They are as beautiful and fabulous as they would be straight out of a fairy tale. Show off your advanced cooking skills to customers and let the fun get started! This game is great, but I have one problem that causes me a lot of pain in getting new restaurants and levels. It's gems, they're hard to get and just happen to be the main way to unlock things. I don't think it's that bad if you drive except for the fact that you can just get their settlement (which can last forever depending on your level) and go to the casino and spend money to get a disappearing chance of getting it. I've been trying to upgrade my stuff, repeating the last level at my default restaurant that gives the most money and experience, but I'm getting a few gems to get what I need. I think the amount of gems needed to level things up has to be lower because not many people are going to spend money on a game they just want to play in their spare time. Maybe 5 gems max out at the cost of new customizations. The amount of gems for buying restaurants I feel are fine, but if you have willing to change it I think a maximum of 20 gems would be good. I also think that achievements would give you some gems as well, it's not fair to get a lot of coins and not be able to use them when you don't have enough gems that are also needed for upgrades. I think achievements should give at least one or two gems every time you complete one. Thank you for reading. This game is great and I absolutely love playing it, but I'm seriously rethinking to find a new cooking game to play. Gems are basically what runs the whole game and are very hard to come by. You only get to sign up every day (only after a week doing so daily) and then you only get 2 every day, or a settlement that can take quite some time depending on your level and limiting upgrades, or trying your luck in the casino and eventually buying. Basically, you have to buy them. You get tons of coins on coins, but can't do anything with them except play casino or go shopping for a new restaurant (along with 20-30 gems). There must be a way to buy gems with coins or more ways to make coins easier. I bought over 1,200 gems at the sale when you can buy 300 for $9.99, but it still didn't get me very far. I've already unlocked two completely different worlds with new restaurants and I'm still stuck playing at the same level because I don't have enough gems to level any of my food/kitchen equipment or the interior of my restaurant lobby. Some of the simple upgrades for kitchen stuff take up to 20 gems just to upgrade one level out of three for each ingredient and cooking item. Please seriously consider some changes in this because I do not want to stop playing, but I will be forced like my son because of the lack of gems. I don't want to spend money all the time just to be able to play it. To be honest, it's one of my favorite games on my iPad and it's really fun. And one thing I love is that you cook too much and it's a challenge. But when I unlock a new restaurant I get so excited, but it cost a lot of money. And sometimes you have to remade the levels, so if you get this game you have to work harder. And remember, you have to remade the levels sometimes and all that. But I'm glad that in a game at some level you get an automatic cooking machine it's really useful if a lot of times you have as many customers, I think it's much faster when you have Max upgraded for hotdogs or burgers. I highly recommend and think you really should get it when you have your gems. Save because it is really useful if you want to play the game a lot and you really want to do you like upgrades and want to unlock new sites as far as I had it I did not have a lot of money but now I have a lot because of the machine. This game has so many things and I'm really happy because it they have a lot of ads and it's really realistic to bunch like in real life. But I feel like cupcakes should be like you could spend money on them both for upgrades because of bacteria and so I don't think so. This is my review and I really love the game, please get it if you have a chance. The developer, Nordcurrent UAS, did not provide details about its privacy practices and Apple's data manipulation.
