Smith mountain lake camping va

FacebookTwitterPinterestMailVirginia is for lovers, and the Smith Mountain Lake area is made for lovers of water sports, tourism, travel and stunning camping spots. The Appalachian Trail and Blue Ridge Parkway cross the area, giving the area a sense of history and meaning. With a nest of trails, state parks and lakes in the area, families, couples and fun people can find something to do, remember and love. Smith Mountain Lake is the second largest freshwater body in Virginia. Surrounded by the Blue Ridge Mountains, it is a 500-mile stretch of coastline. Located about three hours east of Richmond and an hour southwest of Roanoke, this lake is a major holiday destination in Virginia. Fast facts about Smith Mountain Lake Here are some fast facts about the size, history and best times to visit Smith Mountain Lake: The lake stretches for over 40 miles and covers approximately 20,000 acres of area. Impressively, it is the second largest lake in Virginia. Construction began in 1960 to generate energy for the Appalachian Power Company. Completed in 1966, the lake quickly became a center of Virginia recreation. So far, this is an excellent job to provide both power and occupation of the state. Smith Mountain Lake has about 500 miles of coastline. This means it's accessible from different roads, but the visitor center is located along Route 908, right next to VA 40. Another major destination, Booker T. Washington National Monument, is on Route 122, minutes from the lake. The monument commemorates the life and work of the famous African-American statesman and educator. Peak season at Smith Mountain Lake is Labor Day Remembrance Day, which means you'll be paying the highest rental prices during that time. However, it is also when it is in the warmest and sunniest weather on the lake. Smith Mountain Lake Camping & Activities Smith Mountain Lake State Park Perhaps no surprise parts of Smith Mountain Lake officially fall within the boundaries of Smith Mountain Lake State Park. Although not particularly large, the state park has lakeside camping facilities that offer views of the water. With 13 hiking trails, secluded coves, downhill boats, pine forests, scenic views, hardwood forests and a 500-metre public beach that is often guarded, you won't run out of things to see or do. In the state park there are boats to rent, which means that you can take your family on jetskis, oars, ski boats, pontoons, kayaks or canoes between Memorial Day and Labor Day. Fishing is a popular activity in the park, and then you are looking for bigmouth and bass on the small mouth. The park also hosts fishing tournaments. Trail on Turtle Island This easy, beautiful path is 2 km from the shore of the lake nature, crossing wooden bridges and passing through the secluded island. Ideal for most skill levels, this is a family friendly and great opportunity for the child's first transition. Southern Virginia Camping Smith Mountain Lake occupies a stunning region of Virginia. The state park is well worth visiting, but while you are in the area, you should also think about a little trip around the heart of the state. Blue Ridge Park is calling you. With the many smaller, less visited lakes a short drive away, you'll find lakes that are stocked with fish and waiting to be explored by boat. Nearby McAfee Knob, one of the most photographed parts of the famous Appalachian Road, is a very popular day trip. The trail is just an hour's drive from the Smith Mountain Lake. It offers a 4mm, 1,700-foot trip to the top, making it a perfect travel material. Here are just a few of the other parks and campsites that shouldn't be missed on their way through Virginia. Fairy Stone Park To get away from the crowds but still stay close to Smith Mountain Lake, Fairy Stone State Park is an excellent destination. With equestrian camping, group camping, plenty of rowing boats and a 168-acre private lake, you can escape the summer crowds, but still enjoy everything the Smith Mountain Lake area has to offer. Fairy Stone State Park Camping offers a reserved camping tent, tent cabins, yurts, RV sites, scattered camping, and a camping group. Pets and alcohol are allowed, and it's full of modern amenities, right next to sewage hooks and Wi-Fi. Philpott Lake Image by Dyrtp camper Kirsten J. Located an hour's drive from the mountain lake in Smith, a goose at the point of camping in Philpott Lake offers another chance to escape the crowds - as it's probably even quieter than Fairy Stone. Although wi-fi is lacking, it is operated by the U.S.

Army Corps of Engineers, so you can expect well-designed and maintained facilities. Military families will especially enjoy friendly personnel, and the bathrooms are notorious. Guests can enjoy numerous water sports, as well as a relaxed atmosphere. The peaks of the stretch of the area are located between two picturesque mountains along the Blue Ridge Park. If you are planning a trip to Virginia, this peaceful campsite deserves a stay. Fueled by mountain streams, the 24-acre crystal lake is stocked with bass blue glyce and a small whale. With 142 total campsites, 63 of them are booked ahead of time, while the remaining 79 seats are first-come, first served.
