Diary of a wimpy kid hard luck whole book

View source Comments Share Diary of a Wimpy Kid: Hard Luck is the eighth book in the Diary of a Wimpy Kid series. It was released worldwide on Tuesday, November 5, 2013. Synopsis March main characters Greg Heffley are upset about Rowley Jefferson as his closest friend to Abigail, although his mother tries to cheer him up by telling him that friends come and go. Since Rowley Jefferson and Abigail Brown became a couple at the end of the previous book, the two friends have become increasingly distant, very noticeably even in nine and a half days. There were a lot of things Greg and Rowley used to do together, like blow bubbles in chocolate milk cartons that they can't do now because Abigail is so strict about it. Greg doesn't like how Abigail is trying to model Rowley, and even believes he's starting to use it. Greg states that he gets to the point where Rowley is no longer allowed his opinions and is simply following Abigail's. Many plans, such as a snowball fight on a good day, didn't go on, and when Greg confronts Rowley, he taunts Greg by telling him he's just jealous of having a girlfriend. Rowley was the only one who could save Greg from the fact that his English teacher, Mr. Blakely accepts only essays written in italics. In addition, Rowley would search in advance and look for any dog poop while walking to school, but without Rowley, Greg must watch out for poop on his own and avoid Rebel. Greg finds a solution to his problem with luggage: a roller bag. He is able to go to school quickly, but there are some dangers between home and school, such as an angry neighbor whose front lawn was ripped off following a game played by Greg and Rowley last winter, and woods filled with Mingo children, who live in the woods and behave like wild animals. Mom notices Greg and Rowley have stopped dating and gives Greg some advice. Greg, after reading a hundred editions of Slumber Party Pals, realizes that friendships between girls and boys are different and befriends Fregley. He then explains to Fregley things on his dining table like the Five Seconds Rule where anyone can eat anything if they're not on the ground for five or more seconds. A rule has been made. Freddie Harlahan ate a ham, then got sick. Then he explains the problems in his dining room, criticizes the burger and fries they get. and on Friday as Nolan Tiago gets food from his mother from a fast food restaurant and how everyone would fight to get the fries falling out of his box and explains the problem with the seats in his dining room. Greg and Rowley once cycled around the basketball court and a guy named Feast hunted them down and bullied them because he wanted to play basketball with his friends. Greg and Rowley saw flyers for The Superhero Training Academy and decided to go, which they thought would help them resist Leon, but to be a scam for young children. Then they learn that their powers were totally useless. Greg then talks about the different groups of people who find themselves on break, including Erick Glick, a guy who hangs out with his sketchy friends and would give any person an old book relationship or homework if they pay him enough money. Then Greg talks about how the bully signalling station (from Cabin Fever) turned into Find A Friend Station. No child came, but a teacher (Mr. Nern) came to play daseni with him. Greg then begins to feel bad that his younger brother Manny also has a friend that his grandfather also has a girlfriend and many women trying to win him over, as the men are outnumbered by women ten to one explains how Susan tries to convince Greg to make friends by making him have a date with his old partner's son who was a high school senior. He gives Greg tips for making friends and being popular, but these didn't help Greg as it wasn't what was considered popular in Greg's school. Then the school has in mind a system called Hero Points that was assigned to a child if they were found kind to someone else and these could be exchanged for prizes and the class with the most Hero Points would have a day off on the last day of school in June. The children started pretending good deeds whenever the teachers were around. Then Erick Glick put his hands on a sheet and photocopied it and sold it for money, making it clear to the children that they could start falsifying it. Soon the teachers became suspicious that even the worst children had a lot of them, so they began to print them green, but began to contract again, and began a rule that only five hero points could be shot at a time. Even the children who got more than that amount legitimately received detentions, which Greg thinks is a shame, since Marcel Templeton, one of the beautiful children, legitimately earned his five Hero Points. The school then finished the system after the janitor discovered the base of