Whole30 book pdf download free

I know what you're thinking: Whole30? Christmas week? You're cray. While that's probably true, I'm super excited to announce my free eBook, Total Whole30 Guide to help anyone planning on Whole30 this January (or anytime!). Don't forget Whole30 Support Group on Facebook – request a connection or comment with email and I'll add you! We are here to support each other, ask questions and offer advice, experience and encouragement. ♥ Whole30 is a 30-day elimination diet (that is, cutting out certain food groups to determine a disease or sensitivity) that aims to reset and restore your physical health and mental (and emotional!) access to food. The program is based on the books Starting with Food and Whole30: A 30-Day Guide to Total Health and Food Freedom by Melissa and Dallas Hartwig. Whole30 absolutely revolutionized my family's access to food, weight and health, and I cover my experiences in detail in the book. You're removing a range of foods, from dairy and grains to sugar and alcohol, but the result was so drastic that we became whole30 evangelist. Whole30 is not only a physical detox, but also mental and emotional. You can restore your approach to eating, and how to deal with stressers and mindless eating. After a season of indulgence during the holidays, I think we could all benefit from a physical and mental reset, don't you think? Of course, there is nothing to lose by checking out the eBook. Just sign up to receive my latest recipes and posts by filling out this form, and you will receive a link to download the book. Simple! And if you decide it's not for you, that's also great. I hope you stick around paleo peppermint Oreos! Between the political turmoil and the pandemic of the new coronavirus (COVID-19) it is difficult to look back on the year and find something, anything, that was a potentially bright spot in an otherwise tumultuous journey around the sun. Fortunately, there were a few bright spots: and this, some of the excellent works of military history and analysis, fiction and non-fiction, novels and graphic novels that we have absorbed over the past year. Here's a brief list of some of the best books that we read here at Task & Purpose last year. Do you have a custom recommendation? Send an e-mail jared@taskandpurpose. Com and we will include it in the next story. Missionaries Phil Klay loved Phil Klay's first book, Redistribution (which won the National Book Award), so missionaries were high on my list of must-reads when it came out in October. It took Klay six years to research and write a book that follows four figures in Colombia who meet in the shadow of our post-9/11 wars. As Klay's prophetic novel shows, technology machines, drones and targeted murders The Middle East battlefield will continue to grow in far-flung countries that rarely garner headlines. [Buy]- By Paul Szoldra, editor-in-chief ofBattle Born: Lapis Lazuli by Max UriarteWritten by 'Terminal Lance' creator Maximilian Uriarte, this full-length graphic novel follows a Marine Corps squad on a bloody odyssey through a mountain reaches northern Afghanistan. The full-color comic is basically 'Conan the Barbarian' in MARPAT. [Buy]- James Clark, senior reporter Alex KershawNow's gritty and grim animated World War II miniseries from Netflix, Liberator follows the 157th annual Film Of The Bachelorette. It's a harrowing story, but one worth reading as it enjoys the acclaimed Netflix series. [Buy]- Jared Keller, Deputy Editor-in-ChiefThe Only Plane in the Sky: Oral History 9/11 Garrett GraffIf you haven't received this must-read account of the September 11 attacks, you must put a single plane in the sky at the top of your Christmas list. Graff expertly explains the timeline of that day by re-telling those who lived, including loved ones who were lost, the consistently brave first responders who were on the ground in New York, and service members working at the Pentagon. My only suggestion is not to read in public – if you're anything like me, you'll be consistently left in tears. Haley Britzky, Army reporterThe Body in Pain: The Making and Unmaking of the World by Elaine Scarry Why are we even fighting wars? Wouldn't a massive tennis tournament be a nicer way for nations to resolve their differences? This is one of the many questions Harvard Professor Elaine Scarry is trying to answer, along with why nuclear war is akin to torture, why the language around war is sterilized in public discourse, and why both war and torture unmake human worlds by destroying access to language. It's a great elevator reading, but even if you've just read chapter two (like me), you'll leave to think about the war in new and refreshing ways. David Roza, Air Force reporterStalingrad: The Fateful Siege: 1942-1943 Antony BeevorStalingrad takes readers all the way from the Nazi invasion of the Soviet Union to the collapse of the 6th Century. It gives you the perspective of German and Soviet soldiers during the 20th century's apocalyptic battle. Jeff