Melitta coffee pods canada

If you crave the taste and comfort of one serving coffee (K-Cups), you are not alone. According to some estimates, 12 billion of them will be sold this year - just go around the country about 13 times! Until now, this has meant a lot of waste, which has been difficult, if not impossible, to recycle. But now, thanks to Melitt and Canadian researchers at the University of Guelph's Bioproducts Discovery and Development Centre, a solution is within reach! PurPod100™ cups are the world's first single-serve coffee cups* that have been certified 100% compostable by the Biodegradable Products Institute (BPI). This means that according to Melitta's website that testing shows pod can break down completely in just 5 weeks it doesn't necessarily mean that every local compost program will accept it. Municipalities and other composting operators have their own guidelines for what they accept as compostable. But many DO automatically receive items that are certified 100% compostable BPI. And testing is underway to see how well pods break down in a home compost situation. Even with these reservations, the development of a certified compostable coffee pod is a big news. But it's really still all about enjoying a great coffee tasting! So if you've been avoiding kuerig because you feel sick about under the waste, just pick up some great tasting Melitta pods of London drugs, compost your leftover pods and you'll sleep better no matter how many cups you cook. All Melitta single serve coffee under the London variety drug features the new PurPod100™ compostable cup.* PurPod100™ cups are designed to work with Kuerig 2.0 breweries, and it should be noted that they will work best if the brewer is regularly cleaned and de-scaled. Melitta's new compostable pods are almost entirely made of plant material, and the ring is actually made of coffee husks - a byproduct that is usually wasted!
