In RuneScape 3, Wood cutting is a collecting skill that involves cutting different trees and foliage. You usually get logs or some kind of resource when cutting trees. These logs can be sold or used for other skills like Firemaking, Fletching and even Construction! In our Wood cutting guide RS3, you'll learn the fastest and most profitable methods of training your skill, right down to level 99/120. More Skill Guides Axes are the main tool that you will be using while training your wood cutting skills with a hatchet. As you progress through the levels, you can access a better hatchet that cuts out trees faster. Protip: You can add a higher-level hatchet to the tool belt and it will work like all previous hatchets. For example, if a Dragon adds a hatchet to the tool belt on level 1, it will give you all previous hatchets. You don't have to buy each one separately! The Crystal Axe can be by adding 4000 Harmonic Powder to a Dragon Axe. This powder is all over Prifddinas, primarily used in the game of Harps. Crystal and dragon axes can both be upgraded using invention. Axe logger level Req. Dwarven Army Axe 1 Bronze Axe 1 Steel Axe 6 Black Axe 6 Mithril Axe 21 Adamant Axe 31 Rune Balta 41 Dragon Axe 61 Inferno Adze 61 (Reqs. 92 Firemaking & All Fired Up Quest) Crystal Hatchet 71 Urns Urns fill up your experience as you're training for wood cutting (it doesn't work Ivy!) and you're full teleported out with a hefty experience boost. With the most recent urn update, these can be put in the set and teleored automatically when full. These are a must have tool if you're going to achieve the best experience rate. Even lower-level urns are very effective. Each urn requires that an Earth Rune be placed in it so that it can begin to gather experience. This requires a certain crafting level as well. See the table below to see what type of urn suits you best. Urn Crafting Req. Auras The Lumberjack Aura has five levels available. All of them offer a progressively better chance of cutting logs while the Aura is active. If you do not cut the log, you can fill in the device similar to unrcrafted for invention, or bought the Grand Exchange Log-splitting Scrimshaw 15% chance to destroy the log, if you cut, giving an experience boost to player-owned ports or purchased from the Grand Exchange Strung Rabbit Foot increases the drop rate of Crystal Geodes & Bird Nests containing eggs purchased from the Grand Exchange, requires level 24 Hunter Sentinel Dresses to increase 5%-7% experience, with many different perks depending on the gear type Treasure Hunter Perks increase in the battlester not only allows you to gain some great invention experience, but also improves your overall wood cutting experience per hour. For each benefit, the best communication elements can be found in the Component Combinations section. Perk Effect Component Combinations Brushed (Levels 1-5) Increases the chances of successful cutting by 2% with a tier 5 Sharp 4 Point, 1 Sharp 5 Silent Furnace (levels 1-3) Chance to consume any resources in exchange for dual experience. With a 5.5%-16.5% chance depending on the tier 5 Sharp 5 Dragonfire 5 soaked in familiar needing a level 33 Summons, the Beaver familiar gives an invisible Woodcutting boost on two levels. This represents a reduction rate of roughly 3.5%. Beaver pouches are relatively inexpensive and a great boost in training. You can also collect different logs and planks while summoning! Quick Method Levels 1-15: Regular Trees Regular Trees can be found almost everywhere in RuneScape. A good place to start would be outside the Grand Exchange. Levels 15-30: Oak Trees A little south of where it was located near the Varrock West bank, three oak trees placed near each other. Whether you banka the logs or not, it's a conveys place. Levels 30-35: Willows There are plenty of willows right out of Draynor bank. It's a great place to cut them. Willow logs aren't worth much, and you'll only be here for a short time, so banking isn't necessary if you plan to use the logs for other purposes. Levels 35-47: Teak trees cutting Teak trees inside Tai Bwo Wannai is a great way to experience fast. You will need 100 Trading Sticks to enter, but they can be purchased from GE at a low price. There is no bank nearby, so you might want to powercut these. This just means that you have to drop the logs as you cut them to maximize your experience hourly. You can tie logs to the skill bar to make it quick and easy. Levels 47-80: Acadia trees are located within the Imperial District Acadia trees are one of the best methods of training in tree cutting quickly. Think of them as an improved version of Teaks. They can also be found in menaphos VIP crop area if you have access. Levels 80-99: Acadia Trees Crystallise It also requires 88 Magic and (optionally, but recommended) 80 Prayers. Once you reach level 80, you can complete the In The Light