Schogol, Pentagon correspondent America's War for the Greater Middle East, said Andrew J. Bacevich raised the U.S. war for the greater Middle East earlier this year and couldn't put it down. Published in 2016 by Andrew A retired historian and army officer who served in Vietnam, the book reveals a long and winding history of how America got so embroiled in the Middle East and shows that we've fought one long war since the 1980s – with errors of judgment from political leaders on both sides of the aisle to blame. From the end of World War II until the 1980s, virtually no American soldier was killed in action while serving in the greater Middle East. Since 1990, virtually no American soldiers have been killed in action anywhere else. What caused this shift? asks book jacket. As Bacevich details in this final history, the mission of flowing our Vietnam experience has been played over and over again for the past 30 years, with disastrous results. [Buy]- Paul Szoldra, editor-in-chiefBurn In: A novel of the real robotic revolution PW Singer and August ColeIn Burn In, Singer and Cole take readers on a journey at an unknown date in the future, in which an FBI agent searches for a high-tech terrorist in Washington, D.C. Set after the authors called the real robotic revolution, Agent Lara Keegan is teamed up with a robot that is less of a Terminator and a much more useful and highly intelligent law enforcement tool. Perhaps the most interesting part: Almost everything that happens in the story can be traced back to the technologies that are being explored today. You can read Task & Purpose's interview with the authors here. [Buy]- James Clark, senior reporterSAS: Rogue Heroes Ben MacIntyreLike World War II? As a group of eccentric daredevils who wreak havoc on fascists? Then you'll love SAS: Rogue Heroes, which re-narrates some really crazy heists performed by one of the first modern special forces units. Best of all, Ben MacIntyre grounds his history in a compassionate, balanced tone that portrays both the best and worst of sas men who are, like anyone else, just a man after all. [Buy]- David Roza, Air Force reporterThe Alice Network's Kate QuinnThe Alice Network is an engaging novel that follows two courageous women at different times - one living in the aftermath of World War II, determined to find out what happened to someone she loves, and the other working in a secret network of spies behind enemy lines during World War I. This engaging historical fiction is based on the true story of a network that infiltrated German lines in France during the Great War and weassed a story so full of drama, tension and tragedy that you won't be able to put it down. [Buy] Katherine Rondina, Anchor Books Since I published a new book this year, I've been answering questions about my inspiration. That said, I'm thinking about it and so grateful for the girl in the combustible skirt of Aimee Bender. I can't credit that to me wanting to be a writer - that desire was already there - but it inspired me Write stories where fantastic complicates the ordinary, and the impossible is possible. A girl in a nice dress without anyone wanting to. A remarkable boy with a remarkable knack for finding things. The stories in this book taught me that the everyday life of my world could become magical and strange, and in that peculiarity I could find a new kind of truth. Diane Cook is the author of the novel New Wilderness, which was long-listed at the 2020 Booker Prize, and the story collection of Man V. Nature, which was a finalist for the Guardian First Book Award, the Believer Book Award, the PEN/Hemingway Award, and the Los Angeles Times Award for First Fiction. Read an excerpt from New Wilderness.Bill Johnston, University of California Press I revisited many old favorites in this grim year of fear and isolation, and were most grateful of all for Frank O'Hara's collected poems. Witty, reflective, intimate, queer, disarmingly casual and monumentally serious at once, they were a constant balm and inspiration. 'The only thing you do is just carry on,' he wrote, in 'Adieu norman, Bon Jour to Joan and Jean-Paul'; it's simple/yes, it's easy because that's the only thing you do/you can do it/yes you can, because that's the only thing you have to do.'Helen Macdonald is a nature essayist with a half-story column in The New York Times Magazine. Her latest novel, Vesper Flights, is a collection of her best-loved essays, and her debut book, H Is for Hawk, won the Samuel Johnson Prize for Nonfiction and the Costa Book Award, and was a finalist for the National Book Critics Circle Award and the Kirkus Prize for Nonfiction.Andrea Scher, Scholastic Press This Year, I'm so grateful you should see me in leah johnson's crown. Reading - like everything else - was a struggle for me in 2020. It was hard to let go of all my concerns about the state of the world and our country and get swept away by the story. But you should see me in the crown pulled me right away; for the blissful time that I read, it