Copyright © 2020 Holding, LLC, a System1 company Kevin Costner has spent most of his career on the big screen doing hit movie roles, such as The Bodyguard, Dance and Wolve and Waterworld. But his most recent project is a bit different. Costner is making the leap in television by playing a reins in the Yellowstone series. But making moves to television after many years of film isn't easy, and Costner isn't shy about his insecticide. Adjustment of television has been tough for Kevin Costner's Kevin Costner | Axelle/Bauer-Griffin/FilmMagic One of the big differences between acting in a film and a TV series, is that future stories often keep a secret on TV shows, even from the actors. The reason for this is simple. A movie is released all at once, but in a television series, the story is explained on many installations. It becomes very important that no one legs storylines in the future. So in order to catch any spots from being fruited, even the actors must remain in the dark until right before a scene is shot. While there is a good reason to keep the actors in the dark, it makes it hard to play a character, when you have such a limited view of their story. While Costner has had a few television roles before, acting at Yellowstone is the first time he has run into the issue of not knowing his character's full story. His previous television experiences were all one-and-done roles before he broke into reality on the big screen. After that, he was in three-part ministers, Hatfields & McCoys. Because this role was such a short series, the experience was more like completing a movie, where it could know the whole story. However, now that he's playing John Dutton at Yellowstone, he has this issue for the first time in his career, and he's not too happy about it. It was not an easy adjustment for me,' Costner told Indiewire. I don't like it too much. When discussing what he knows about the future of his character, a powerful and rich auctions, Costner said: 'I would like to [know the future of the character], but I don't always private it, no. Sometimes with [John's] son or wife or whatever, this was really caught up in a creative ball. This is a more vulnerable way to go in life as an actor. Kevin Costner enjoys the series of 'Jolowstone' isn't all bad, though. Something Costner likes about Yellowstone, he doesn't have to wear a tie. During an interview on Popcorn with Peter Travers, Costner explains how he prefers to spend time in the outsides, spend in the city, and he appreciates the fact that his role on Yellowstone offers him the ability to use the ranch as his office. I don't like making movies and ties, Costner said. What I'm saying is, I'm not as comfortable in the city. And I realized that I have this great work that led me to World. But when I find myself coming out to the west, I wake up every morning and that's my desk. That's what I look at. So it's not that it necessarily informed my acting. He continued: There are two things for me in the business that I have chosen, one is that there is the movie I make, and two, have of experience I have. I don't value the result of a movie and it's box office more than my experience. They are equality. I want that obvious thing for the movie to be successful. But I never left the idea of what he did box office to negate the experience that I had. I'm not going to let it exceed him. Who can blame him, really? If given the choice between a desk thing, and spend your time outside of the cool air, many would agree with Costner, and choose later. Let's just hope that it makes up for the difficulties it has so that viewers can enjoy many more episods at Yellowstone. For nearly 40 years, Kevin Costner made movies. With many blockbusters on his resume – including the Bodyguard, Dance and Red, and Field of Dreams – it's no surprise that it's a name in the house, with millions in his bank account. Although she's aging, Costner continues to work on some of the biggest projects, bringing great entertainment to our lives. Here's an BEVISION of Costner's career, including his net worth, and current projects. How Kevin Costner Got His Start in Hollywood's Kevin Costner | Lloyd Bishop /NBC/NBCU Bank via Getty Images in the mid-uities, Costner was Hollywood gold boy, but his career had a rock start. His first project was Sizzle Beach USA, an independent, low-budget movie, which was filled with soft-core core. The role was steering notice, and he continued with several other parts of incontential movies. It wasn't until 1985, that he finally had his break in the west of Silverado. After that role, audiences and directors finally accepted him as a leading man. Building on his success, Costner continued to pick up roles in major movies, including Fandango and the Touchables. In 1988, Costner played Ray Kinsella in the baseball-fantasy movie, Field Dreams. The film was an unexpected success, earning $84 million globally. It's one of the most cited movies of all time, and its famous line: If you build it, they're coming. The film solidified Costner as an Actor A-list. What is Keviner's costner network worth? Today, after a long career in Hollywood, Costner is worth $250 million. It's a good thing he has such a substantial income because Costner has seven children to support. Although some of them are adults now, the brood of Costner is a big family. His current wife, Christine Baumgartner Costner, gave her three children, who have been out of age from 9 to 12 years old. His other four are from previous relationships, with the oldest being 35. With this kids, you can say that Costner is rich in love than in money – and has a lot of money. In an interview with Mom.me, Costner talked about how big the love in his family is. As these kids interact together, there's always this little bit of Do you take care of us now as much as you do them? Costner said, – it's just something natural happens, and you have to talk about how big love is. The ability to be able to love someone else doesn't mean there's less love for you. Love seems to be still able to hang on to as many people as it needs to be in this circle. What is Kevin Costner working on now? Costner is now thin unusual as the billionaire auctions, John Dutton, at Paramount's Show Network, Yellowstone. The show was a big hit for the network. Hay from just the first early of this month, and Jolowstone has already been confirmed for three seasons. Television is a relatively new experience for Costner since most of his career has been in movies. But fans love the modern-day western show. Yellowstone is on a powerful family in auctions, fighting to protect their land and heritage – which just reaches the Jolowstone Park border. When CBS This Morning follows why he thought it was important to dramatize the difficulties of the auctions, Costner said: 'I didn't think of that. I tried to put the audience on my shoulders the first time I read the script. You go to the TV, you go to movies for something. When the lights go out, you want to just be transported. So when I read a script, I feel myself being transported – suddenly we're in Bitterroot Valley, the same value that Lewis & Clark went down. That's what makes any Costner movie or show entertain. They transport you to another world and they allow you to live another life in your imagination. As long as Hollywood keeps making these kinds of stories, fans will keep coming for the show, and the actors, like Costner, will continue to make millions.