mission to access Crystalline Magic and Light Form Prayer. By using magic, you don't get any resources on a tree and instead get a 50% user experience increase. If prayer is active at the same time, it will have a full boost of 87.5% growth experience. Profit Method Follow the quick method above level 90. Levels 90-99: Elder Trees Unfortunately, most trees in RuneScape 3 do not provide a good source of profit. Diaries like Yew and magic used to be great, but as the rise of the loot table drops these items, prices have fallen significantly. I'm not recommended for cutting wood for profit until at least level 90. Elder Diaries can't find any monster drop tables, so the price will be consistently high. If you reach level 90, you can cut these trees with some big cash while AFKing! Elderberry trees are unique to a player. Each tree can be cut for a total of 5 minutes before exhaustion, taking 10 minutes to respawn. There are a total of 10 Eldertrees around the map, so you never run out. The best rotation is as follows: South Yanille &t; north-west of the Tree Gnome Stronghold bank (use bank if needed) &t; south of Draynor Village bank (bank re-teleporting back to Yanille) AFK method Follow the quick method above level 68. Levels 68-94: Choking Ivy Ivy is substantially the most AFK lumberjack method throughout the game. You can find different areas of the game around growing on the sides of walls and buildings. It will yield absolutely no resources except the occasional Bird Nest. Click to cut, it's as easy as that! The easiest way to reach Ivy is by using Varrock lodestone and running north from the castle yard. Head east towards the agricultural patch and you'll find five spots of Ivy. Levels 94-99: Crystal trees with seven shreddable crystal trees scattered across the map. Only one tree is active at a time. You can find the location by right-clicking on an inactive Crystal tree and the Look at option. This displays a message in the chat window that is swaying: The tree is slightly leaning toward the [direction]. Use the map to determine which tree is active based on the following locations. Alternatively, use friendly chat, such as Tree Hunt, which calls for new active trees. Location Nearest Teleport Near Gnome Ball Field Spirit Tree, Eagles' Peak Lodestone South East of the Lighthouse Games Necklace, Enchanted by Lyre Seers' Dark Wizard Tower Falador Lodestone West of Brimhaven Karamja Lodestone south of Yanille Yanille Lodestone West of the Observatory Ring of Duelling (Castle Wars teleport) Arc Training Follow the quick method above level 90. You need to do these methods effectively. Levels 90-96: Bamboo If you're looking to fill in the Face content and also want some woodcutting experience, Bamboo is a great way to go. You can cut as much regular Bamboo as you want waiko, averaging about 80 bundles per hour. The experience here is not great and is actually even slower than Ivy. It's incredibly AFK, however. Levels 96-99: Gold bamboo when reaching level 96 Wood cutting, you have the chance to find private islands of Gold Bamboo spawns. Each node provides enough resources for a total of 100 batches. This method more than doubles your regular bamboo experience, reaching up to 120k per hour. This, combined with the AFK factor, makes this method an excellent choice for training. .in: Incomplete Articles, Training Guides, Wood Cutting Share This article is about non-members training methods for wood cutting skills. For members' training methods of wood cutting, see Pay-to-play Lumberjack Training. This guide describes the most effective non-members methods to train your wood cutting skills. The experience rate estimates in this guide do not include the usage of any experience to increase items or bonus experience, and assume that players have the best possible hatchet available at the Woodcutting level. Cutting wood is a collecting skill that, for free-to-play players, involves obtaining logs of tree felling. Only 5 different types of trees are available to non-members: trees, oak trees, willows, maple trees and yew trees. Axes are the means to cut down trees. As players level up their wood cutting skills they are able to gain experience and logs more often while cutting wood. They are also able to use axes, which cut at a faster pace. You can also cut several types of trees. Useful equipment Axes In addition to the requirements of the logging level, battle kits also require certain attack levels. However, players are able to use the hatchet without fitting as axes held in the inventory or tool belt are automatically used to shred. To save inventory space, players are strongly recommended to add the hatchet to their tool belt or install it. Once an axe has been added to the tool belt, it cannot be removed, but players can add a higher level of hatchet to their tool belt if the hatchet currently stored in the