got me thinking about the world outside of 2020 and it made me smile from ear to ear. Joy has been hard to come by this year, and I am so grateful for this book for the joy it has brought me. Jasmine Guillory is the New York Times bestselling author of five novels, including this year's Party of Two. Her work has appeared in O, The Oprah Magazine, Cosmopolitan, Real Simple, and Time.Nelson Fitch, Random House Last year, stuck in longer reading ruts that left me wondering if I even liked books I'd already come across on December 10th by George Saunders, a collection of stories Saunders wrote between 1995 and 2012 that are on the alternator funny, moving, surprising, weird, profound, and often all those things at the same time. As a writer, what I crave most from is finding one so delicious that I feel like I'm better off quitting – and so wonderful that it reminds me of what it's like to be a pure reader again, meeting new worlds and revelation every time I turn the page. The tenth of December is it, and I am so grateful to have fallen off the high shelf and into my life. Veronica Roth is #1 New York Times author of the bestselling divergent series and Carve the Mark duology. Her latest novel, The Chosen One, is her first adult novel. Read an excerpt from The Chosen Ones.Ian Byers-Gamber, Blazevox Books Awakening today on the prospect of a few hours spent reading away part of the next day of this disastrous, delicious pandemic year, I am most grateful for the book in my hands, one myself full of gratitude for the life spent reading: Gloria Frym's How Proud Ruined My Life. Frym's essays - on Marcel Proust, yes, and Walt Whitman, and Lucia Berlin, but also the peppermint-salt candy and Allen Ginsburg keens, among other proustian memory-prompts - restore me to my sense of my terrifying happiness in the life spent rushing to the next book, the next page, the next word. Jonathan Lethem is the author of many critically acclaimed novels, including The Fortress of Solitude and National Book Critics Circle Award winner Motherless Brooklyn. His latest novel, Arrest, is a postapocalyptic tale about two siblings, a man who came between them, and a super car with a nuclear drive. David Heska Wanbli Weiden, Riverhead I am incredibly grateful for the wonderful heartbeat of the injured knee David Treuer. This book - a melange of history, memoir and reportage - is a reconceptualization of Aboriginal life that has been urgently needed since the last great Aboriginal history, Dee Brown's Bury My Heart on an injured Kneer. It's at once counterproductive and a substitute for Brown's book, and rejects the standard narrative of native persecution, conquest and defeat. While I teach Native American studies of college students, I have found new insights and revelations in almost every chapter. Not only great reading, the book is a huge contribution to Native American - and American - intellectual and cultural history. David Heska Wanbli Weiden, a registered member of the Sicangu Lakota Nation, is the author of the novel Winter Counts, which is BuzzFeed Book Club's November pick. He is also the author of the children's book Spotted Tail, which won the 2020 Spur Prize from The Western Writers of America. Read an excerpt from Winter Counts. Valerie Mosley, Tordotcom In 2020, I was lucky to finish one book in 30 days, but I burned through this 507-page brick in the span of the weekend. Harrow's ninth reminded me that although absolutely everything is terrible, it is still possible to feel a deep, heartthring, brain-buzzing admiration for brilliant art. Thanks after that, it is one of the brightest places in the dark year and for keeping home fires burning. Casey McQuiston is the author of the bestseller Red, White & Royal Blue in the New York Times and her next book, One Last Stop, will be published in 2021. I am grateful for the disturbing masterpiece of VS Naipaul, Bend in the River - which not only made me see the world anew, but made me see what literature could do. It is a book that is clear enough to reveal the brutality of the forces shaping our world and its politics; still soulful enough to penetrate the most recondite secrets of the human interior. A book of great beauty without a moment of mercy. A marriage of opposites that continues to shape my own deeper sense of how much a writer can actually achieve. Ayad Akhtar is a writer and playwright, and his latest novel, Homeland Elegies, is about an American son and his immigrant father seeking belonging in a post-9/11 country. He is a Pulitzer Prize laureate for drama and literature prizes from the American Academy of Arts and Letters. Vanessa German, Feminist PressI'm very grateful for Dad's number Runner Louise Meriwether. It's a YA book set in 1930s Harlem, and it was the first Black-girl-coming-of-age book I've ever read, the first time I've ever seen myself in a book. I appreciate how it has expanded my world and my understanding that books can talk to you exactly where you are and take you on a journey