the children who made false Hero Points. Greg then complains to Susan that popularity counts on clothes in her schools, so she takes him, Rodrick, and Manny shopping. Greg talks about how his shoes are delivered by Rodrick and how in the fourth grade his mother bought new cheap ones in the stores of dollars that broke easily and then Greg tries to decide which one to choose. Greg then explains how the road to his school is very dirty and tries to avoid dirt by covering his shoes with plastic bags. Then at school, he took a geography pop quiz, to which he was twenty Greg noticed there was a pile of dog poop on his shoes, so the teacher gave him a plastic bag to keep him inside and take the test. Greg checked lost and found but couldn't find temporary replacements. Luckily, Greg later found Mr. Nern's spare shoes but it was too big for his feet people laughed at him. Susan told Greg she should go out and try to find a new friend, but there aren't good people to be friends with. Greg suddenly thinks of Fregley and thinks that if he becomes his friend, he can shape him as the exact friend he wants. Greg thought he could use Fregley as comic relief to gain popularity. Greg then invites him to his desk for lunch and tries to tell him about the rules of the desk, and when he was telling him about the five-second rule, Fregley quickly ate the potato chip that was in Greg's hand. When they were on their way home, they got too close to the Mingo children and everyone started chasing them, Fregley threw all of Greg's books thinking the children would stop and read them. The next day Greg discovered that when Fregley was dressing he was accidentally wearing his shirt upside down. So Greg took him to the girls' table and hoped they would laugh, but they didn't, so he asked Fregley to do a trick. Fregley undressed in his underwear and put a piece of chewing gum in his navel and began to move it with his navel as if he were chewing on it and then tried to blow a bubble, but that didn't happen and scared the girls, after which, the boys got impressed and tried to see what else Fregley could chew with his navel. Greg thought that from the time his spring break is coming, he can take a stress-free break until Susan says her family will come to town. Greg explains how Susan never gives them any kind of warning when someone on her side of the family (apart from Gramma) comes to visit, feeling that Frank and the boys would probably run for it. Greg continues to explain how most of his relatives across Susan's side of the family live far enough, so they don't see them as much outside of the holidays as Easter. Greg says Susan has four sisters (named Cakey, Gretchen, Veronica and Audra) but notes that the five sisters are all so different from each other that she finds it incredible that they all grew up under one roof. Cakey is the oldest of the five sisters and according to Greg, she has never married or had children, which is probably a good thing, because Cakey doesn't seem too fond of children in general. Also, Susan doesn't trust Cakey to babysit Greg or one of his siblings from this time Greg was small and had a second-degree burn by pressing his entire hand on the iron Cakey had used (though in Cakey's defense, he told Greg not to). Gretchen is the youngest of the five sisters and is basically the polar opposite of Cakey - she has a group of pets and a couple of twin sons named Malvin and Malcolm, who are so educated and out of control that are basically like wild animals (at one point he even kept them on the children's leash). Veronica is the only one who will not make an appearance at Easter, at least not in claims that when it comes to family gatherings for relatives on her mother's side of the family, Veronica usually makes a webcam appearance (Greg thinks staying with the family stresses her). In fact, Greg notices that he probably doesn't see his Aunt Veronica in person from kindergarten. Audra believes a lot in things like psychics and crystal balls and, according to Greg, never does anything (not even household chores) without first consulting her psychic. When Greg had to stay with his aunt Audra for a while in the summer, he ended up taking Greg with her on some of his psychic appointments. When Susan heard about this, she got angry and Greg said she believed that sort of thing was hocus-pocus. However, Greg finds it a bit hypocritical as Susan often states that Gramma has ESP (which is basically a type of psychic powers). Greg talks about his luck and how he's seen things like horoscopes and fortune cookies and isn't happy with the results of making his own decisions. Greg later talks about how he used to make money selling drawings to the family, but they got tired of it and started buying Manny's. Greg explains that Easter will be back at his grandmother's house and there is no kind of