Persona fusion guide royal

Moved to /megaten-fusion-tool/?csr=/p5r/personas See code on GitHub Persona - Skills - Settings Persona 5 Royal starts out as a pretty typical JRPG, just with a social mechanic in the game. You run around the city buying supplies and completing small loads during the day, and at night, you head to the metaverse to take enemies in battle in turn. Even the Persona system is familiar with you collecting and storing personas as it is a Pokémon game. Persona fusion is where the game begins to deviate from gender conventions. Although the hard-won Personas merger seems confusing, the process is actually simple. Even better, the complexity of the fusion system are not necessary to make it through the game. It doesn't matter if you just want to get a grip on the mechanic or if you're looking to unlock the most powerful Personas in the game, this guide on Persona fusion will get you set right. Mergers explainedPersona 5 Royal walked you through how to merge Personas as you unlock new options in the Velvet Room. However, for new players, the process is mystifying. In short, you can sacrifice two or more of your personas to merge them into a result (hopefully stronger). In most cases, the resulting persona is only slightly stronger. For example, if you merge Silky, a level 6 persona, with The Average, a level 1 persona, the result is a level 7 Succubus. You can exploit the fusion system to unlock powerful Personas early, though. Using Silky again, you can merge it with a Level 2 Pixie to unlock level 26 Clotho.We need to tackle the levels before you can start the merger, however. You have to be at the level of the person for the merger to work. So in the case of Bloto, it must be at least level 26, despite the fact that the result comes from a level 6 and level 2 Persona. Each Persona has a basic level - the number we made to which we refer — and regardless of the personas levels you are futing, the result will always reach the base level. So quite simple: Sacrifice two or more Personas and make one stronger. But like a lot of systems in Persona 5 Royal, there's more than that. Every Persona you have comes from a certain Arcana. When you merge two Personas, you will get a result based on the Arcana you merge. For example, Personas from Judgment and Arcana Lovers will lead to a Persona from Hanged Man Arcana. Atlas, fortunately, provides a diagram in the game manual for tracking the results of the merger. Besides, I'm Arcana Bursts. Each confidant you have in Persona 5 is linked to a particular Arcana. If your resulting person is in an Arcana linked to a confidant - Ryu is related to Chariot, for example - Persona will receive a experience after the merger. The impulse I receive is based on your social rank with the Confidant in question (the game also indicates Arcana Bursts when merger). You can even get around the level restriction mentioned above with Arcana Bursts. The additional experience comes after the merger has occurred, so any additional levels that Persona receives is just an additional power, regardless of your level of experience. Persona fusion worksOne point of confusion when it comes to Fusion Persona is simply how many different options and types of mergers are available, especially as you advance through the game and level up Twin Wardens and Prison Master confidants. Here's what all this does: Normal Fusion (dyad guillotine): This is the simplest form of Persona fusion. Choose two Personas, and tell you the result. Good for when you want to get rid of some low level personas and don't necessarily care what the result is. Advanced Fusion: Group guillotine uses three or more Personas to make a single result. You won't use this very often, not least because advanced fusion is primarily to make the powerful, high-level Personas.Fuse result (search guillotine): The most useful option, the search guillotine allows you to see all the Personas you can do from your currently equipped personas, even sorting their level. You should use this option whenever you start filling in Personas to clear the inventory space while making sure you receive a new and useful Persona from process.Network Fusion(public execution): This late game option allows you to send a Persona per day free in the ether to merge with a randomly selected Persona from another player. It's a gamble, but it can lead to powerful mergers. Not necessarily useful, but it can be fun to try late in the game. There are also fusion alarms that change the outcome of a merger, but we'll get to that shortly. While it's best to use the Fuse page by result, you can only view possible Persona-based mergers you have. Fortunately, there is an open-source tool at hand that shows all possible