Original a million Israelis who received God's invitation to enter the promised land, only two of those who were actually responsible entered it! Similarly, today's Christians often hear and understand God's promises every Sunday morning in church, but then rarely choose to experience them in everyday life. In one million, Priscilla invites us to change this pattern, living outside our situation and waiting for God to move miraculously every day. Without a doubt, we can find and follow God's purpose in our journey. We're going to make it to the promised land! 눅 Guests were very friendly and helpful. I'll give it six out of five letters. The explanation on the back cover of the paperback book says it all. When you meet someone who lives, eats and breathes christian faith, you want what they have become more than anything-their seamless intimacy with God, their prayer power, their spiritual endurance, their passionate expectation, the kind that does not diminish the despair of the first sign of setback. But how much do you want it? Enough to toss anything in your life I would recommend this book. I'll give it six out of five letters. The explanation on the back cover of the paperback book says it all. When you meet someone who lives, eats and breathes christian faith, you want what they have become more than anything-their seamless intimacy with God, their prayer power, their spiritual endurance, their passionate expectation, the kind that does not diminish the despair of the first sign of setback. But how much do you want it? Enough to feed something out of your life that won't let you be 100% His? Enough to allow the spirit of God to bring radical spiritual changes that might simply scare you out of your comfort zone? Enough to wait long and hard for God and call whatever He demands you be prepared for what's next? When about two million adult pilgrims from ancient Israel left behind their slavery in Egypt, wandering the desert for an entire generation, only two did so safely on the promised land. It's one in a million who were brave enough to put abundant life to work no matter where they were, no matter how easy it became to just blend in and be average. And the next one in a million may be you-minute, when you decide that you have had your share of half faith, a moment when you realize that a week is a long time to postpone what God has promised that you can put on: the deep daily experience of his eternal presence. ...