entertainment for the kids there and he only has an elephant gagged Ellie, but his dog and their old dog Sweetie have torn off their trunk, ears and limbs. Greg explains how his former dog became really overweight after Gramma overfed him. Greg explains how he loved Easter when his great-grandmother, Meemaw was still alive... Meemaw and her husband, Peepaw, are Gramma's parents and Susan's maternal grandparents. Greg says that when Meemaw was still alive, he would put prizes in plastic eggs and hide them in the backyard. Then, after brunch, the kids would go there and find as many eggs as possible. Greg says Meemaw would always hide more eggs than he needed, and says you could still find enough Greg in the Gramma house and surroundings today to fill at least one basket. Although Meemaw usually put fantastic prizes in eggs, she began to put some rather strange things in her later years. After Meemaw's disappearance, Susan noticed at her funeral that her diamond ring had disappeared. Meemaw's ring had been in the family for at least three generations and apparently was worth a lot of money, so when they saw it was missing, all the relatives got scared and tried to find the ring. Then later they had Easter, where everyone was happy and people moved beyond the problem of the ring. Greg also introduces some of his family members. Greg then explains how he's bored there as he has nothing to deal with. Greg then explains that the main event at Easter was brunch and he didn't like eating there as he thought it was too formal. Greg explains that qualifying who is an adult and can sit at the adult table is incorrect since his uncle Cecil who is actually 3-4 years old and was adopted by his great-uncle Marcie would be sitting with adults and Rodrick with children even if he is almost an adult man. Then Aunt Audra's psychic told her that Meemaw's ring was on a family photo album and then many members began looking for albums. They didn't find him and looked for clues until his uncle Larry found two photos from the last year of Easter and in one photo Meemaw was wearing the ring and in another didn't, so they thought it was in one of the plastic eggs and started looking in the backyard. The family didn't come in and the Heffleys eventually left. Aunt Gretchen and her children were supposed to stay with the Heffleys for a week, but they only did so for two days since one of the twins called 911 when the ketchup ran out. Greg was asleep in Rodrick's room on an air mattress the next day, when he woke up he found a Magic 8 Ball under Rodrick's bed, picked him up and asked him a question and shook her. Then, when magic 8 Ball began to give reasonable answers, Greg realized that he could also take advice from it and would use it to make few decisions in his life. April Greg begins to find some limits of her Magic 8 Ball but does not give up. One day, Susan tells him to get out, but instead hides in his closet. There he finds a lot of hidden parenting books. Then he notices some stuffed monkeys that looked exactly like the one he had as a child. Then a flashback happens at the time Greg lost the toy, but he found another one above his dresser and (perhaps mistakenly) concluded that his mother bought reinforcements to replace the toy if it gets lost. Greg then uses reverse psychology to convince his parents to give him a phone and pick up his mother's old one. Greg wasn't allowed to call and had to share the phone with Manny. Greg downloaded some games and played them until he was in the bathroom playing and his aunt Veronica's video chat came, he was surprised and dropped his phone in the bathroom, and he caught it out but it didn't work. Greg decides to take a hobby club after school so he can escape the woods of the Mingo Kids and kill time. Using magic 8 ball comes across the yearbook club door, the yearbook was almost complete but more photographs were needed, so Greg registered. Greg started taking pictures of random things as he couldn't find anything interesting that people were doing. She started editing the photos to make them fun. He goes back to his mother's closet and finds his Body Blankie, a blanket he had with gloves, basically an onesie made of the blanket. Greg and Rodrick were totally dependent on it and almost always wore it and slept everywhere with it, so his parent took it away. Greg thought that wearing Blankie's body at school would make him feel how he feels when in bed so he could wear it under his school clothes. Greg had disadvantages: he couldn't open his locker and was unable to do Jumping Jacks to Phys Ed properly. After that, he thought of taking it off, but his zipper fell and began to sweat. Then he had a true/false social studies test. He used magic 8 Ball to find the answers, but while he was doing it his magical ball 8 fell and the teacher caught him. The teacher thought