mergers and even includes statistics for every Persona in the game. When and merge personas'Persona 5' Hands OnThe when the part is easy: Head to the Velvet Room and use Persona fusion whenever the inventory of Personas begins to fill up. When you successfully capture new personas during the fight, you have the option to reject the old ones if the inventory is full, but that's a loss. Fuse Personas regularly to ensure that there is always room for new catches. It's not the only benefit, though. The characters gained through fusion are much stronger than those caught in the wild. First, they will gain experience based on the confidant thanks to Arcana Burst, often leveling several times immediately after merging them. And you get to choose more attacks from the personas component to pass down to the new persona, giving you a more versatile arsenal. As far as, as regards, You always want to start with the third option, Fuse after the result, so you can sort the possible level results. This ensures that you are always making the strongest personas possible while not wasting your time trying to sort through mergers that are too high a level for you to even do. Simply select Safety by Result and use R1 or L1 to move to the Sort by Level page, and then scroll down to Persona Results that are at or below the current level. Start from there and work your way down until there are more results for you to do or until you've spent all the Personas don't mind giving up. Persona 5 Royal Fusion Alarms ExplainedPersona 5Exclusive to Persona 5 Royal, there are Fusion Alarms. Once you find the route in the Palace dungeon - we will not spoil anything here - Fusion alarms will unlock automatically. If you use guillotine during a fusion alarm, there are a few things that happen. First, the resulting persona becomes an additional state boost. In addition, Treasure Demons are treated as five higher levels during a fusion alarm, allowing you to merge them with personas. There's stronger to merge during a fusion alarm, though. Accidents can occur if your resulting personeither receives a mutant skill or no ability at all. That's not always a bad thing - mutant skill can also be a better one. If you want to start an accident, you'll want to merge twice. After the first merger, the result will appear in the inventory with a yellow name. The merger of this Persona with another will almost always lead to an accident. And it's a big accident. If you merge the result of a Persona merger during a merger alarm, the end result will have a completely new set of skills. Merger alarms don't happen constantly, though. After you unlock the mechanic at the beginning of the game, it will then trigger at random whenever you defeat an enemy. You can trigger a manual fusion alarm as well. Chihaya Mifune, a fortune teller from Shinjuku, is linked to Fortune Arcana. Once Chihaya becomes your confidant, level Fortune Arcana to level 9. After, you can request a reading from Chihaya, which will trigger a merger alarm for a small fee. Which Personas to merge, what attacks to choose, and moreThere are tough and fast rules when it comes to Fusion Persona. That's part of the beauty of this system: It allows a lot of space for experimentation while not punishing you for making boom mergers. We do, however, have some general tips for persona fusion in Persona 5:Do not attach it it is easy to attach yourself to certain Personas that you tend to get on in battle, but the reality is that you should not hesitate to use them in fusion. If they are strong or useful, they will probably also lead to strong mergers. And besides, if you're not happy with the result, you can always re-convene that Persona from Twin Wardens for a Fee. Merge personas at high level beyond completion, there is no reason to try to merge every possible persona at all levels. When you merge the new personas, it is perfectly good to start with the highest possible Persona you are able to merge and work down the list there. You'll end up losing it, but that's no big deal, and chances are you'll meet them later in battle anyway. Register often as a secondary note, register personas often. The first version of a Persona you get, either by merger or in battle, is automatically registered and you must manually record other changes. If you have two versions of the same Persona, this can cause problems. For example, if you have two Jack Frost Personas, but you've been leveling up to the second, you'll lose all that progress if you go to equip Jack Frost later. Update Personas as often as possible to take into account new changes. Merge smarter, no harderYou can just use the Fuse by Result page and go through Persona 5 Royal smoothly. There is a method of fusion