The printer box was well loaded. Inside the package is a flying starting guide, a textbook, a disk consisting of drivers, a printer toner pattern, a power cable, and also (of course) the printer itself. Alas, there are no USB or Ethernet cable televisions included in the box, presumably as a cost-saving procedure. Luckily, I have pile of wires lying around the office, so it wasn't much of a problem. Brother HL-5450DN The HL5450DN's paper bowl remains in front of the device, under the printer toner bay. The paper bowl can fit up to 250 sheets. It's really easy to open as well as pack. The HL5450DN accepts both USB as well as Ethernet links. I connected my Brother printer through Ethernet to my Apple Airport Extreme router. The power switch for the printer lies on the lower right side of the system. The power use of this device is quite large when the printer ramps. Graphics are at the high end of the same level, which also makes the output sufficient for any inner demand. Relying on just how demanding an eye you have, you can or can rule out it well enough for PowerPoint handouts and so forth. Photos are also par, however, at the reduced end of variety. It is larger than sufficient to publish web pages with familiar images. Depending on your preferences, you may or may rule out they are sufficient for photos in, state, a customer, or firm newsletter.
