Chamberlain whisper drive plus garage door opener programming

Fancy garage image by Aaron Kohr of Fotolia.com As remote-controlled garage door openers became popular in the mid-1990s, Cadillac vehicles began to come with remote sensors to open those doors. These transmitters work much like hand-held remotes, and you can program them for almost any garage door. Using only the remote control, the programming only takes a few minutes and can be done from the inside or just outside your garage. Turn off your vehicle and press and hold the two outside buttons on the car's garage door opener. This will reset all previous or factory codes on the transmitter. Keep your garage opener at bay about 2 inches from your Cadillac's system. Press and hold the button you want to program on your Cadillac system and the open button on your remote control at the same time. Release both buttons when the Red Indicator Light in the Cadillac system starts flashing quickly. Press and hold the Homelink drive button on your Cadillac system to complete the programming. If the light stays solid, it's over. If it continues to flash, continue with the following steps. Press the smart button on your garage door engine. This is usually located near the antenna wire at the back of the device. Press and hold the Homelink button on your Cadillac system within 30 seconds of pressing the smart button. Release the button after 3 seconds and the indicator light should flash solidly. If not, repeat this step up to three times until the light is solid and the programming is complete. Many people find that they need to program the garage door opener on a HomeLink system that came with their car. Maybe you bought the used car and don't have a manual, or you have a manual, but it's hard to keep up. In both cases, it is not difficult to program the garage door opener. It should not take more than 5-10 minutes, as long as you follow each step carefully. Having help will make the process even faster. The receiver, portable transmitter and car transmitter must all be in good working order to ensure success when you program the garage door opener. The HomeLink system is available on a wide range of cars, and it can also be purchased as an after-sales product. It is compatible with almost all garage door opening systems, including Liftmaster, Chamberlain, Craftsman, Genie, Overhead Door, Allstar, and Wayne Dalton. The main requirement is that the garage door opener 288-433 MHz. You should be able to find the frequency of your device at the back of the portable transmitter. To program the garage door opener, it will be necessary to lift and lower the door. So, to keep the process safe, make sure children and pets stay away from the garage. Once you're ready to start, follow these steps: Always start with a new battery in the portable transmitter. If you're not sure how old the battery is, go ahead and replace the key to the accessory position (ACC) before you start programming the garage door opener. For programming for the first time (or if you think the garage door opener has already been programmed), press the two outer buttons of the transmitter for about 20 seconds, until the light starts to flash. On the transmitter, hold the button to be programmed until it starts to flash slowly (20-30 seconds). Keep holding the button down for the next step. Take the portable transmitter in your other hand and direct it to the flashing light about two inches away. Press the operating button on the handheld device. Once the light starts to flash faster, the frequency has been entered into the HomeLink transmitter. Release both buttons. This step is easier with a help. You will need a ladder and, most likely, a flashlight. On the garage door opening receiver (i.e. the engine inside the garage), press the drive button (also known as the smart or learn button). The button may not be labeled, but it will have a small light next to it that flashes when the button is pressed. (Note that if the indicator light stays on continuously, the programming is complete and the garage door opener must work.) If the indicator light flashes (or if it flashes briefly before continuously turning on), you have 30 seconds to take the next step (which is why it goes faster with a helper). In the car, with the key always turned towards ACC, press the button you programmed earlier on the car transmitter for three seconds. Remove your finger from the button, then press again for another three seconds. If the garage door hasn't moved yet, press the button for another three seconds. Once the door was in motion, the garage door opener was programmed. If your garage door opener doesn't seem to respond to programming efforts, then unplug the receiver for a minute and then try again. Make sure your new battery in the portable transmitter is installed correctly. If you still can't properly program the garage door opener, call homelink customer service (1-800-355-3515). If problems persist, you may need to purchase a new garage door opener. Opener.