madness, though, and that is where you will find a lot of fun in Persona 5. Use Arcana Bursts and fusion results to your advantage. So we get to the following few tips, being selectivewill allow your persona melted at the inherent attacks you want, and you get to complete the tasks for Twin Wardens. Being selective is important, but Arcana Bursts overcomeeverythingis. If you can merge a Persona with an Arcana Burst, you should. Cover your elementary bases A good rule of thumb when merging personas is to try to pass down as many elementary attacks as possible. You can't cover all your weaknesses with just your teammates, and you don't want to get stuck in a tough fight without a person who has the right attack to exploit an enemy's weakness. Try to carry out at least one attack of each type at any time. That said, don't just focus on elementary attacks. State buffs and debuffs are practically needed for some late game areas, while more specific moves - would be Tetraja, which provides a barrier to all allies who deny any insta-kill boring attacks opponents might use - can be useful in specific situations. Even physical movements with great damage (those that use some of your HP) can be useful because some enemies are immune to magic. It is best to have a well-rounded task. Keep Twin Wardens in mindIf you plan to fufude Personas often, we recommend improving the social link with Twin Wardens in the Velvet Room. To impress them, you need to find or create Personas with at their request. As you build your relationship, the Guardians give you more options for leveling, merging, and invoking Personas.When the Guardians give you a new mission to get a specific personwith a specific move, keep it in mind. Find Personas who have that and then keep using them in fusion and move on to the result until you get what you want. Note, however, that you can only get some of the results needed for Gemini through advanced fusion. But many of its top stocks are not obvious. At least there was the scholarship. Despite the Covid-19 pandemic, which shut the U.S. economy, the Dow and the rest of the major indexes finished the year at or near record highs. This is so often the case when there is a wide gap between the gains in the stock market and economic pain, many investors begin to wonder if we have witnessed a massive financial bubble. Wall Street investment firms burn oil at midnight as we approach the end of 2020, publishing their year-end notes and New Year's predictions, both for building investors. It's not the obvious point: we're in a time of growing markets, and investor sentiment is riding high now that the election is set and COVID vaccines have emergency approval and are getting into distribution networks. However, the blocking policies put in place to combat the virus this winter are slowing the economic recovery. Whether the economy will really tank or not is yet to be seen. Meanwhile, Raymond James strategist Tavis McCourt has published his take on the current situation, and his comments to consider. First, McCourt notes that investors are focusing on the good news: [The] Capital Market is more focused on the implementation of vaccines and the complete reopening of savings in 2021, and so far, negative data points have been largely brushed. Looking ahead, McCourt writes about the next two years: We believe that the logical outcome of 2021 (and 2022 for that matter) is a likely return to normality with a strong increase in EPS offset by smaller p/es, except for a change in the story of the vaccine. We expect cyclical sectors and smaller cap shares to continue to outrun, so is typical in early-cycle markets... Research analysts at Raymond James have been looking for markets for right buys, and their picks bear a closer look. They were tapping high-yield dividend payers as an investment game of choice. The TipRanks database sheds some extra light on three of the JMP's choices - stocks with dividends that give 7% or better - and that the investment firm sees 10% upside down or better. New Residential Investment (NRZ)The Real Estate Investment Segment (REIT) has long been known for its large and reliable dividends, a feature promoted by tax regulations that stipulate that these companies must return a certain proportion of profits directly to investors. Based in New York City, New Residential Investment is typical of its sector. The company's portfolio includes mortgages rights to serve mortgages and the origin of loans. NRZ focuses its operations on the residential housing sector. NRZ is a mid-capitalized company with a market value of $4.13 billion and a portfolio of $5.72 billion. The company's revenues have increased from second quarter of 2020, after abrupt losses during the