When you've nailed it, you can work on other aspects of your game, confident that you'll be able to produce more consistent swings. Without it, accurate shots will be few and far between. When your left hand properly grabs your club, it should completely cover the end of the club. The wrist must be at the top of the club socket. You can have the most natural grip in the world, but if it's not aligned with the face of the club, you won't get a good shot. Before tackling the ball, look down at the length of your club to make sure your grip and club face are aligned correctly. That way, when you keep the club, the face is square with the ball. [source: LearnAboutGolf.com] If you're grabbing your club with your palms, your elbows will tell you. A proper golf grip results in straight lines along the arms. If the elbows are bent, the palms of the hands do too much work and the arms do not extend properly in the swing, which means less speed [source: Easy2Technologies.com].
