The game was published April 10, 2014 by Jam City, Inc. in connection with Fox Digital Entertainment and TinyCo. This allows the user, who plays the role of Peter Griffin, to create and maintain his version of Quahog using familiar characters and buildings. The game begins on a storyline based on one of the show's episodes, where Peter and his non-mead, Ernie Chicken, fall into an apocalyptic struggle that ends with the destruction of all of Quachogh. It is your job as Peter Griffin to rebuild a peaceful suburb from a grounded house around the house, resident by resident, and rebuild its population. Building the city and completing quests unlocks new characters and rewards the player with shellfish, game currency. The premise of this sandbox game is similar to The Simpsons: Tapped Out and The Sims Freeplay.The critics praised the developers for keeping the authenticity and originality of the series alive in adapting the game. The developers have done fantastic job modeling and implementation of Quahog. Houses and characters look the way they do in the show, with every minor detail like a little sheen mesh on the tanning salon part of Griffin's house. However, this free game is primarily criticized by a significant section of users to be a paid game. Throughout the gameplay, the user's quest log will be full of microtransmission congestion that will be tied up for hundreds of dollars. Even with all the flaws reported by players, Family Guy The Quest for Stuff has managed to make its way to more than 10 million Android devices. GameplayGigant chicken is destroying your city, Quachogh, and is now responsible for rebuilding the city on your shoulders. Rebuilding the city building by building by saving money. Each building will give you a certain number of coins and shellfish every few hours, and as the game progresses, you will be able to expand your territory by purchasing other areas of the map. There are different kinds of buildings in the game and most have got a character attached to them which you can unlock once the appropriate construction is complete. For example, completing a police station will unlock Joe Swanson for you. But, it's important to note that you have to have a few different elements to unlock the characters, similar to that for Joe Swanson. Each shape comes with several actions, the end time of which ranges from one minute to one whole day. All efforts will give you coins and XP and sometimes, items also that you will be able to use to unlock characters. V.O. suited to character and trust us; It's just getting more and more fun with each new unlock. The characters of the game can be seen in the FaceSpace section of the game. FaceSpace is a Facebook layout in a game that acts as a collection of characters. When a character is unlocked, it appears in FaceSpace with all its details. The virtual economy of the game is based on two currencies, namely coins and shellfish. While coins are used to get most of the essentials needed to build the city, clams are used to speed up the process of building and purchasing premium items. There is also a special section of the outfit dedicated to laying your characters. The city is designing another interesting piece that will keep you connected to mobile screens. Straight from Hindenpeter to hillbilly ATM, there are plenty of exciting things to roll out in your city. Most of the game part is free to play, but for some special decorations or buildings, you'll need shellfish that will cost you actual money.