tool belt is worse than the added one. Players can add hatchets, which are not currently high enough cutting levels to use that tool belt. If the hatchet stored in the player's tool belt is required to have a higher level of wood cutting than the It will act as the best available hatchet for the player's curret Logger level. Axes can be purchased from the Grand Exchange, received monster drops or forging the required Smithing level. Axes up to Adamant also bought Bob's Brilliant Axes in Lumbridge. Urns Urns can be used to gain additional wood cutting experience during exercise. When kept in inventory, the urns are filled as the player cuts trees. Only the increase in basic experience counts as a way to fill the urn. Full urns can be teleored to gain additional experience, equivalent to 20% of the wood cutting experience gained while filling the urn. Only one urn is charged at a time, although players can own up to 10 full urns. If a player has 10 full lumberjack urns, he must teleport at least 1 before he can fill several urns. Urns can only be traded in (nr), not operated, forms. In order to make a lumberjack urn the player must add a land rune to it; this makes the urn tradeable. From March 9 to March 13, 2017, treasure hunter was available for parts of the Sentinel corps. The oak, willow and maple lookout outfits consists of head slots, body slots, leg slots, hand slots and leg slot items. When wearing the full version of the three outfits, players gain the following bonuses: Players who own each piece of oak, willow and maple sentinel dresses can combine these outfits to form nature sentinel clothes. This outfit gives excellent benefits given to other sentinel outfits: a 7% higher chance of success while cutting wood (compared to 5% for other sentinel outfits). 20 daily teleports (as opposed to 5 of the other sentinel outfits): All teleport options to the other sentinel outfits offer Active Evil Tree Methods Summary See here to calculate how many logs can be obtained during training. Level method Wood cutting experience per hour 1-15 Regular trees 9700 15-30 Oak trees 19,000 30-99+ Willows 24,000-57,000 Levels 1-15: regular trees Level 1 Wood cutting, players should start training on regular trees. At levels between 1 and 15 wood cutting, players gain experience at a rate equivalent to 9,700 experience per hour cutting regular trees. However, with only 2,416 experiences needed to achieve level 15 wood cutting, a player with wood cutting experience can expect to reach level 15 after about 15 minutes of training. Regular trees are located throughout RuneScape, but the only type of tree that is cut down after receiving only one log of it. To avoid the need to wait for trees to respawn during training, players should train in places with lots of regular trees available (such as the dead wood forest south of Draynor Manor, in the south-west of the Grand Exchange in Varrock, west of the Cooks Guild). Levels 15-30: Oak trees are 15 Lumberjack players can start training in oak trees. Level between 15 and 30 Wood cutting, players gain experience at a rate equivalent to 19,000 experience per hour in oak trees. Since a total of about 10,950 woodcutting experience is needed to advance to level 15-30 Woodcutting, players should be able to reach these levels in about 35 minutes. Oak trees are found in many places throughout RuneScape, but a good example is a good place to cut them just south-west of Varrock's west coast (south of the Grand Exchange and just east of Gertrude's house). Here players will find 3 oak trees located near the bank, another 3 oak trees located south of the first group. Levels 30-99+: Willows Level 30 Lumberjack players must start training in willows. Non-member willows continue to have more experience per hour than any other type of tree available until level 99 wood cutting. About 24,000 experiences can be gained per hour by training willows at level 30 wood cutting and up to 57,000 experience per hour can be gained at level 99 wood cutting. One of the best places to cut willows is just south-west of the bank Draynor Village, where a large group of willow trees are located near the coast. Other places are also south of Port Sarim prison and just west of the lake south of Taverley. Players can gain more experience every hour by throwing away the willow logs they cut instead of banking on them. Players in Evolution of Combat mode drop willow logs as they cut by adding willow logs to the action bar and then right-clicking this icon to throw the logs. If the action bar is near the bottom of the customer's display area but not snapped to the bottom, it's easy enough to alternate willow logs with the right and left buttons without moving the mouse. Unlike dropping logs directly into the inventory, dropping logs through the action bar does not break wood cutting. This section or article is incomplete.