at the same time. Deesha Philyaw's debut short story collection, The Secret Lives of Church Ladies, was a finalist for the 2020 National Book Prize for Fiction. She is also co-author of Co-Parenting 101: Helping Your Children Thrive in Two Households After Divorce, written in collaboration with her ex-husband. Philyaw writes about race, parenting, gender and culture has appeared in the New York Times, Washington Post, McSweeney, Rumpus, and elsewhere. Read the story from The Secret Lives of Church Ladies.Phillipa Gedge, W. W. Norton & CompanyAs a writer and reader, I am immensely grateful for patricia Highsmith's conspiracy and fiction writing. As a writer, I'm grateful for Highsmith's generosity with her wisdom and experience: She tells us through how to tease out narrative strands and develop character, how to know when things are going away, even how to choose to make things like bad work. She is unabashed about sharing her own 'failures,' and in my experience, there is nothing more encouraging for a writer than learning that our literary gods are mortal! As a reader, it provides a fascinating insight into the genesis of one of my favorite novels of all time - the talented Mr. Ripley, as well as the rest of her brilliant oeuvre. And since it's Highsmith, it's much more than just a how-to guide: It's very engaging and at the same time accessible, it also provides a glimpse mind genius. I've read it twice – while working on each of my thrillers, Hunting Party and Guest List – and I know I'll be back for a well-thumbed copy on my shelf again soon! Lucy Foley is the New York Times author of the bestselling thriller Guest List and The Hunting Party. She has also written two historical novels about fiction and previously worked in the publishing industry as an editor of fiction. The books I'm most grateful for this year are a three-book series called Stories from Jack Townsend's Gas Station. Walking the fine line between comedy and horror (which is much harder than people think) books follow Jack, an employee at a gas station in a nameless city where all kinds of terribly fantastic things happen. And while monsters are scary and more than a little ridiculous, it's Jack's bone-dry narrative, along with his best friend/emotional support man Jerry, that promotes books into something as beautiful as they are absurd. TJ Klune is lambda literary prize-winning author and ex-claims examiner for insurance company. His novels include House in the Cerulean Sea and Extraordinaries.Sylvernus Darku (Team Black Image Studio), Ayebia Clarke Publishing Natural Conditions is a book I've read several times over the years, including this year. The novel deals with topics of gender and race and has at its heart Tambu, a young girl in 1960s Rhodesia determined to get an education and create a better life for herself. Dangarembga's prose is evocative and funny, and the story is thought-provoking. Tambu inspired me again every time I read this book. Peace Azdo Medie is a senior lecturer in gender and international politics at the University of Bristol. She is the author of Global Norms and Local Action: The Campaigns to End Violence against Women in Africa (Oxford University Press, 2020). His only wife is her debut novel. Jenna Maurice, HarperCollins Book I'm most grateful for? Where the trail ends Shel Silverstein. My mother and father would read me poems from him before bed - I believe he infused me not only with a sense of poetic cadence, but also an angry sense of humour. Victoria V.E. Schwab is the bestselling author of more than a dozen books, including Vicious, Shades of Magic Series, and This Savage Song. Her latest novel, The Invisible Life of Addie LaRue, is BuzzFeed Book Club's December pick. Read an excerpt from Addie LaRue's Invisible Life.Meg Vázquez, Square Fish My childhood best friend gave me disturbing star Madeleine L'Engle for Hanukkah when I was 11 years old, and it's still my favorite book of all time. I love the way it defies the genre (is it a political thriller/YA romance that involves a lot of scientific research and also poetry?), and the way it values courage, vulnerability, kindness and a sense of adventure. The book follows 16-year-old Vicky Austin's life-changing trip to Antarctica; Her journey changed my life, too. In a year when safe travel is almost impossible, I am very grateful that I can return to her story over and over again. Kate Stayman-London's debut novel, One to Watch, is about a plus-size blogger who was asked to star on a Bachelorette-like reality show. Stayman-London served as chief digital writer for Hillary Rodham Clinton's 2016 presidential campaign and has written for notable figures, from former President Obama and Malala Yousafzai to Anna Wintour and Cher.Katharine McGee is grateful for Brian Jacques's Redwall series. Chris Bailey Photography, Firebird I'm grateful for Redwall's book Brian Jacques. I discovered the series in elementary school, and it sparked a love for great, epic stories that never left me.