it was a high-tech cheating device and reported it to Deputy Principal Roy who later called his mother. Susan tried to defend Greg by saying the Magic 8 Ball was just a harmless toy and couldn't use it to cheat, but Mr. Roy said Greg's grades deteriorated and gave him a warning that if they didn't improve he would be at summer school. Greg then worries about summer school and talks about it and how he cares about his grade. Then Greg worried about his science fair coming soon. Greg was getting ideas, but his yearbook teacher came and asked him to take photographs of the category winners. Greg took the pictures of him until Rowley and Abigail showed up and they were voted nicer couple and Greg started to feel sad, but he still took their pictures and resigned from his job. Greg got his Magic 8 Ball, but because he was apparently broken and would no longer give answers, Greg threw it away in Gramma's yard. Greg was under pressure later because he had to do a science project. So he thought about talking to Erick Glick, and during the break, Greg told him that he needed a scientific project. Erick Glick took him to the storage area of the school where Dennis Denard is located, and took Greg to the room where all the science fair projects had to control a project. However, once Greg saw some of the old projects, especially Rodrick's middle school project, he began to have second thoughts about it. Erick and Dennis began to get mad at Greg and told him to pick one, but he said he had no money. They didn't believe him and told him to flip his pockets to prove it, but he ran away before they could catch him. In the end, Greg proceeds as originally planned by doing his science fair project, which he acknowledges may not be the biggest project, but he's glad he did it himself. Apart from that, Greg notes that in the end it's a good thing that he didn't buy a project from Dennis and the others because it turns out that someone gave a shirt to a teacher about what Dennis and the others were doing, and later, a group of faculty members gave a jersey to a teacher about what Dennis and the others were doing, and later, a group of faculty members a raid on the closet where all the old homework and science fair projects were held. Greg says all the students who have been captured have detention for the rest of the school year and he thinks they'll probably also be forced go to summer school. The day before the science fair project, Greg worked on his science fair project right after school. He thought he was done with the project, but Susan got over the rules and found that the project needs to be typed. Greg thought he'd do the typing part in the morning, but he woke up late and didn't have time to do it. He actually discovered that the project had been typed by his mother and tried to thank her, but Susan was already asleep. Although this happened, Greg had fun all day since he turned himself in to his scientific project. Rowley, however, doesn't enjoy it, and it is revealed that just a week after he and Abigail were voted Cutest Couple, she broke up with him (pretty hard for it) and went back with her former boyfriend, Michael Sampson. Greg explains that he heard several students say that Abigail had never been to Rowley in the first place and was dating him only to make Michael jealous in the hope of getting back together. Over lunch, Greg finds Rowley (who still seems traumatized by Abigail's betrayal) at Find-a-Friend station and is about to go to him, but Mr. Nern beats him. Greg started realizing it's best not to be friends. But seeing Rowley play lady with Mr. Nern made him feel guilty, so he decides to go to the place where he could get the only answer. Greg heads to the courtyard of his Gramma to find his Magic 8 Ball so he can get another good answer from it. But when he started shaking it, something shines in the trunks, which makes him forget the ball and he went there. He found a plastic egg, which he knew he had found Meemaw's ring. Many thoughts came to his mind, but then he thought of hiding it as it was said that the family would disamore. The next day, he decided it was up to him. At lunch, he went to the back of the line where Rowley was sitting and invited him to sit with him. As a result, he and Rowley reunited as friends. The book ends with him proving that even if Susan's saying of friends come and go and the family stays forever it may be true, she says her family won't be here when the Mingo kids chase him on the way to school. He also says he's pretty sure he and Rowley will probably do another fight somewhere along the way, but for now, they're good, or maybe at least until the yearbook comes out, but he thinks they can deal with it later. Since Greg reduced Rowley's head in the photo with Abigail. Curiosity This is the last book to be released before the soft reboot of the