How to simplify autumn leaves today I would like to tell you one thing that is going to change the way you feel about learning and playing guitar. That is: EVERYTHING CAN BE SIMPLIFIED. I know that sounds pretty simple right, but some many guitar players fail to understand this concept. They believe that they know how to make a song simple, but practically all they do is play the song more slowly. Believe me, playing a song slower is not easier. For me, simplifying a song means removing one or more elements of music, so that everything you left is one musical aspect of the song. The music is made of three elements: Harmony, rhythm and melody. By removing one or two of these elements, you not only simplify the song, but also learn about its structure. Step 1 - Start with a ringtone One of the most common ways for the star to simplify the song is to remove harmony (chords) and learn the melody individually. I personally think that learning ringtones as the first step will help you easily memorize rhythm and chords. Also, if you're a beginner, it's probably the easiest way to start with a song. The melody of autumn leaves is very simple and easy to remember. This acoustic guitar layout oriented As you noticed, the guitar tab above only shows the autumn leaves melody played on acoustic guitar. The melody is pretty jumpy, so I highly recommend you really learn step by step and memorize frets and notes to play. Some of the things I also consider is an alternate finger with the right hand. Pluck the melody, starting with your finger, and then always alternate between the index and the middle. The fingerstyle model will change slightly when we add a boss note, but it will be easy for you if Play this simple melody with alternating arrow and middle finger. Step 2 - Add a bass note When you practice the melody and learn it by heart, it's time to add a bass note. The bass note will add more texture to the song and. In addition, the chords will be clearer and we will begin to hear the progression of chords. We still play only one boss's note for a chord, but the difference is quite clear. This will look like a sheet of acoustic guitar. Now that we've added a bass note, the guitar tab looks more busy and accessible. I can guarantee that even though we have added only one note from the boss, the song will sound completely different. If you are a beginner guitar player, you will probably find this stage quite challenging, so I highly recommend you practice one note at a time and slowly get acquainted with the fingerstyle model. As we add the attention of the boss, you pluck will be a little different. Now you need to tear off some lines with your thumb along with the melody, so it takes some time to adjust. Don't get frustrated if you're struggling at the beginning. Keep pushing forward and you will be fine! Step 3 – Add chords When you really feel like adding the final touch to this awesome acoustic guitar tune, you can really start working with chords and harmony. Let me show you an easy way to add a few chords of autumn leaves. I still want everything to be quite simple, so I do not go crazy with chords. I'm just going to add a few notes here and there to spice up harmony and make it sound less basic and more advanced. Check it out! The Chord Progression A few words about the progression of the autumn leaf chords and its structure. Like many standard jazz this song follows a very common chord of progression that can be found in hundreds of jazz songs. It goes as follows: Am7 - D7 - Gmaj7 - Cmaj7 - F #min7b5 - B7 - Em Many guitar players would turn to this chord progression as: II - V - I - IV - VII - V - I. Music contains numbers of Roman numbers represented by classes that each chord represents G large scale (which is the scale / key to these songs). It is very important for jazz musicians to know perfectly the progression of the chords of each song, so that they can freely improvise and express themselves independently when they gather in Jam. Finding playing guitar is awesome. It's fun, creative and social.
