Zip codes and postcodes are numeric codes used to facilitate mail delivery, and area codes are used to determine a geographic area when calling a phone number. Rather than scrolling through a large, inept phone book, you can find and verify zip codes and area codes on the web fairly easily. If you have an address or partial address, you can find the zip code search for USPS, a tool on the U.S. Postal Service website. You can also search by city or state, or find all cities that are part of a specific zip code. The international postal codes page, run by Columbia University, has an extensive index of domestic and international postal codes, in addition to postal abbreviations, policies and best practices. You can also use different search engines to find zip code. For example, if you want Google to search for a zip code by address, enter what you know about the address to see a map of the postcode location included. You can even enter something like the South Laurel MD zip code to see all of them for this area (and find links that show the full list of zip code for this region). You can also enter a zip code to see the geographic location it belongs to, as well as a map and other related web results, such as cities that use that zip code. If you don't submit a zip code at the end of your search, Google may display unrelated information. For example, search 90210 reveals information about a TV series, while the 90210 zip code displays zip code information. You can find a zip code with DuckDuckGo, too. Enter the zip code and DuckDuckGo will return the map, postcode location, weather, real estate and other relevant web results. A postcode search in Bing brings back what the city/locale relates to, maps and local attractions such as grocery stores, hotels and movie theaters. If you enter a partial address, Bing completes it for you and reveals your zip code. As with zip code, you can use the search engine to search for a pre-code by searching for a city. To do the opposite and find out which part of the country the front code is related to, just enter the front code in the search engine. To search for a pre-code with Google, enter the name of the city and state you're looking for, followed by the words area code. You'll usually find what you need. For international listings, search for a phrase like Kenyan calling code, and you'll get an informative answer with the numbers you'll need to call this nation. Enter your city and state in the new Bing search, and more than likely you'll see Google-like results that show you the pre-formula at the very top of the results. The same applies to international dialed codes. Another way to find the front code online is with Wolfram which bills itself as computational intelligence. This data-based search engine doesn't display results like the others listed on this page, but with a little digging, you can find some unique information about cities and states that you may not find on another search engine. Using Yahoo to find the front code is similar to using Google: Just enter the city and the name of the state followed by the front code, and you will get an instant result. Finding international codes is not as easy with Yahoo as it is with Google, but you can, of course, still use Yahoo to find other websites that can provide you with this information. Quite a few sites specialize in finding directional numbers that a simple search engine query may not detect. You can use these free resources to find almost any area code and/or country call in the world: Area codes: Area code functions from mostly the United States, although other countries are scattered here as well. BT Phonebook: Use this page to find area codes in UK country codes: This site will ask you which country you are calling from and to which you want to assign the correct country code, area code, or both. LincMad: Postcode MAP, which offers a visual representation of area codes in the U.S. and Canada.AllAreaCodes.com: Like LincMad, you get a complete map of the area code in the U.S. and Canada, as well as links to lists of area codes, details of area codes (e.g. wireless or landline, operator when it was introduced), search engines, and lists of area codes. Thanks for let us know! Tell us why! The George Diebold/Getty Images 578 area code is one of the unassigned codes for the North American Numbering Plan, which includes the United States, Canada, some Caribbean nations and U.S. territories. Using a 578-digit phone number is an attempt to disguise the source of the call. Area codes in the NANP were first used in the early 1950s last year, using 86 of the possible 152 area codes. As the number of phone users has increased over the decades, additional area code has been washed to complement needs in regions of the continent with higher density. For example, area code 917 overlaps area code 212 and 718 in the New York City area to accommodate the significant increase in phone users there. Currently, pre-dial code 543 is not used in North America. The closest existing area codes to this number are 541 for Eugene, Oregon, and 551 for Newark, New Jersey. Area codes are managed and processed by the North American Numbered Numbers Association or NANPA. What people usually call area codes are officially known as NPA codes. Any set of three-digit digits (000-999) is theoretically the area code, but currently only 316 of these codes are used. Except Some codes are stored as special tags of some kind. For example, 800 front feels are used for free calls where the recipient recipient for the call and not for the caller. Ugurhan Betin/Getty Images Pre-season number 668 is not a valid pre-season in the United States. However, this is a valid waiter number in Oujda, located northeast of Morocco. Calls that are received from pre-bill code 668 can be traced back to telemarketers, bill collectors and inspectors. A 668-point number is used to disguise a valid phone number, which makes it impossible to pinpoint a call or track the business location of a call. Phone calls and text messages received from this pre-tax number can be reported and added to the list of fake addresses. Scam artists are also known to use invalid phone numbers. Numbers.
