County tyrone ireland towns

County Tyrone is one of northern Ireland's six historic counties. It is also one of Ireland's 32 traditional counties and is located in the historic province of Ulster. Alcause it is no longer used as an administrative department of local government, it retains a strong identity in popular culture. The county town is Omagh.

What to see/ Tyrone and Sperrin Mountains have a special attraction especially for pedestrians. Some of the most beautiful sections of the Ulster Way pass through the county, the highlight is the Craignumadi Circuit.Beemore Stone Circle - Beaghmore is a complex at the southeastern end of the Sperrin Mountains, 8.5 miles northwest of Cookstown, Tyrone, Northern Ireland, with early Bronze Age megalithic features, stone circles and Cairns.
Ulster American Folk Park - An open-air museum just outside Omagh, County Tyrone, Northern Ireland. The museum, which explores more than 30 exhibition buildings, tells the story of three centuries of Irish immigrants. The museum focuses on those who left Ulster for America in the 18th, 19th and 20th centuries, using costumed guides and exhibits of traditional artefacts.
Sperrin's Sprint, Cookstown - A scenic, wonderfully traffic-free route through central Ulster, this is one of Ireland's most romantic wild areas. The Sperrin Mountains are rugged and curvy, with many spots in the spotlight.
Ardborg High Cross - A high cross and national monument located in Ardborg, County Tyrone and Northern Ireland. This was the first high cross built in Ulster.
Castle Caulfield - A large dilapidated house located in Castle Caulfield, County Tyrone, Northern Ireland. The building was three stories high with attics, many large marion windows and piles of tall chimneys. The pleasure from one of the walls was dated in about 1282 using dendrochronology and may belong to the former castle. There are considerable remains. The oldest part of the existing building is a gatehouse with Tudor-style doorways, murder holes and gun loops.
Kofail's arm appears above the entrance. There are more than 400 golf clubs in Ireland. Courses such as Royal County Down, Royal Portrush, Portmarnock and Ballybanion Golf Course are world famous - read more of Ireland's castles, misty hills and ancient ruins.
In Ireland, history is everywhere. But in some places, there is a strong connection to the past - Ireland has long had ingredients for world-class cuisine, fresh seafood, dairy flocks &amp; hillside wild herbs for free lamb - read more of the world-famous Irish step dance popularized in 1994Riverdance is noted for its rapid leg and foot movements, and the body and arms are mostly stationary - Irish holidays offer something different from the various local and national events and festivals and major sporting events held in many towns and cities throughout the year - read more about Climb Calaug Hill, Ireland's highest mountain. As any number of Dublin attractions such as Trinity College and Dublin's Guinness Storehouse confirm - there are more than countryside and rocks in Ireland - going racing in Ireland is a rather unique experience - a rock climb and abseil in Danlow's Gap carved into the ice, or maybe a deep sparkling lake in Kayak &amp; Canoe Killarney - as any number of Dublin attractions such as Trinity College and Dublin's Guinness Storehouse confirm. Over the years, Ireland has become the dominant force on the world racing stage - read more scovernorthernireland.com/about-northern-ireland/countries/co-tyrone/tyrone/Contae Till Eogain is the name of Ireland. The Countess of Tyrone.[2] Coonty Tyrone[3] and Coonti Owenlan[4] are ulster-Scottish spells (the latter used only by Dungannon &amp; South Tyrone Borough Council).