Corona recession in T1. Third-quarter earnings, however, came at 19.9 per share, down from 54 per cent in the year-to-year quarter. But even with this loss, NRZ took care to maintain the dividend. In fact, he did more than that. The company raised the Q3 dividend to 15 cents per joint share, in a continuation of an interesting story. Back in T1, the company looked back the common dividend at 5 cent, in a move to retain capital during the Corona crisis. The company has since increased the dividend by 5 cent each subsequent quarter, and the Q4 payment, announced in mid-December, is 20 cent per share. In this report, the annual dividend is at 80 cent and the yield exceeds 7.87%. In addition to the dividend increase, NRZ also announced a share repurchase program totalling $100 million. Redemption is due to preferred shares and is next to the existing common share repurchase policy. Analyst Stephen Laws, in his nrz coverage for Raymond James, writes, We expect strong volumes of origin and attractive gain on sales margins to drive strong short-term results, and we will continue to expect a dividend increase in Q4 [..] For 4Q20, we're increasing our basic earnings estimate by $0.02 per share to $0.35 per share. For 2021, we increase our core revenue by $0.08 per share to $1.31 per share. According to these reviews, Laws stock rates an Outperform (e.g. Buy). Its target price of $11.50 implies a one-year profit upwards of 16%. (To view the history of the laws, click here) Not often analysts agree on a stock, so when it happens, take note. NrZ's Strong Buy rating consensus is based on a unanimous 8 Buys. The average share price target of $11.36 suggests a 14% and a change from the current share price of $9.93. (See NRZ stock analysis on TipRanks) Fidus Investment Corporation (FDUS)The following is a business development corporation, Fidus Investment. This company is one of many niche midmarket business finance, providing debt and capital access solutions for smaller firms that may not be able to secure lending in larger markets. Fidus' portfolio focuses on senior guaranteed debt and mezzanine debt to companies worth $10 million and $150 million. Fidus has investments in 68 companies with a combined value of $697 million. The largest part of this portfolio, 59%, is the second-time debt, the rest being divided into between subordinated debt, first lien debt and equity securities. The company recorded revenues in the second and third quarters of 2020, following negative results in Q1. The third quarter top line came at ~$21 million, up to an impressive 129% sequential. Since the third quarter, Fidus has declared its dividend for Q4 at 30 pents per share jointly, as in the two plus an additional special dividend of 2 cents authorised by the Board of Directors. This brings the total payment for the quarter to 34 cent per joint share, and puts the yield to 9.5%. Raymond James analyst Robert Dodd likes what he sees in Fidus, especially the prospects for dividends. We will still see the risk/reward as attractive at current levels – with trading shares under the book, solid forecasted basic dividend coverage from Nil... We design solid FDUS over-earn its quarterly core dividend of $0.30/share through our projection period. As a result, we're doing modest additional projects... Dodd puts an Outperform rating (i.e. Buy) on stock and sets a target price of $14. At current levels, this target indicates an increase of 10.5% in the coming months. (To watch Dodd's history, click here) Wall Street is somewhat more divided into FDUS shares, a circumstance reflected in the moderate Buy analyst's consensus rating. This rating is based on 4 reviews, including 2 Purchases and 2 Retentions. Shares are priced at $12.66, and the $13.33 target average price suggests a modest 5% even higher at current levels. (See FDUS stock analysis on TipRanks) TPG RE Finance Trust (TRTX)Returning to the REIT sector, we look at the TPG RE Finance Trust, the real estate finance arm of the global asset firm TPG. This REIT, with a market ceiling of $820 million, built a portfolio of commercial mortgages totalling $5.5 billion. The company is a provider of original commercial mortgages starting at $50 million, mainly in primary U.S. markets. Most of the company's loans and properties are centered in Many East.Like financial companies, TPG RE Finance has seen serious losses in T1 due to the pandemic corona crisis - but since then has largely recovered. Revenues in T3 reached $48 million, up 9% year-on-year. During the quarter, TPG received loan repayments totalling $199.6 million, a solid result, and at the end of the quarter the company had $225.6 million in cash or cash equivalents at hand. The company was able to easily