While some may regret the loss of the tangle in our everyday lives, watching movies online eliminates problems with loss or damage to discs and makes movies available on a variety of platforms so you can watch movies you own anywhere, anytime, without having to remember to pick up your DVDs. Of course illegal downloading and streaming is very popular, but deprives deprives many people who have worked to make a film of the compensation they deserve for their blood, sweat and tears. In addition, the options available can often be of poor quality and you run the risk of infecting your computer or mobile device with a virus if you don't know what you're doing. Here's a guide to the many different cool ways to watch movies online for those who aren't familiar with the process they're wishing to break free from the hell of the scratched DVD. Yes, it will cost a little money, but there are many benefits to traditional DVDs and illegal downloading. Streaming services There is a small taint of options for watching content online. One of the most popular methods is to use an online streaming service like Netflix, Hulu Plus or Amazon's Prime Instant Video. These services charge a monthly or annual fee and give you access to tons of content, although there's always a chance that a specific movie you're looking for isn't on any streaming service you have. The content these services have access to is always changing as they make new business, so you're not stuck with the same options month after month. The above mentioned services are also great for watching TV and have started making their own original shows to compete in the TV market. Many of these series, such as Netflix's House of Cards and Netflix's Orange is the New Black, received glowing reviews. There are some limited options for online streaming that are legal and free. Crackle is a website that offers movies and TV shows to stream for free, but is supported by ads and you will end up watching as many commercials as you would watch the programming on cable TV. The amount of content crackle offers is also thinner than subscription services, as the site doesn't have the financial muscles to make purchases of giant content like the larger sites, so it can be harder to find your favorite movie. The downside to an online streaming service is that you are at the mercy of the content that the company has available to offer; You can't just choose any movie under the sun and be guaranteed to be able to watch it. You also don't own the movies, so if Netflix gets rid of your favorite movie, you'll find yourself unable to watch it. Download A way to have movies and watch them online is to download them. Whether you're a Fan of Google or Apple, both iTunes and the Google Play store offer movies to buy through the accounts that become yours. The new releases cost about $20; about the same price as a DVD would cost, although a digital copy cannot be lost or damaged. Of course buying individual titles to own is more expensive than paying the small fee for a streaming service and having access to both iTunes and Google Play also offer movies to rent for a lower price. Renting gives you the chance to watch the movie once in a 30 day period 24 hours to finish it after clicking play. These options are also great for switching between devices, because iTunes and Google Play will remind you where you are in a movie if you're interrupted and want to switch from your tv to your tablet or smartphone. Amazon offers movies to buy or rent at prices similar to Apple and Google, and you don't need a Prime subscription to access that service. If you prefer to own or stream movies, watching movies online is the way to go if you're tired of dealing with DVDs and Blu-ray discs. There are many cool and secure options that don't cost much and allow you to watch on all your devices at your convenience. Check out the Sheet of Entertainment Cheats on Facebook! More from Entertainment Cheat Sheet: Thearon W. Henderson/Getty Images October brings with it many things: Pumpkins, horror movie marathons, scarves and for sports fans, the return of the NBA. The world's largest basketball league is back for the 2018-19 season, and the landscape has changed a lot over the summer. Lebron James is now a Laker, Jimmy Butler is apparently trying to get out of the Timberwolves organization or burn it, and the Western Conference is about to be bloodier than the climax of a Dario Argento movie. If you're a rope cutter, you won't struggle to keep up with basketball action, as the NBA is one of the most technological sports leagues in the world. The league partners with a variety of broadcasters that offer streaming services, and even offers its own streaming experience. NBA League Pass streaming options The NBA has its own official streaming service, NBA League Pass, which offers many games, albeit with some strings attached. Users can purchase a few different tiers of subscriptions: the standard League Pass ($200 per year), which gives access to all games for all teams, along with replays of newer and more classic games; League Pass Premium ($250 per year), which adds in arena streams during breaks; or a One Team pass ($120 per year), which gives viewers access to all games, replays, and audio streams for a single team. Users can also purchase individual games for $7. Note that League Pass users do not have live access to games that are deleted, which means they are running on their local sports station or are nationally televised. If you have a virtual reality headset, League Pass also offers a VR experience for some games. ESPN's fellow video client, WatchESPN, gives NBA fans live access to any game scheduled to broadcast on ESPN or ESPN 2. The service requires users to sign in with a compatible cable or satellite subscription, making it difficult to access those who have left of the network. However, those who have the necessary credentials - or who know someone who does - may have access to the same broadcast as those who choose to on television. That basically means you won't miss Jeff Van Gundy's hearing talk about fired coaches, the best ways to stop LeBron James from scoring, and his fair disdain for falling. Web iOS Android Watch TNT Similar to WatchESPN, TNT offers online streaming of what currently airs on any of its TNT West or TNT East streams. Like the ESPN app, TNT requires users to tie a compatible cable or satellite subscription to the site to view the content. Simply enter your cable or satellite provider's login information when the site requests that you have access to both available TNT streams. Web iOS Android B/R Live Bleacher Report Live Bleacher Report live video service gives users access to a variety of sports, but the crown jewel of B/R can be the NBA. Because Bleacher Report belongs to Turner Broadcasting Systems, the service provides access to games available via NBA League Pass, and time-bound users have the option to purchase parts of games, in a move that NBA Commissioner Adam Silver likes to video game microtransactions. Users can watch a certain quarter, so if you don't leave work by the fourth quarter, you won't need to pay for the entire game to watch the end. You can even buy, according to Silver, 15 minutes of play if you have just a little time on your schedule. Sling TV The new cable cutter special from Dish Network provides a great way to watch the NBA live without a cable or satellite subscription. Subscribers to Sling TV's $20-a-month introductory package receive channels such as TNT and ESPN, even granting basic users access to a range of basketball actions. Available via: Sling PlayStation Vue Like Dish Network, Sony has joined the cable-cutting revolution and now offers subscriptions to its own version of an online streaming service, PlayStation Vue. Subscribers have access to channels such as ESPN, TNT, ABC and a number of other top-notch networks. Sony's iOS Other NBA features subreddit An amazing resource for information about just about everything. Reddit discloses more than enough NBA-specific information to satisfy any and all basketball fans. Even in the offseason, the r/NBA community remains active and strangely productive, so expect a lot of content related to each showdown, including interviews, game videos, injury news, and mixed quality memes. Reddit's loyal user base generates the wealth of site content. On game days, you'll find plenty of NBA-themed stories, chat threads, and even alternative streaming sites (if legally dubious). While Reddit is a fantastic resource to get your NBA fill, it's very easy to waste entire weekends snooping around the rest of the site. Don't tell me we didn't warn you. Reddit's ESPN Gamecast Although not a video option, ESPN regularly offers its signature play-by-play Gamecast Gamecast each game. Just go to the NBA scoreboard page through ESPN's website, click on the game you'd like to watch, and wait for the desired Gamecast window to open. This feature shows real-time events, including every basket, dunk, foul, and Chris Paul flop. Gamecast also lists each team's stats, featured videos, and what's in Twitter's trending topics.
