IPA: /dzia/ (North) or /tsia/ (Central and South)It comes from latin tia and, as in English, is used to describe the mother or father or the wife of his uncle (zio). The term zia acquisita (aunt marriage) is often used to describe the latter. Mia zia abita a Italia da dieci anni. My aunt has lived in Italy for ten years. La zia pettina i capelli di sua nipote. = The aunt combs her niece's hair. Prozia is your aunt or one of your parents' aunts. Among the younger generation, the terms zio and zia are often used in vernacular to say bro/sister (friend). It is used, especially by the term bella zio or bella zia (lit: beautiful uncle or beautiful aunt), as a way to say that you agree with what your friend said or did. This is often followed by a friendly gesture, such as touching the fist. Comes from the suburbs Milan.Ci vediamo alle 10 per una birra? Bella zia, a dopo! I'll see you at 10:00 for a beer? Of course, Sister, I'll see you later. In some regions like Bologna, zia has become an ironic nickname for a woman who behaves in a slow, clumsy or clumsy way and can be used for teasing when, for example, she drifts off during the debate or falls asleep on an evening out with friends. déun nountalian grand niece of main Italianununtaliangreat grandchildren Handle!
