Scratch here, loose seam there, and/or maybe a crease in the skin above there. Alan Edmonds claims nothing is structurally wrong with these shoes. Something wrong is confined to mirror class. However, these shoes are basically designed for the island of underachievers. And just like the unsuccessful toys, they're not without value! But the average picky consumer would see the flaw, and a reduction in buy-in-full, or, standard sale price. Nomadic 2nds factory upon arrival. Looks close to the first quality! Shoebank (phone call) versus AllenEdmonds.com (not always there) so they get marked down even more aggressively, and then shipped to Shoebank Island, or one of their physical outlet stores. The Shoebank is an incredibly charming 20th-century operation. You have to make a phone call to place an order. Sometimes the person on the other end of the phone will describe the flaw to you. But sometimes I don't. I guess it's not in their job description and I personally can't bring myself to ask. Also, sometimes AE will put them on their main site during a flash sale, backed by a full e-commerce machine. No phone calls. Click, buy, send. And that's where I got the last pair of nomad chukas for $149. Ah ha! I found the flaws. A few messy stitches on the left heel, and some weird color at the expense of the right heel. The scariest $25 re-inventory fee but here's the catch: Alan Edmonds, understandably, doesn't want a bunch of people ordering Factory 2 and then returning them because they're not happy with what made them Factory 2. So they added $25 replenishment fees to every Factory 2 returned by mail. If you could deploy it to a physical outlet store? They might waive the payment for you. But for most of us doing things online and through post/UPS, it's a gamble. If they show up, and they're a disaster, you could be out for $25. But you just don't really know what the cosmetic screw-up is until the package arrives and the shoes are in your hands. Besides, they're good. Still made in Wisconsin. Nomads are a lighter weight for comfort. How serious are the flaws? It depends. And there were some horror stories. Some, online, claimed they got Factory 2 that were so messed up that they were shocked they were allowed to be sold at any price. But it's the Internet. What do people do on the Internet? Complain and Great. I'm not saying that these shoe disasters didn't happen, what I'm saying is that the ratio of people who jump online to complain versus the people who connect to say how happy they are is in a disgusting way for the benefit of the former. Ready for chino chuka polo. Autumn is fast approaching, too. What is a good price for Factory 2? Here's what I think most would consider to be good/big prices on different types of AE 2nds factory. That's what you can see during big sale events. Not always, not all models, But with a bit of regularity: Perpetual Oxford shoes (Park Ave., Strand, Cornwallis, etc.) $200ish or less perpetual boots (Dalton, Liverpool) $265ish or less independence collection (their high end calfskin models) $275ish or less unique models (nomadic series, attempts to stay fashionable, etc.) $180 or less however, prices vary all the time. And if you get a serious fall in one of the above or less prices, don't come whining to me. It's a gamble. I repeat, this. That's what I want. A. Gamble. Full retail for Quality 1 is $375. First-quality sales lower them below $300. The other factory cost $150. So I have to take my chances? I got two pairs of factory two. A duo of Liverpool Chelsea and Nomad Chokas were seen in this post. I really don't know what made Liverpool quality 2. I never found the flaw. And the Nomads are for $150? I'm more than happy with what I have for the price. The two loose stitches on the back heel of the left shoe don't bother me, and the odd strip of paint on the right heel tab will be hidden most of the time anyway. And if you don't? Cares. I feel like I got lucky with my purchases at Factory 2. Maybe you won't be so lucky. And that's the game. In 1966, Ellen Edmonds opened her first retail store in an abandoned bank building near our factory in Wisconsin and, accordingly, called the outlet store the factory's shoe bank. The shoe bank is still selling shoes today. While ShoeBank.com not an e-commerce site today, we are now proud to offer the ability to look for which factory outlet stores have the same Factory-Seconds styles, closeouts and discontinued styles available in your size. What makes a factory second place? The second shoes in our factory contain a small cosmetic defect that does not affect the fit, comfort or durability of our shoes. The shoes just don't pass our exact standards at one of the different test points throughout our 212-step handiwork process. The savings are passed on to Alan Edmonds' surplus customers. Conditions and conditions of the shoe bank factory styles and sizes shop listed are limited to available inventory. Please contact the store to confirm availability. We are unable to accommodate Factory Second special requests for styles or sizes. All products listed on Shoe Bank are sold as is. Alan Edmonds Lock Bank Sale: $150 Off Two Pairs Of Her Methods for Andrew, who sent this tip after my post about selling the Brooks Brothers: Alan Edmonds Shoe Bank runs a promotion that takes $50 off the first couple of factory seconds, and $100 off the second pair. Pretty amazing. Please note that seconds in the factory are shoes that have not undergone quality control. From