Sports medicine consists of diagnostics, treatment and prevention of sports-related injuries and activities, as well as studying and developing optimization programs and equipment. The complex nature of sports medicine requires many highly trained professionals who work as a team to achieve the desired results of active individuals. We are proud to provide the best sports medicine in Boise, Idaho. Doctors and surgeons, physiotherapists, sports trainers and exercise physiologists are just some of the experts who make up the Idaho Sports Medical Institute team. Our staff assess and treat sports-related injuries and activities, develop prevention programs, educate members of the public and participate in sports activities to provide medical assistance. Our expertise includes nutrition, walking and biomechanical analysis, strength and exercise programs, concussion management, sports psychology and more. Sports medicine professionals work with professional athletes, individuals and teams, as well as those who participate in recreational exercises. Whether you are a competitive athlete or a weekend warrior, if you are searching for Idaho Sports Medicine, we are here for you. Paying close attention to intensive rehabilitation often helps patients better off without surgery. Our motto: You don't play sports to fit you. application. / Skills and attitudes towards those who participate in sports and exercise It is based at the Idaho Institute of Sports Medicine (ISM) and works primarily with idaho family physicians (FMR). Friends will work with athletes and personnel at Boise State University, some local private medical offices and local high schools. Time is generally shared between ISM and FMR sites, and fellowship is only accepting candidates who are trained in family medicine at this time. The application process allows the Idaho Family Faculty of Medicine to thoroughly verify the identity of each applicant before extending the interview invitation. Applications are accepted through ERAS only. The deadline for application is October 1, the interview date is THB 72,208.00. Criterion, please ask the two doctors who care for you in the clinical setting to send you a letter of support or application. Copies of the following documents are requested: medical school diplomas, certificates (or other inspections) of all previous training, copies of current state medical licenses, USMLE/COMLEX certificates, and course history. Visiting the residential clinic's website, personal statement and rotation, interested residents can come to Boise to visit the clinic site for rotation. Please contact Kelly Wilkinson, MD, director of fellowship for the spin day. Idaho Residential Family Medicine (FMR) focuses on patient care in the context of families and communities. The goal of FMR Sports Medicine Fellowship is to educate our sports and fitness for patients of all ages. Fellow clinical experts will participate in several clinical settings with different patient populations, including idaho's family medicine residency, sports medicine and primary care clinics, the Idaho Institute of Sports Medicine, a private orthopedic group that works with both orthopedic and primary care physicians attended, and the Boys State Student Health Center works with Boys State Students. Selective rotation options include muscle radiology, foot and ankle surgery, hand surgery, occupational medicine. Ultrasound Training A Ultrasound diagnosis and ultrasound injection courses are recommended as part of the main rotation. Ultrasound is available and widely used in all main clinic locations.