finance its dividend of 20 pents per joint share in T3. For Q4, the company recently declared not only a regular payment of 20 cent, but also a special cash dividend of 18 cents. Taken together, dividends yield a yield of 7.5%, almost 4 times the average found among companies listed on S&P. Returning to Raymond James REIT expert Stephen Laws, we find that he is bullish on TRTX as well. TRTX has sub-performed from reporting 3Q results, which we believe creates an attractive opportunity to ... We expect basic earnings to continue to benefit from LIBOR floors in loans and expect new investment to resume in 1Q21. The company's portfolio combined the combined exposure to retail and hotels of 14%, which is below the sector average of 19%... To this end, the Laws rates TRTX a Strong Buy and its $13 price target suggests 2021. (To view the history of the laws, click here) This stock also holds a Strong Buy rating from consensus analyst, based on 3 unanimous Buy reviews set in recent weeks. Shares are priced at $10.67 and the average target of $11.00 suggests a modest 3% up from current levels. In December, the life sciences company's shares accumulated a strong 328%. Obviously, investors are buying in the flow of specialist cytogenetics constantly of positive developments. On Monday, the company revealed that its Saphry genome mapping platform was accredited in the U.S. by the College of American Pathologists. The platform will be used by Bionano's client, Praxis Genomics, marking it as the first company to provide a laboratory-developed test (LDT) using genome analysis. Optical mapping of the saphry genome is an alternative to traditional cytogenetic methods, and Max analyst Jason McCarthy believes it could change the game. Digital cytogenetics is one of the areas where Saphry has the potential to change the clinical diagnostic landscape, said the 5-star analyst. Current methods are labor and time intensive, and therefore expensive. Saphry offers a more efficient and streamlined alternative, as well as a potentially improved diagnostic efficiency. As more LDTs develop, we anticipate that adoption for Saphry should increase, leading revenue spto Bionano. While accreditation is the first of its kind in the US, in Europe, clinical trials of genomes are already ongoing in several applications, including inherited genetic disorders and leukemia. The news followed the recent publication of an article that further highlighted Saphry's qualities. In a comparison, comparison test, chemistry was able to detect only 72% of the large SVs (structural variants) detected by Saphry. All in all, McCarthy reiterated a buy rating on BNGO shares along with a $2 price target. Due to Bionano's latest increase, the figure indicates a 5% disadvantage from current levels. ZoomInfo Technologies (ZI)Technology companies, especially in the cloud, communications and marketing segments, have some clear opportunities during the COFID pandemic. ZoomInfo is part of this group: Company services include digital marketing information, account and data management, demand generation and lead prospecting. ZoomInfo offers AI cloud software designed to make these background tasks more efficient so that vendors can focus on sales. ZI shares have recorded volatile trading since it was released in June 2020, but total shares have increased by 34% year-on-year. The third quarter, the first quarter complete ZoomInfo as a public company, showed strong results to encourage investors. Top revenues reached $123.4 million, up 11.8% sequentially and 56% year-on-year.EPS, which was negative in T2, turned positive in T3, with a profit of 2% per share. The company finished the quarter with $59.8 million in free cash flow. ZoomInfo reported that it has 720 customers with $100,000 or more in the value of the annual contract. In his review of ZoomInfo, Brent Bracelin of Piper Sandler, rated 1 on Wall Street by TipRanks, presents a simple case of climbing. We are increasing revenue estimates of $13.6M for this year and $19.6M for next year factoring in broad power and minor contributions from Everstring and Clickagy acquisitions. We are buyers of ZI based on its ambitions to build a modern go-to-market (GTM) operating system with a unique business model balancing high growth and High... Based on the strong results of Q3 and the favorable q4 outlook, we would be aggressive BUYERS of ZI, given its unique profile of a high-growth and high-margin model with a limited risk of decline, Bracelin said. Bracelin sets a $59 price target to go along with this overweight (i.e. Buy) rating, suggesting suggesting ZI is taking place for ~25% growth next year. (To watch the history of bracelin, click here) Overall, there are 9 recent reviews on