what I've heard, the flaws are as usual very minor, or completely indistingceable. To order, send an email to shoebank@allenedmonds.com place, and request their current inventory in the size of your shoes. You can also call the shoe bank at 262-785-6666.Update: A number of readers have informed me that the $199 price I originally highlighted in this post may not be eligible for promotion. Still, this is a reasonable deal for AE seconds, since two pairs of pins like Park Park And Park Park Can be at $390.If you enjoy this post, or find it useful, you should sign up for a proper one. It fits extraordinary values in high-quality menswear, my name is Ellioty Andreevo. I started This Fits in 2010 as a personal set of visual bookmarks, and it grew into something much bigger than me. What a ride. To get in touch, email me alioty@thisfits.me: As long as it's allowed I'd like to share my experience with seconds store Alan Edmonds/Shoe Bank. I sent an email to Leeds, al location asking for suggestions, and was immediately answered to by store manager Nate. We exchanged a few emails until I sat down on the couple I wanted, and I called to order. He was very patient and courteous, the kind of service I would expect from one of their full retail locations. I was also surprised by their choice, they seem to have most sizes and styles. The shoes came very well. And they were beautiful. Pricing isn't as low as eBay, but as far as rumors go, I couldn't tell my couple there were seconds. Looks brand-new to me. I'm by no means affiliated with the store, just a satisfied customer and I guess if we can get who was your rudest customer? We need to be able to give credit where it is because for me it's a three-way draw - ignorance, openness and stupidity. They kind of go hand in hand. You should be proud. It would be quite an achievement for a veteran originally published by Pavelgren you should be proud of. It would be quite an achievement for a veteran to enlighten me, please for me it's a triple draw - ignorance, narrow-mindedness and stupidity. They kind of go hand in hand. Originally published by longskate88 pricing is not as low as Ebay, but as the rumours go, I can't say my pair had 'seconds'. Looks brand-new to me. I'm not sure what rumors you mean, but AE seconds are new but there is some (often quite minor) flaw that caused them to fail quality control. They always let you know when they sell you seconds. However, I received great phone service from AE Shoe Bank as well. Quote: Originally Posted by Westinghouse Hey, If You Think You Look Mah-Velous... That's all that matters. I understand they're not of first quality, but in this case the flaw was so minor I couldn't find it. Ignorance, closed head and stupidity. They kind of go hand in hand. Speaking of AE Shoe Banks, I'm in Macon, VI for Thanksgiving and yesterday I made the short trip to Fort Washington. Customer service was excellent and I picked up a Boston couple for $159. It's good to hear that other shoe banks are also delaying their customer service as well. On a slightly related day, I received "1st"s that looked 2nds when I ordered from AE directly. We are also needed for 100%--from 1,000 tztz 10 00:00:00,000 - reasonable shoes though, and while error tends to customer service AE is very kind and friendly. Just a word of warning for those who want to order 1sts. After purchasing and trying on &number quote;seconds"e; At the ae outlet in Maine Freeport, I can attest that the flaws that make them seconds are usually neglidgible and often found on 1 quality shoes in the form of shopwear or the result of careless packaging (e.g. a store clerk throws shoes back in the box and they get rubbed). One thing to note, however, is that 2nds don't come with Shoe bags. On a related day, Edward Wickham, who is Freeport's store manager, accepts my biggest customer service recommendation. Originally posted by JamesX just a word of warning for those who want to order 1sts. Maybe we should start with two. Maybe it depends on what they have in stock at the same time. Ignorance, closed head and stupidity. They kind of go hand in hand. Just a word of warning for those who want to order 1sts. It always comes to mind when I hear about the seconds. I've seen a lot of quality people and Alan Edmonds who look like absolute shit to think the years will somehow be amazing. I wonder if the people who got the seconds and think they're great just aren't very critical. WTB: Vass F Last 40.5 Hey First Post! I was in Fort Washington last weekend for my annual trip to the shoe bank. I found their service to always be top notch. I wouldn't lie, the 2 staff who helped me this time weren't the experts I'd used before but were bend over backwards kind and friendly. The first debate against the second. I can usually tell the two apart visually, but the flaws are usually very minor. I always shop personally so I know exactly what I'm getting. I had never seen a pair of AE not come up with the shoe bags (or fabric cover) until last week. So I'm not sure what's going on with it. Although I wanted to comment because I was really disappointed with this lineup for years. They seemed to cancel the Crosstown collection after just a year or two, and while they were a little on the occasional edge of the spectrum, they were more contemporary than their usual offerings. I picked up a pair of Weybridges that have been discontinued in chili that I've been thinking about for a while and think it's positively overwhelming.
