During the week following the Japanese release of the games, Serebii.net showed a Discovery Trench that revealed the names and statistics of many of the previously unknown Pokémon to the general public. Game-exclusive Pokémon The following Pokémon to the general public. Game-exclusively for this pair's other game, they must be traded either from this game or from another Compatible Game of Generation IV that has this Pokémon available. Alternatively, all Pokémon released before these games can be migrated from a Generation III game. The connectivity trade is between Diamond and Pearl versions via the Nintendo DS's internal wireless connection. It connects in the same way with Platinum, HeartGold and SoulSilver. Eggs obtained from Pokémon Ranger and its sequels are also sent wirelessly. Diamond and Pearl also have the ability to connect to the International link, some Pokémon may have foreign Pokédex entries. Diamond and Pearl also maintain backward compatibility with Generation III games; However, standard trading is not allowed. A player's Pokémon can be permanently transferred through Pal Park, and some Pokémon that previously could not be caught can be found in dual slot mode. By connecting to the Wii with a Nintendo DS, players can also copy their party Pokémon Ranch, while Diamond, Pearl, Platinum, HeartGold and SoulSilver are all compatible with Pokémon Battle Revolution. Generation IV is the first generation with regular Korean versions of Generation IV games did not include a way to display Korean characters, and therefore Korean versions of a Generation IV game cannot normally trade with a non-Korean game. If a Pokémon with a Korean name or Korean trainer name would be converted into something else. In Diamond and Pearl, empty spaces were used instead of Korean characters. This has been changed to hyphens in Platinum – and then HeartGold and SoulSilver – that are likely to prevent problems caused by completely empty names. The following features of these games, which require access to the Nintendo Wi-Fi Connection Service, will no longer be supported as of May 20, 2014. The native support of the DS for Wi-Fi is used so that players can trade, fight and communicate online via voice chat. Diamond and Pearl have a global trading system, trading system, trading system, trading system, trading system, of other games can search for the Pokémon that others have placed on the Global Trade Station. The reception of Pokémon Diamond and Pearl was well received by critics, Nintendo Power called them the ultimate Pokémon experience. The inclusion of Wi-Fi features and the voice chat features and the voice chat features and the voice chat features and the voice of 8.5/10 on the website. [7] The gaming magazine Famitsu gave them a score of 35 out of 40. [8] Both Pokémon Diamond and Pearl have a rating of 85% on Metacritic. [9] On December 27, 2006, it was announced that the two games together were the first Nintendo DS games to reach five million units delivered. [10] In the United States, more than 533,000 pre-orders were sold before publication[11] and one million copies were sold within five days. By the end of April 2007, the Us release of Pokémon Diamond sold about 1.045 million units. [13] As of September 30, 2020, Pokémon Diamond and Pearl sold 17.67 million copies worldwide.