record for ZoomInfo and all are Buy – making consensus rating analyst a unanimous Strong Buy. (See ZI stock analysis on TipRanks) Ichor Holdings (ICHR)Next up is a holding company whose subsidiaries design, design and manufacture essential gas and chemical fluid delivery systems in a variety of industries. Ichor is best known for its contributions to the semiconductor industry's capital equipment, where its gas module subsystems and chemical processes account for a substantial part of the cost of each chip. Ichor systems are also used in the manufacture of LED screens, biomedical equipment, and alternative energy sources. Specialized manufacturing can be a solidly profitable niche, especially when a company builds parts and tools necessary for top industries. Semiconductor chips are essential in the digital world and cannot be manufactured without input from Ichor's instruments. This gives Ichor a competitive advantage because it offers a product without which its customers cannot cope. This can be seen in quarterly revenues, which have increased slowly but steadily until 2020. The company saw $220 million at the top in T1, and reported $228 million in T3. The third quarter increased by 47% year-on-year and was the sixth quarter in a row to record sequential gains. EPS, at 45 cent per share, was up 28% yoy. Fans include Quint Bolton of Needham, who is second on Wall Street, according to TipRanks. We believe that The fundamentals of Ichor remain strong... we expect the offer to enable ICHR to pursue significant m&a;g&t; which should strengthen its market position, accelerate revenue growth and ensure vertical integration and a higher gross margin over time. Looking further, if the company achieves its LT operating model in the next ~3 years, we'll see NG's power gains of $4.85 per share, Bolton commented. To this end, Bolton evaluates the shares of a Buy, and its price target of $40 implies a profit of 32%. (To watch Bolton's history, click here) Like Bolton, Wall Street chooses ICHR as a long-term winner. With 4 purchase ratings unanimously awarded in the last three months, the shares gain a consensus from analyst Strong Buy. Adding to the good news, its average price target of $40 puts the potential up to ~32%. (See ICHR stock analysis on TipRanks) (DOCU) Last but not least is DocuSign, San Francisco's cloud-based electronic signature service. DocuSign provides customers with a verified and secure electronic signature option for online documents. Customers earn savings from efficiency in the form of faster turnaround, less ink and paper used in printing, and less printing and distributing printed copies for signature. DocuSign's actions were steeply appreciated in 2020 as the switch to remote work and virtual offices put a premium on digital services and online verification. THE DOCU has increased by 205%, more than tripling its value this year. Shares rose as the company's revenue rose. The top line rose 29% between Q1 and Q3, with the third quarter number hitting $392.9 million. Third-quarter earnings increased by 53% year-on-year. YoY's increase in free cash flow was even more impressive, turning from negative $14 million to a $38 million surplus. All this leads RBC's Alex Zukin, 3 analyst in the TipRanks database, to evaluate doCU an Outperform (i.e. Buy) along with a $325 price target. Investors sit in the pocket a 44% gain if the analyst's thesis play out. (To watch Zukin's history click here) Supporting his position, Zukin writes, [Beats] continues as THE DOCU has delivered another very powerful quarter of acceleration on each metric... What is even more impressive in our minds is that this is driven almost entirely by an acceleration of the basic business e-signature with the company being confident that it is still very modestly penetrated into its TAM (which has expanded significantly), which can maintain growth over pre-pandemic levels in a post-pandemic world... Similarly, other Wall Street analysts like what they see. With 10 buying ratings vs. 3 deductions received in the last three months, the shares are gaining a strong consensual Buying rating. At an average price target of $276.46, analysts see ~22% up potentially in store for DocuSign. BEIJING (Reuters) -Tesla Inc. said on Friday that it has begun selling China-made Model Y sports-commercial vehicles (SUVs) and will deliver them to customers this month as the U.S. electric vehicle manufacturer expands sales in the world's largest auto market. China offering consistent subsidies for electric vehicles in bid to reduce pollution from cars petrol or diesel, is the key to Tesla's overall strategy. The starting price of a Model Y in China is now $39,900 yuan ($52,091.95), according to its Chinese website.