County Tyrone (/t ɪ r oʊ n /; [5] from Ireland); Till Eoghain, meaning land of Eogain), is one of Ireland's 32 counties, one of six counties in Northern Ireland and one of nine counties in Ulster. Alcause it is no longer used as an administrative department of local government, it retains a strong identity in popular culture. Adjacent to the south-west coast of Lough Nee, the county covers an area of 3,263 km2 (1,260 square miles) and has a population of about 177,986 people. The town in the county is Omagh. The county derives its name and general geographical location from Till Eogain, the Gaelic kingdom under the O'Neill dynasty that existed until the 17th century. The name Tyrone comes from the Irish Till Eogain Land of Eogain, a name given to conquests made by Eler Nuengen from the provinces of Airgiara and Ulaid. Historically, he was angry to say Tyrowen or Tyrowen, who were close to the pronunciation of Irish.
History
Main Article: List of Historical Kings of Till EogenHistorically Tyrone spread as north as Lough Foyle and consisted of parts of the modern County Londonderry east of the River Foyle. The majority of County Londonderry was carved out of Tyrone between 1610 and 1620, and the land went to london's guilds, setting up a scheme to make a profit based on the natural resources located there. Tyrone was a traditional base for the various O'Neill clans and families, the strongest of Ulster's Gaelic Irish families who survived in the 17th century. O'Neill's legacy, the ancient Principality of Till Eogain, included the entire current counties of Tyrone and Londonderry, as well as four barons from West Inishofen, East Inishohen, Lafoe North and Lafo South in County Donegal. [14] In 1608, during the rebel area of O'Doherty, it was looted and burned by Sir Kahir O'Doherty's forces following the destruction of Delhi. However, O'Doherty's men avoided the Earl of Tyrone's estate around Dungannon for fear of anger if the recently escaped Earl of Tyrone returned from exile. [15] With an area of 3,155 square kilometers (1,218 square miles) geography. Tyrone is Northern Ireland's largest county. The flat peatlands of East Tyrone border the coastline of the largest lake in the British Isles, while Low Kneee gradually rises to the more mountainous area west of the county, the area surrounding the Sperrin Mountains, with the highest point being Mount Sabel at a height of 678m (2,224ft). The county is 55 miles (89km) long, from the mouth of the Blackwater River in Lough Nee to the west point near The Hill of Carcadaff. It is 37.5 miles (60.4km) wide from the southern corner southeast of Five Mile Town to the northeast corner near Mount Meernard. Give an area of 1,260 square miles (1900). Annagone claims to be the geographical center of Northern Ireland. Tyrone is connected by land to the county of Fermanagh to the southwest, Monaghan to the south; Armour to the south;Londonderry to the north; Donegal to the west. Across Lough Nee to the east, it borders county Antrim. Of Ireland's 32 counties, it is the eighth largest by region and the 10th largest by population. Of Ulster's nine traditional counties, it is the second largest county by region and the fourth largest by population. The BlackRock Bridge near Newtown Stewart carries the closed GANR main line through county administration and the county was managed by Tyrone County Council from 1899 until northern Ireland's county council was abolished in 1973 (demographics according to the 2011 census] and is now one of four counties in Northern Ireland that have a majority of the population from Catholic community backgrounds. [Citation required] In 1900 County Tyrone had a population of 197,719,[14] and in 2011 it had 177,986.

Sport
The main sports in Tyrone are Gaelic matches, association football, rugby union and cricket. [Citation required]
Gaelic football is played more widely than throwing at Tyrone. The Tyrone GAA football team has had considerable success since 2000, winning three All-Ireland titles (2003, 2005 and 2008). They also have 15 Ulster titles (1956, 1957, 1973, 1984, 1986, 1989, 1995, 1996, 2001, 2003, 2007, 2009, 2010, 2016, 2017) [21] and 2013 National League titles (2002) [citation required]
Association football also has a big following in Tyrone. Omagh town F. C was a member of the Irish Football League until it folded in 2005 due to financial problems. Dungannon Swifts F. C will compete in the NIFL Premiership (top division). Other teams include NIFL Championship side Dargview F. C the club. Rugby union is very popular in the county. Dungannon RFC plays in the All-Ireland League. Other teams include Omagh RFC, Kroger Valley RFC, Cookstown RFC and Stravene RFC. International cricket is also played at the Brady Cricket Club Ground, which is owned by Brady Cricket Club. It is Ireland's fourth venue to host their first international cricket match when Ireland face Scotland in a series of T20I matches in June 2015.
