

☐

I'm not robot

reCAPTCHA

Continue

Royal caribbean beer prices 2015

Facebook Twitter Pinterest Instagram YouTube © 1995-2020, Royal Caribbean Update by Independent Traveller, Don Last: November 14, 20203 January 15, 2015 Wondering if you should buy a Royal Caribbean drink package? You are not alone, it is a question we get very often from fellow cruisers. Over the past few years, we have had the opportunity to test the Royal Caribbean Beverage Package on several different voyages. While there are many benefits to buying a beverage package on a cruise, there are many reasons why cruise ship beverage packages are a waste of money. Whether you should buy one for your next vacation is an individual decision based on a number of factors. For us, Royal Caribbean beverage packages have always been a good deal, making our cruises more hassle-free and (usually) saving us money in the process. Ultimately, you'll have to weigh the pros and cons to make sure one of the Royal Caribbean beverage packages is right for you. Related post: Ultimate Guide to the Best New Cruise Ship 2021 Royal Caribbean Beverage Package (2021)Royal Caribbean Beverage Package Basics We have some basic things to know about the Royal Caribbean Beverage Package before diving into the details of each option.- Each beverage package is priced per day and must be purchased for the entire duration of the cruise (18%) Additional services (18%) Upon check-out, it will be added to the total purchase price of the beverage package. In addition, state and local taxes may apply if purchased during certain ports and/or itineraries-- you can purchase an online advance cruise or beverage package on board during the first day (or two days) of the cruise. Normally, you save money by purchasing a cruise advance -- beverage packages are non-refundable and non-transferable -- and you can't share packages or use packages to order drinks from other cruisers. All of the state's legal drinking age must purchase a liquor package -- the package includes drinks purchased from on-board restaurants, bars and lounges. They also work on the cruise line's two private islands, Kokokei and The Perfect Day in Labadi, Haiti.- You can get one drink at a time, whether it's alcohol or non-alcoholic. You'll also need to show your SeaPass card (or wow band) every time you order a drink. The SeaPass card displays a notation indicating that the package was purchased -- the Royal Caribbean Drink package is unlimited during the cruise, unlike carnival cruise lines. Although, the company does responsibly consume that you have the right to refuse service if you are drunk - beverage packages are available on most 2+ day voyages except for a 2 or 3 day voyage from Southampton.Related post: Royal Caribbean Included in Royal Caribbean Beverage PackageA a few years ago, Royal Caribbean revamped its alcoholic beverage package. Cruise lines now offer only one alcohol package, known as the Deluxe Drink Package. Many cruisers call it an unlimited beverage package because it essentially includes all alcoholic and non-alcoholic beverages. In-flight prices for this package range from $63 to $69 per day (with tips). Prices vary depending on the ship, sailing date and schedule. Generally, you can find higher prices on new ships. Please note that these are inflight prices. In general, you can use an online cruise planner to purchase a pre-cruise for a beverage package. The plan includes all alcoholic beverages, including beer, glass wine and cocktails for up to $13. This allotment basically covers all the beers on board the ship and a decent selection of red and white wines from restaurants and bars on board. The package also includes most spirits and premium spirits. Brands such as Grey Goose, TitoBoardka, Patrons, Johnnie Walker Black Label and Dwar's 12Scotch are all included, as well as premium and classic cocktails. See the recent Royal Caribbean Bar menu on Freedom of the Seas cruise in early 2020.If the drink exceeds the maximum dollar amount, guests will only be charged a difference (18% tip on the difference:classic cocktails cost about $10; premium cocktails cost about $12-13). (Prices vary slightly depending on the ship and/or region.) In addition to the average wine price on the standard menu about $10, you should even spend about 6-7 of this drink to relax. Beer lovers should drink a little more. If the beer price is around $7, you'll need to consume about 9-10 drinks a day to reach magic numbers. Of course, it does not include any other non-alcoholic beverages that you can get throughout the day that are part of the package. The deluxe drink package also includes fountain soda, a Coca-Cola freestyle machine (if available), steel and sparkling water, premium coffee and tea, and fresh juices. In