The first format of the series changed after the first series, series one is a surreal sketch show and series two is a sitcom. It stars Noel Fielding, older brothers Michael Fielding, Tom Meaten, Dolly Wells, sometimes Rich Fulcher, Dave Brown and Richard Ayoard. The first episode premiered on E4 on January 26, 2012. The first music was written under the band's name Loose Tapestry by Noel Fielding and Kasabian's Sergio Pizzorno,[3] a close friend of Fielding.[3] The duo were joined for the second series by Kasabian touring member Tim Carter. Channel 4's website describes it as a psychedelic character-based comedy show half-shot and half-animated. The first series beged airing on 26 January 2012 and lasted seven episodes [Channel 4 announced in February 2012 that Noel Fielding's luxury comedy had been re-commissioned for the second series, which beged airing on E4 on 31 July 2014. The series format switched from sketch shows to sitcoms, mostly set in Hawaiian coffee shops. It features many new characters as well as the majority of characters from the first run. The series has been given subtitled Tales by Paint Hawaii. [5] Plot Each episode is structured around a plot involving Noel and his friends, accompanied by sketches featuring strange characters who are not usually connected to the main story. The first series is set in Noel's treehouse in the red and blue jungle, the second series of Tales Fromand Hawaii is set on a fictional island in Hawaii, and Noel runs a coffee shop. There are fewer sketches in the second series than in the first series, and most of the character sketches are set around the hawaiian island. In the second series, most episodes revolve around characters who have to complete tasks before the end of the show. CharacterCharacter Noel (series 1 -) Noel Fielding (playing an exaggerated version of himself) - Noel is portrayed as imaginative yet child-like irresponsible. In the first series, he lives in a red and blue jungle treehouse, wearing elaborate costumes and brightly colored face paint dresses. In the second series, he is the manager of luxury coffee, a coffee shop on the fictional island of Painted Hawaii. He no longer wears face paint and wears the same outfit, his luxury coffee uniform, in every episode of the second series. He is the lead singer of a band that plays the show's theme tune. Smooth (series 1-) (played by Michael Fielding) - Smooth is a hybrid of a grey human and anteater, who he considers himself mixed blood because his father is a human being and his mother is an anteater. He often functions as a voice of reason and maturity, often pointing to flaws in Noel's plans. He is shown playing bass guitar in a cast band and also playing double bass. Dolly (series 1-) (played by Dolly Wells) - Noel's friend and ex-girlfriend. She's a fashion model from Berlin who is obsessed with fashion, art and the latest cultural trends. She is the drummer of a cast band. Warhol (series 1-) Andy Warhol (played by Tom Meaten) - an exaggerated version of the famous painter who started out as Noel's cleaner in series one. In series two, he works in a coffee shop with Noel smoothly. He speaks and acts like a robot, mimicking a voice synthesizer, and he is often neurotic and unstable. Recurring jokes in the second series include meeting other famous artists, musicians and writers of the 20th century, including George Orwell and Yoko Ono. He plays keyboards in a cast band. All characters in the recurring character list are played by Noel Fielding unless otherwise specified. The Secret Peter (series 1-), Noel's landlord. He is a purple blob creature covered in multicoloured crystals, speaking and acting in stereotypical East London hob. He is named after the production company that makes the series. Roy Circles (series 1-), anthropomorphic chocolate finger biscuits (probably in the Guards) who worked as a PE teacher and once worked in the military. He suffers from post-traumatic stress disorder and often speaks about how depressed he is because his wife is dead. Sgt. Raymond Boombox (Series 1),an incompetent, obese New York cop with yellow skin and extensive facial hair and perms. In the first series, he tells the story of his past cases, and in the second series, he serves as law enforcement in Paint Hawaii. He is an old friend of Smooth's and likes reggae music. Gash (series 1-), there is a speaking wound on the left arm of Sergeant Raymond Boombox, often insulting the sergeant's failure. He likes to eat credit cards and argues with Boombox's second gashMichael Caine and Harry Dean Stanton make an impression. Hooper (series 1-) (voiced by Tom Meaten), assistant to Raymond Boombox. He never appears on the screen, but the boombox always screams at him. According to Gash, he was having an affair with Boombox's wife, and according