(October 11) Chemung County and Tioga County, Pennsylvania, reached a reciprocal agreement that would make it easier for residents in each county to obtain permits for non-resident handguns in another state. The deal is identical to the Chemung County agreement created with Bradford County in 2016.Under the new agreement, Tioga County residents who own land or work in Cheung County often do business in Cheung County or active or retired law enforcement officers may apply for a New York City A non-resident gun permit at the Chemung County Sheriff's Office in Elmira.Likewise, qualified Chemung County residents can apply for Pennsylvania non-resident gun permits at the Tioga County Sheriff's Office in Wellsboro.In past, Chemung County residents who wanted a Pennsylvania gun permit had to travel to Williamsport to apply. The arrangement with Bradford County has been very successful in ensuring qualified applicants from both states can obtain non-resident permits under each state's laws, according to the current Chemung County Sheriff Bill Schrom.To apply for a permit for non-residents, the applicant must have a valid gun permit in his own state. Each sheriff's office will also review anyone who makes the application.
