What we can do for you: Buying a home is usually the biggest deal most people are involved in during their lifetime. The legal fees for a lawyer advising you on the purchase or sale of real estate are usually relatively small. And yet often people take the risk of buying or selling without the advice of a lawyer. Unfortunately, many deeply regret their choice not to use a lawyer. If you are buying or selling real estate, you must make an appointment with our office to discuss the transaction. We'll let you know if you need a lawyer or not and why. We will quote you at reasonable fees and will not charge for this meeting. General real estate information law can be a confusing area of law. Here are some things that might help you know: A title policy is an insurance policy issued to ensure that you get a real estate degree that you buy. Actually owning the property that you believe you are buying is obviously very important. A standard real estate purchase agreement is the contract you initially sign in central Illinois when buying or selling real estate. It explains your rights and obligations for sale or purchase. When a property is sold as is, it usually means that the seller is not responsible for any problems you have later with the condition of the property. A warranty document is the document for which you acquire the title. A resignation claim is a document in which a person transfers any matter in a package of real estate that he or she can have without ensuring that he or she is actually the owner, because the person listed for the act is actually getting a clear title to the property. A shared tenancy is a form of shared ownership that includes the right to exploitation, that is, if the co-owner dies, the survivor or survivors own the property. A shared tenancy is a form of shared ownership that does not include the right to exploitation, meaning that if a person dies, his estate inherits his interest in the property. The lease by the whole is a form of shared ownership that includes the right to exploitation and one additional component: a creditor of one owner cannot receive the property in order to satisfy the debt unless the other co-owner owes the debt as well.