series in The Long Haul. Magic Eight Ball appears as an object in this book. The theme of this book and the plot have to do with Magic 8 This is the 8th book in the series. This is the first and only appearance of Magic Eight Balls in the series. This book was foreshadowed in the final pages of The The Wheel. Abigail returns with her old boyfriend, Michael Sampson, in this book. On March 25, 2013, Jeff Kinney revealed the book's teaser, which had Greg with an umbrella, while Magic Eight Balls fell around him. On July 18, 2013, it was announced that the cover would be revealed on August 8, 2013. Before the book's title was revealed, there were several rumors about what the book would be called, including Life Stress, Flipped Out, Spring Bummer, and a fake cover called School Dilemma. This is the second book with the word Diary which is not Yellow. The first is Dog Days. This is the second book in which the words of a Wimpy Kid are in Orange, the first is The Third Wheel. It was rumoured for a while that the book would be the last in the series until Jeff Kinney said it wouldn't be. This is the fourth time Greg and Rowley have had a big fall. The first was in the original Diary of a Wimpy Kid after Greg got Rowley into trouble for security patrols and lied about it, the second being Dog Days where one, gets a fight on the mowing system with Rowley and the two have a great fight with each other. The third is in The Bad Truth when they have a big fight for events towards the end of Dog Days. This is Fregley's greatest appearance in a book. Many things that have not appeared since the first books (or books outside the main series) reappear in this: in Greg's mathematical problem, the answer is 62. Such equations are generally first-grade questions. This could mean Greg isn't good at math at all, although Greg explains that he had A and B in all his subjects in his first quarter. However, this book could take place during Greg's third trimester, where he and the other students begin to struggle with their school subjects more often. On page 29, Rowley closes his mouth for the third time in the book series, the second being Page 166 of The Third Wheel, and the first is on Cabin Fever's Page 58, and fourth overall, counting Diary of a Wimpy Kid Online. Fregley is also seen shutting his mouth for the first time in the series. It closes it on pages 79-81. In real life, a Magic Eight Ball generally doesn't stop from being dropped once – they're extremely hard to break in reality (unless you throw it hard enough). In this book, you can find meemaw plastic eggs out of place on some pages. For example, when Fregley and Greg lost the Mingo Kids at the bus stop on Page 83, there's an egg under the mailbox. There are a total of 104 eggs hidden in the book. These images were used for an Easter Egg Contest at the Wimpy Kid website, where if the winner gets the estimate of the eggs they have correctly, they would sign the 8th book signed by Jeff Kinney. This is the first book to mention a car brand (Porsche) This is the first book where the page that comes after the inside cover does not show a photo photo the real story (a close-up of Meckley Mingo's belt buckle has not been shown). This is the third book rowley is described as antagonistic. The first was A Wimpy Kid's Diary, and the second was The Ugly Truth. This is the first book in which blood is shown in the series. Chad Middleton had a bloody nose on Page 172. This was the second book after Diary of a Wimpy Kid: The Ugly Truth that continued a situation that happened at the end of his predecessor. A promotional game has been released online, where Greg has to defend himself against flying eight balls. However, he is now dead. Holly Hills may have made an appearance on Page 3. This is the fifth time Greg's Diary has not been mentioned This is the second book to have a green cover, the first being Diary of a Wimpy Kid: The Last Straw. Goofy/Errors On page 2, Greg opens his locker. However, the lock of his locker is still locked. From pages 82-87, 118-120 and 134-137, each character proves too small. This also happens on pages 1, 14 and 74. On page 98, whenever an outdoor wedding occurs, Aunt Audra's skirt doesn't seem to end, or it's possible that she seems to have lean legs. Rodrick's eyebrows are missing on page 109. However, it has been fixed in a new printout. On page 91, one of the family photos had Manny. Manny presumably wasn't born yet when Cakey was babysitting Greg. Greg's too short on page 211. On page 129, when Greg thinks of Sweetie faring in Frank's face, Ellie is not shown. On page 12, the rows are missing on the page. However, this has been resolved in subsequent re-prints of the book. On page 214, Greg's mouth seems to be bigger. From pages 56-73, Greg wears socks when not wearing his new shoes, even when Greg should be wearing shoes.
