The Location ID of WhiterunUthgerdTheUnbrokensHouse Uthgerd's House is the home of Uthgerd Unbroken, although she is never seen in the house and spends all his time inside bannered The Sea. It is located in Whiterun's Wind district, opposite Casa Carlottei Valentia. It consists of a room. Overview [editing ] editing source] The front door opens to the living room with a staircase leading to the bedroom upstairs. The left of the door sits a small table with some random clothes. Beneath the ladder are three bags of food, two barrels of food, a bowl with four potatoes, an end table with clutter and a chest with a little. In the northwest corner is a dinner table that seats three, dressed with a bottle of bread. In the adjacent corner is a wardrobe with clutter, while the shelves above holds a goat cheese wheel and a wheel of eidar cheese. At the foot of the closet, scattered on the floor, are three carrots. A small table in front of the fireplace contains a bottle of alto wine, a wedge of eidar cheese and a treatment with boiled cream. The south alcove has a small wardrobe with four tomatoes on top. A shelf holds several community books. The staircase leads upstairs where a closet contains some clutter, clothes and a thin chance of some jewelry, while an unlocked chest holds a little gold. A window contains two iron daggers. The bedroom has a wardrobe with random clothing, and the end table next to the bed contains clutter. At the foot of the table sits a pair of boots and on top of the table is a bottle of alto wine and a bowl of five red apples. Trivia[edit | edit source] Once Uthgerd is recruited as a follower, all articles, including the bed, are free to use. There is an empty mark to the left of the entrance door. It is owned by Uthgerd the Nesfut, although it rarely sets foot in the house, spending most of its time inside the Great Bannered. It consists of a single area, Uthgerd's House. It will always in residence during the Battle of Whiterun and can be found there at other times. Residents Uthgerd Uthgerd It is the first house on the right as you enter the Wind District of Whiterun from the stairs closest to the gate. There are three lavender plants around the house, which is attached to Amren's house [editing] The front door opens to the living room with a staircase leading to the upstairs bedroom. Left door sits a small table with a bottle of beer and a sweet roll on top. At the foot of the stairs is a closet with some random clothes. Beneath the ladder are three bags of food, two barrels of food, a bowl with a little gold. In the northwest corner is a dinner table that seats three, set with a bottle of beer and a piece of bread. The bedroom has a wardrobe with random clothing, and the end table next to the bed contains clutter. At the foot of the table sits a pair of boots and on top of table sits a pair of boots and on top of table sits a pair of boots and on table sits a mark to the left of the entrance door due to the rarity of the prey; however, the location will no longer be so empty if you are on one of the Vex theft or job sweep. So for the new Skyrim Character Building Event, I opted to make a building based on Uthgerd Unbroken and it wasn't enough for me to just run around, just playing with Uthgerd's skills. I had to be Uthgerd. Stay at Bannered Mare, live near Amren, be a member of the whiterun community. Part of the process of becoming Uthgerd in my build was actually living in Uthgerd's house. I knew she was a follower and a marriage candidate in the game and that you could move into her house after marrying her. I fought Uthgerd, I took her as a follower. Then I got the key to her house and then I killed my doppelganger. After that, I cleaned everything in her house, which wasn't nailed down, and then served my prison sentence (for another roleplaying reason), but at the same time I conducted a test, taking advantage of the inner cell I was placed in that was my prison cell to perform my test. There are several respawn - some dungeons and interior interior and containers are set not to respawn, no matter how much time the game has passed. 2. 10 days - this is typical for inner cells, containers, and outer cells that have been removed. 3. 30 days - This is the status of a location removed Entering cells that feature the respawn rate of numbers 2 or 3 resets the clock. So technically, you can play a sync game and use these respawning containers if you enter and reset the clock before the time before it is set to respawn expires. But I wanted to be absolutely sure, so while Uthgerd was in prison, before I slept to serve my sentence, I decided to wait in the game for a period of time that exceeded the respawn rate of numbers 2 & amp; 3. I waited a total of 36 days in the prison cell of Whiterun's dungeon. When I was released from prison, I went to Uthgerd's house and I will report my findings here. Now, please be aware that while I found safe storage, this was in my game. I play with unofficial patches that could well effect what is considered safe versus unsafe storage. Peforming the test on its own really won't take too long, about 30 minutes or less in real time, I'm not sure. It didn't take long. Uthgerd's house can be found if you take the first left at the entrance to the Whiterun Gates, through the stone arch, it'll be right to your right. It's interesting, because Uthgerd and Amren's house kind of form an interesting in duplex. game and this will be important later when we discuss crafting. It has two levels, although the ground level is much higher than more loft-like upper level. There really isn't much in the way of loot, some gold and common objects. In fact, Uthgerd is so poor that The Thieves Guild marked his home with an empty shadow sign. Poor darling. I decided that what was safe and what was not best done by taking screenshots of the containers in the house and then boxing or circling with either green (safe) or red (unsafe) to indicate which containters were usable for a long time. The first image is the entrance to Uthgerd's house. Items in the box include two large bags, a barrel, an end table, and a closet. The items in the green box turned out to be empty after a 36-day wait. A note on this first dress just to the right of the door. Some of the items you store there are then marked as red when you view them in the closet inventory. However, when you remove items, they are not considered as in-game theft, nor are they marked as stolen when they appear in inventory. Containers did not respawn, although the items on top of and around them did. Heading to the upper level of Uthgerd's house yields four more containers that do not respawn. A Noble wardrobe and a chest small hallway in the upper level attic. And in the bedroom are a closet and a bedside table by the bed. The bed also offers a rested bonus, though, lol, I'm trying to imagine Uthgerd fits in there with any husband in the game. The chest below also lists stolen items, would be the closet at the entrance not. I was actually pleasantly surprised by the relatively unsafe storage I encountered. I have mapping for them below. I wouldn't advise putting anything in these containers. In general, coffers are still leery to me, even though I have encountered a certain one. I, however, return quite frequently that respawn time is never really triggered. Containers that were put back in the air included two large bags, a chest under the stairs leading to the attic and a barrel behind a non-respawning bag indicated by the arrow. Upstairs he saw only the dagger displaying with two iron daggers. I've been living in her house for quite a few days of playing now, and I'm pretty confident that if you don't stay away too long, just to be safe, you can use her house without any problems, just avoid storing in respawning containers. But storage and a bed is not all that is needed to live successfully. What I thought was really cool about living like Uthgerd in her home is that she doesn't have access to any crafting inside her house, which is very normal for a regular citizen of the city, but there are quite a few options available in Whiterun if you want to craft. Cooking: I'm not sure if things are different between a patched and unpatched game, but I found a cooking pot at Belethor's (two), Heimskr's house, Great Bannered, Carlotta's house, most other residents, and of course Dragonsreach. But did you know that And Ameren has one? And that's just a door in the same duplex building where Uthgerd lives. Completely vemen's quest and he will allow you in his house and use some of his things, including cooking pot. Wood cutting: just outside the Great Bannered and behind Belethor's general assets. Smithing: Two options, but really the best and closest is Adrianne's. With a complete forge and a smelter, this is just a short walk across the street. Alchemy: Dragonsreach and Arcadia's, but Arcadia is much, much closer. Feeric: Dragonsreach.
