Does that sound too good to be true? Well, let me assure you, this is the best tool you can find on the Internet. NextNext Sanjuanito is a very happy musical rhythm and can be heard at every party in the village, in which each of the participants seeks to show with his original steps, because the important thing is that everyone enjoys the party. Dancing to the sound of San Juanito, it is typical of Ecuador's indigenous and mixed races. It can be enjoyed by people of all ages, from children to the elderly. Music is the art that provides the environment to know the feelings of its students, their differences, and to educate their sensitivity. Learning is understood as people's understanding and participation in cultural activities. The aim of the school is to fulfill and promote social interaction, respect for human rights, interculturalism and social development, whether through dance, painting, music or artistic and cultural expression. Which will allow the school to approach educational inclusion. Art is one of the warmest and most sensitive means we can use to achieve educational inclusion. The arts teach children that their personal stamp is important and that there are various answers to questions and various solutions to problems. In the arts, diversity and diversity are at the heart of the world. To walk to an inclusive school, where each student's differences are valued and respected, the primary goal is to respect each student's rhythms. Music has been, is and will be one of the greatest educational tools for teachers for its multiple benefits, as well as a machine of dynamic activities, allowing high enjoyment of students through this educational resource. This analyzes the foundations that make music a tool for inclusion. It provides multiple benefits and develops spirituality, hearing, sensations and motor skills in children. In its early years, children are absolute recipients of all kinds of stimuli and with the feeling of music in such a intense way, it can exert a very strong and positive influence, use it properly and never see it as an obligation and not know how to choose it for every moment. It improves memory capacity, attention and concentration, thus insinuating intelligence, thus also with music the child's body expression is more stimulated. Promote acoustics and make them more social, developing creativity and tossing fantasy imagination In combination with dance, it stimulates the senses, balance and muscle growth in children, adapting their body movement to rhythms, thus also helping to enhance and improve their coordination. Let us not forget that music plays a very fundamental role in the process of teaching and learning students, so that teachers, educational institutions, parents and health staff need to know the breadth and benefits of music to children. Music is expression, emotion, melody and rhythm. When we encourage it, we must not forget that first it is our thing, the national, traditional gender that represents a people and a nation, one of the best ways to promote it is to make children listen, since they are in the womb. Native.
