About 88,000 Blue Ember Gas Grills have been recalled after reports of 161 gas grill fires and at least nine burns caused by the faulty design of the gas tank hose. The U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission (CPSC) and Health Canada announced the gas grill recall on Tuesday, warning that a hose connected to the propane grill gas tank may be too close to the firebox and overheat. The action is an extension of a prior Blue Ember grill recall of 47,000 of the gas grills issued in October 2008 for the same problem. At that time, however, no injuries were reported. Fiesta Gas Grills, from Dickson, Tenn. imported the gas grills, which were manufactured in China. The reports of gas grill fires received by Fiesta are probably only a small part of the actual number of problems that have occurred. Of the nine reported injuries, at least two involved major burns on different parts of the body, six involved minor burns and one involved temporary hearing loss. The Blue Ember Gas Grills are liquid propane outdoor grills sold in silver and black or silver and gray, with Blue Ember printed on the cap of the grill. The grill has a two-door closet style arrangement. The model numbers affected by the recall are FG50045, FG50057 and FG50069. The liquid propaangrills were sold at retailers in the United States from November 2006 to June 2008 and in Canada through May 2009. The CPSC recommends that consumers immediately stop using the recalled gas grill and contact fiesta for a free replacement fat pan assembly and instructions for installing the part and gas tank. The CPSC also advises consumers to inspect the gas burner hose and regulator for signs of damage. Fiesta Gas Grills replaces the parts if they are damaged. Additional information can be obtained from Fiesta Gas Grills at (866)740-7849 or online at www.blueembergrills.com. In the event that a gas grill fire or serious injury was caused by the faulty Blue Ember grills, product liability advocates advise that the grills be stored in a way to prevent further use without any changes or changes to the grill until after any legal action is reviewed. ((Health Canada)) Some 25,000 Blue Ember outdoor barbecues have been recalled after users users North America reported several grill fires, some of which caused nine injuries, including two cases of severe burns. The recall includes liquid propane and natural gas outdoor barbecue grills with the words Blue Ember printed on the hood. The affected barbecues are cabinet-style grills that come in two colour combinations: silver and black and silver and grey. Health Canada said in a release that if the affected grills are not properly mounted, the burner hose may be exposed to excessive heat, posing a possible fire and fire hazard. The importer, Fiesta Barbeques of Brampton, Ont., voluntarily recalls the barbecues in partnership with the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission and Health Canada. Only grills with certain model numbers (FG50045, FG50057, FG50069, C1072-30744, C1072-30754) and have the serial numbers below affected. Health Canada says 15 of these incidents were possibly related to the danger involving the grease pan. There are no reports of injuries. In the United States, there have been 161 reports of grill fires resulting in nine injuries, including two incidents of severe burns on different parts of the body, six incidents of minor burns, and one incident with temporary hearing loss. The recall includes 88,000 units in the U.S. and 25,000 in Canada. The recall includes three U.S. models (FG50045, FG50057, FG50069) and two Canadian (C1072-30744, C1072-30754). The serial numbers can be found on the U.S. and Canadian recall notices. In October, Fiesta recalled 47,000 Blue Ember grills including some of the same model numbers. Two months earlier, Consumer Reports had asked the CPSC to issue a safety warning over the grill after discovering it could be fitted incorrectly. At the time, Fiesta said it had made design changes that reduced the risk of improper routing of the burner hose, which created the fire hazard. This time, Fiesta asks consumers to stop using the grill and call the company to obtain a free replacement grease pan assembly and instructions for installing the pan and gas tank. The grill may not be used until the new grease pan has been installed and the gas tank has been installed correctly. Consumers should also inspect the gas burner hose and the regulator, which are replaced free of charge if there are signs of damage. Call Fiesta at 866-740-7849 between 7 a.m and 5.m p.m. CT Monday through Friday, email nmorman@fiestagasgrills.com or visit the company's website. Made in China, grills were sold in various home centers and by national retailers from November 2006 to June 2008 for between $400 and $500 in the United States and from November 2006 through May 2009 for between $400 and $600 in Canada. Our view: We are increasingly concerned that the recognised safety standard on gas grids does not go far enough to record the fire hazard seen during regular use. Use.