to Boombox, he was almost gang-wrapped by sailors during an assignment in Miami after being mistaken for a. Tony Reason (series 1-), an anthropomorphic manta ta living in a fish tank across a bridge from luxury coffee. He works as a music producer and often speaks of his past experiences with famous musicians such as Jim Morrison and Bon Jovi. Todd Lagoon (series 1-) (played by Richard Ayoard), anthropomorphic hammerhead shark. He is a friend of Tony Reason's, a fellow music producer, and sometimes appears in the same fish tank as Tony. Joey Ramone (series 1, 2-), a stop-motion, plastic version of a punk rock star drawn with comically long legs, blue hair and no arms. Joey Ramone sketches parody Children's TV shows from the 1960s and 1970s, has a stop-motion character in front of the background of the illustration, passively comments on everything that happens with a mild-mannered narrator, and speaks for each character. When Paint Hawaii was made into a reality TV show, he was up for eviction back to reality. He rarely achieves his goals. Often returned to reality by passersby, he gets into some trouble for his paranoid behavior. His voice and manners are a parody of Don Quixote. His real name is revealed to be Sandy, he is gluten incotriable and he has a pet cat called Dream Tiger that he adopts as an improvised weapon when attacked by street thugs. Big Chief Woolabam Boum malacca way (series 1, 2-) (played by Tom Meaten), fantasy man sidekick. He is a Native American chief who likes rave music, wears brightly colored headdresses made of household items and claims to be able to watch up to 15 minutes in the future. He is a parody of Tonto. DonDirion (Series 1-), Anthropomorphic Lion. In the first series, he is held at the Rundown Zoo and is soon driven insanely by his small enclosure and poor living conditions. He kept framed photos of David Lee Ross, speaking as if he were a real person and calling him the king of Lions. He was killed in series one, but still reappeared in series two. Doo Rag (series 1-) (played by Michael Fielding), a man with a bowl haircut and mustache, wearing blue racing leather. He speaks with a soft American accent, and a small red race car occasionally drives across the white stripes of his hair. In the second series, Dourag works as a doctor at the 'Coolness Clinic' (where people go)Tested to see how cool they are) at Paint Hawaii. Other characters Lenny & Gavison (series 1), a French chef who cooks at high speed and go on a trip to the moon. NASA spokesman Tip Baker (series 1) sitting in trapeze on the edge of space (played by Rich Fulcher). Cameo appearance by the character of The Moon (series 1) Mighty Bouche. The album, titled Loose Tapestry Presents: Luxury Comedy Tapes, was released following the first series. Fielding and Pizzorno are back to create the soundtrack for series two with Kasabian guitarist Tim Carter. -One series song that appears as a [luxury comedy] on the album uses a Hawaiian variation of this theme song in series 2[6]. Reception series one received mixed reviews, offering both high praise and scathing criticism. The Guardian described it as a foggy neo-psychedelic riot that rilyed decades of memories of extensive TELEVISION entertainment since Banana Split. Stephen Armstrong told the Sunday Times: Fielding laughed like a lovely blend of Peter Gabriel, Sid Barrett, Samuel Beckett and Antonin Arteau in the TV era, and was anxious and hypnotized in the same measure. In these miserable times, bowie is as subversing as he appears in tops of the pops in dresses. Andy Johnson, of Purple Revolver, said: If anyone wanted to make TELEVISION for Salvador Dalí and Rene Magritte, Noel Fielding's luxury comedy would be it. The artwork, decadent use of color and reckless abandonment of the rules of form are a pleasure to watch. Meanwhile, the New Yorker said, the plot is too vague to follow, so there remains a ludicrous array of half-animated, semi-authentic characters spouting phrases that are thought to have been generated by random flicking through the dictionary. [9] The Scotsman said of Fielding: As an absurd comedian, he's not so painfully inspired and labored and I've been left bewildered about how anyone can fall for this fascinating rubbish, and continued, He's not in the right place. He thinks of himself as a mind-blowing surrealist who bursts with patently surprising ideas (sentimental chocolate fingers! yokk cops with speaking wounds!), but in reality, he's on a par with an entertaining office clown who persistently declares how angry he is. [10] Series 2 was rated 4/5 stars by The Daily Telegraph's Christopher Howes, who described it as the best viewing drunk. [11] The first season of international broadcasting in Australia began airing on ABC2 every Thursday at 10:30 p.m. from April 5, 2012.