addition, guests purchasing deluxe beverage packages will receive a 40% discount on bottled wines up to $100 and a 20% discount on wine prices over $100, which includes many drinks but excludes some beverages. Room service and minibar items are not included. Drinks from souvenir glasses, specialty beers and super premium category drinks are also excluded. In addition, all beverages served within licensed Starbucks stores are not included. Related post: Reviews of the perfect day in the Kokokemud Royal Caribbean Beverage Package Royal Caribbean Beverage Package Royal Caribbean Non-Alcoholic Beverage Package If you want more options than soda, the Royal Tea Package may be for you. The in-flight Royale Multi-Meal Package costs $29-38 per person per day. This plan provides cruisers A selection of premium coffee and tea, soda (including souvenir cups), bottled water (both sparkling and steel), freshly squeezed orange juice and non-alcoholic frozen beverages. Essentially, you can enjoy almost all non-alcoholic beverages in this package. There are a few exceptions, such as Starbucks, where we often get alcohol packages, but you can see how this package is good value for people who don't drink alcohol. Approximately 6-8 non-alcoholic beverages are required to reach the break point of the Royal Tea Drink Package at current in-flight prices. Classic Soda Package Classic Soda Package is a popular beverage package for families. The current inflight fare for this package is $12.99-$15 per person per day (tips added). It offers unlimited soda on ships and private islands, as well as bars and restaurants. However, cans of soda or soda ordered through room service are not included. If you purchase this plan, you will receive a souvenir cup. If you lose this cup, you will be charged $9.95 as a replacement. Many Royal Caribbean ships have Coke freestyle machines. This freestyle machine distributes more than 100 soda/ffavor combinations. So, you can make your own crazy soda mix using your souvenir cup. If you do not purchase a beverage package, you will not be able to use the freform machine. Soda is priced at about $3.25, which means you have to drink about 4-5 servings on an even break for this package. Related post: The best cruise line for families worth a Royal Caribbean drink package? This brings us back to the original question. Is the Royal Caribbean drink package good value? It's a question you can answer based on your own drinking habits. Essentially, the question should be worth whether you will spend enough on making a purchase. Here is the average cost of different drinks within each category from the recent Royal Caribbean Beverage Menu. You can use this chart to perform quick math to see if you will regularly reach the daily break point for the beverage package above. Category Price Bottled Water (500 ml)$3.00Soda$3.25Energy Beverages $4.00Sperted Coffee $4.25 Other Non-Alcoholic Beverages $6.00Beers $7.50Wine $10.00Mixed Beverage $10.00Spersetti Cocktail $10.00+12.50 Compared to competing brands, Royal Caribbean beverage packages are cheap and affordable on average, Royal Caribbean beverage packages are affordable. However, we like to have one for added convenience. Also, you don't have to worry about bar tabs at the end of the cruise! Related post: If you look at our breakdown of the Amplified Sea Cruise Review Royal Caribbean Deluxe Beverage Package, the answer for us is yes. Track all beverages consumed per beverage category Drinks package. During the week, we spent a total of 140 glasses (combined) for the two of us. 64 of them (45%) Non-alcoholic bottles were water and specialty coffee. We averaged about 5.5 alcoholic drinks a day, which is not really difficult if you have a couple during poolside drinks, dinner cocktails, shows or nightly entertainment. Paid out of pocket for drinks, the total (service charge) would have been $1,233.10. We purchased a pre-cruise with a drink package for $48 per person advertised at 25% off the onboard price ($792.96). This means we saved a total of $440.14, or about 35%, by getting a package as opposed to paying for an à la carte for each drink! However, we have purchased a significant amount of bottled water and specialty coffee on a helpful cruise in numbers. Of course, beverage package prices vary. Cruise pre-sales and promotions are also varied. This also doesn't take into account the fact that we are entitled to three free drinks a night because we are Diamond members. However, the bottom line for us is that convenience doesn't necessarily reduce costs. Did you buy one of the Royal Caribbean beverage packages from CommentsCruise? Do you think the deluxe beverage package is good value? Drop down the anchor below and share your experience with a beverage package on the cruise. Cruise.