November is one of the best times of the year to buy strollers and other great baby purchases. Look for deep discounts during Black Friday sales events if you can. If you can’t time your stroller purchase for the fall, consider these other tips to save some baby bucks:Get the most out of your purchase. Are you planning to have more children in the near future? If so, you can consider springing after a double stroller now to avoid the extra cost of upgrading or getting a second stroller later. Keep an eye out for sales. While christmas shopping is full of deals and discounts, that doesn’t mean you can’t snag a sale at other times of the year. Make your research upfront to know which model(s) you are looking for, and keep track of prices at a few different stores. Don’t be fooled into thinking you have to buy a new car seat too. Some brands market their strollers and car seats as must-match items, but in reality, many different car brands will snap into your stroller. Make sure your existing car seat will be compatible with your new stroller first, however. Lots of retailers offer a wide range of stroller options, with varying price tags. Don’t forget to check online deals before making a big in-store purchase to make sure you get the best value. Some of the most popular stroller retailers include:Buy BabyTargetWalmartMacy’sAmazonA stroller can take a big bite out of your budget. The seat rocks back so you can use with a newborn and can then be removed to the manufactured chair to be used by children up to 70lbs. Both the tray guard and seat padding are machine washable and the chair performs very well when subjected to our stain test. How we tested: The Good Housekeeping Institute evaluated high chairs based on ease of use, safety and durability. The Consumer Electronics and Engineering Lab tested each high chair for how easy it was to set up, adjust the seat position and height, safely secure a child and clean. The seat, strapand washer were tested for durability during our cleaning and drop tests. Jan 20, 2010 As I'm sure you've noticed that there's been a rash of recalls lately – from blinds to Tylenol. But the category that seems to have been most affected are children's products. Just today Graco and cpsc have recalled 1.5 million strollers today due to possible finger amputation or laceration of a child when an adult opens or closes the canopy. For a full list of products included in this recall visit cpsc.gov and if you own one of these strollers, please stop using it immediately. To be safe in the future, you can sign up for email alerts of recalls when they occur and always check out the recalls page goodhousekeeping.com. We add not only CPSC recalls but also those from the FDA. This content is created and maintained by a third party, and imported into this page to help users enter their email addresses. And the world of prams is nothing improved models typically boast more features than traditional traditional but are the extra perks worth shelling out extra money? If you're looking to buy a new buggy for your bouncing bundle of joy, let us help you weigh the differences between the two popular – standard Chicco Liteway and the more advanced Chicco Liteway Plus. In short what we found: The Chicco Liteway is $40 less than its more trimmed-up counterpart, the Chicco Liteway Plus. What you learn: The most significant difference between these two strollers is that liteway plus is a two-in-one model. This means that it works like both a regular stroller and a car seat holder. Simply fold the seat of the stroller forward to secure your car seat. Design The Chicco Liteway and Chicco Liteway Plus are so similar in appearance that you could almost mistake one for the other. They are each lightweight umbrella strollers (that means they can be easily folded up as an umbrella). They both measure 35 inches long, 19 inches wide and 40 inches high. And while they are narrow and easy to maneuver when used, they are also easy to transport, thanks to a compact hatch. The Liteway weighs 17.2 pounds, while the Liteway Plus is slightly heavier at 19 pounds. Each stroller is sold in a variety of fabric color combinations. » MORE: The best umbrella strollers Features But the real value of any stroller is in its features, and none of these models disappointed. In fact, they're all included in NerdWallet's roundup of the best umbrella strollers – based on 10,529 analyzed reviews. The Chicco Liteway is No. 1 on our list (with a 9.3 total score), and Liteway Plus is No. 3 (with an 8.7 overall score). Here are some key features that both of these models share: Strong suspension. The strollers have rear wheel suspension and front swivel wheels for a safe and smooth ride. Landscape. Both strollers have five-position folding seats to keep your child comfortable. Chapel. The strollers protect small ones from the elements with adjustable canopies that include a look-a-boo window. Accessories. Parents can store their drinks, phones and keys in the supplied parent cup holder and storage basket. There is a crucial factor separating these two Chicco models. Liteway Plus works like a traditional stroller and a car seat holder. This means that it is compatible with KeyFit Infant Car Seats (car seats sold separately). Parents looking for convenience when in a hurry can attach a compatible car seat directly to the stroller itself. You'll hear a click when the car seat is locked in place. » MORE: The Best Strollers Price Chicco Liteway retails for $139.99, while Chicco Liteway Plus is $40 more at $179.99. You'll find these strollers at a variety of retailers – as well as from the Chicco brand itself – but we recommend shopping on Amazon, where you might be able to snag yours at a discount. Ready, ready, walk you are looking for a stroller - and just a stroller - stick to Chicco Liteway. It will deliver everything you need for less than Liteway Plus. But if you want to make an investment, go to Liteway Plus. It offers everything that the usual Liteway does — and then some. Plus, the extra $40 might be worth it in the long run. After all, when your little one outgrows his or her car seat, you can still use the product as a small baby stroller (up to 50 pounds). NerdWallet's scoring of the best tandem strollers is based on our analysis of the opinions of experts and shoppers like you. Choosing a stroller takes careful thought and consideration. After all, you trust a stroller with your child's safety. We know what an important purchase this is, so we researched some of the most popular models on the market to help make your decision a little less overwhelming. To narrow the site, we looked at expert opinions from review sites such as The Sweethome, CNET and Good Housekeeping. After that, we analyzed user reviews to see what shoppers said about each stroller's best (and worst) attributes. We recognize that consumers are looking for different qualities in strollers, so we made these based on user observations of a handful of different features, including ease of use, weight, safety and accessories. Our analysis Our last stroller points go from a low of 1 to a high of 10. Here's how we came up with the numbers: Total Score: This score reflects reviewers' overall satisfaction level with strollers over 13 criteria, including ease of use, maneuverability, accessories, and durability. Baby Care: This score reflects reviewers' satisfaction with the stroller's ability, especially how it relates to the baby. Categories that factor in this score include comfort, safety features and sound level. Ease of use: This score reflects reviewers' satisfaction with the ease of using the stroller. Categories that factor in this score include the ability to fold the stroller, weight of the stroller and maneuverability. Let's see which strollers made our list and how they fared. These are our best choices, ranked in order of total points. Prams 1.
